HOAXING THE DOCTOR

ILLNESS OFTEN SIMULATED BY SAILORS AND SOLDIERS.

An Old Army Surgeon Tells of the Tricks Attempted to Mislead the Physician. How Doctors Expose the Frauds of Their Shamming Patients.

"If any one thinks that all a doctor has to do is to cure diseases, he is very much mistaken," said an old army surgeon in talking to a reporter the other day. "One might think that with all the sickness and suffering in the world everybody would be glad to stay well when they had the chance, but the fact is that some of the hardest work a doctor has to do is to tell whether his patients are sick at all, or only willfully deceiving him. This is particularly the case in the practice of army and naval surgeons, where the incentive to deception is greatest, though there is still considerable of it met with in private practice and in the examining boards of the pension office, where a disability is a premium that the applicant would often pay a good price for if it could be obtained in that way.

"But the most common place to meet with simulated diseases used to be in the British army and navy in the days of the press and conscript gangs, where it took more of a doctor's time to weed out the shamming patients than to cure the sick ones. The simulation of disease in the British army once assumed such proportions that it was punished with heavy penalites, none of which, however, included discharge from the service, for that was just what the deceivers wanted.

"The malingerers," as they were termed, had regular secret prescriptions for simulating disease, and some of them ran fearful risks and underwent tortures in practicing upon themselves with drugs, such as hellebore, to effect temporary derangement of the heart or other organs. The physicians had to be equally crafty to detect the simulations, and so this branch of medicine became almost a science in itself, and though not now of such importance has remained an interesting study ever since.

"A man who is bent upon making himself appear ill and disabled, either to secure a pension or a discharge from the service, will simulate anything from chronic rheumatism to intermittent fever, and it is hard to tell the imitation from the genuine. There is one case on record where a man assumed lateral curvature of the spine, so that his arms touched the ground when he attempted to walk, and remained in this position for 18 months, returning to his normal position as soon as discharged without apparently any ill effects from his long distortion. I myself once knew of a case where a soldier simulated epileptic fits till the suggestion of using the actual cautery on him was made during one of his paroxysms, when he recovered with surprising rapidity.

"Soldiers have almost as long a list of diseases which they simulate as have doctors of the diseases they cure. A common one in the southern countries, such as India and Africa, where there is continual intense light, is 'night blindness.' This is a real disease that will often temporarily disable half of a command and consequently is very commonly feigned to secure immunity from duty. One of the simple ways of detecting the feigned disease when it refuses to yield to treatment is to say that exercise is necessary for the health of the patients and have them escorted to posts for guard duty by a comrade and left there for their full term of duty.

"Blindness is a very common feigned affection, and to make it appear real drugs are used by the malingerers to dilate the pupil and otherwise give the eye an unnatural appearance. Stramonium, snuff, belladonna and other substances are used, the effects of which it is impossible to tell at first from real amurosis. Even when confined in a hospital ward the men will sometimes conceal drugs about the bedclothes and use them periodically when they think they are not observed.

"Watching sometimes detects the men in this, and rigorous isolation where no drugs can be obtained follows. But I had a case once where a man was so clever at concealing belladonna that we had to put him in a straight jacket for a couple of days, at the end of which time, being unable to tamper with his eyes, they resumed their normal condition.

"Deafness is also frequently simulated and is very difficult of detection, some sharpers with whom I have been thrown in contact assuming even the uncertain, stupid expression of countenance habitual to a very deaf person. One of the favorite tricks of the medical profession in detecting imposition of this sort is to begin conversation with the subject in a very loud tone and gradually lower the voice, keeping up a rapid fire of question and answer on some indifferent subject where the shammer will unsuspectingly continue to reply to questions after the voice has dropped much below an ordinary tone. One case I met with defied all effort at detection till we got a comrade to tap on the man's window at night and call him very softly, when he immediately responded.

"Insanity is one of the commonest methods of attempted deception, but it is more difficult of success, as few sailors or soldiers are sufficiently good actors to keep up to their parts without either overdoing it or making some false move not at all characteristic of their supposed form of trouble. Melancholia and furious mania are the forms of insanity most frequently feigned, and it has been not uncommon to have persistently simulated insanity develop finally into the real disease.

"One curious case that I recollect was in Washington during the war. A soldier who had been sent to the hospital with a slight fever recovered his health, but with his reason apparently hopelessly deranged. It was simply a mild form of mania, and the fellow sat for days at an open window in the ward, fishing out of the window with a bent pin and a piece of cotton. Nothing could be done with him, and his discharge was finally made out and brought to him. He paid no attention to its reading, but when the physician was gone, I was afterward informed, he hooked the document to his fishing line, and, throwing it out of the window, drew it gravely in, and, putting it in his pocket, remarked, 'There, you, I've been fishing for you for six weeks, and now I've got you!'"—Washington Post.

Put Them Off Till Tomorrow.

Some things are very much better put off until tomorrow. Among them are the reprimand you mean to deliver, the defiance you mean to express, the resignation you mean to hand in to a heartless employer. Put off doing these, and you'll probably discover that you don't have to do them.

In 1892 the new postoffice of Purgatory was established in Virginia, with George Godbethere as postmaster.

THE HAWK KNEW HIM.

How a Trained Bird That Had Deserted a Ship Was Recovered.

"I don't know that the ancient sport of falconry has ever been in vogue in this country," said Captain L. E. Metcalf of Montreal. "It is rather odd, considering how fond many Americans are of copying everything that is done on the other side of the water.

"When I was in England several years ago, I obtained possession of a peregrine hawk, which I brought with me on my return home. During the voyage across the Atlantic it was my custom to allow the bird the use of its wings every day, taking care to give it a hearty meal beforehand, that it might not be tempted to dart off after some passing seagull and lose sight of the ship. In spite of the precaution, the bird was missing one day. Night came on, and still the hawk did not appear, and I made up my mind that I would never see my pet again. Soon after my arrival here in glancing over a Halifax paper, I noticed a paragraph stating that the captain of a fishing schooner who resided at that point had brought a fine hawk into port, which he said had suddenly come aboard his vessel during his late voyage. I at once jumped to the conclusion that it must be my falcon and lost no time in setting out for Halifax to investigate. On finding the captain who had the bird I learned that he had no intention of giving up his prize, saying that it was easy for any one to claim property, but it was another thing to prove the ownership of it.

"My object was to recover the hawk rather than to pick a quarrel with the pugnacious sailor, so I curbed my anger and proposed to settle the question by experiment. To this the captain at last consented. The test was this: I was to be admitted to an interview with the bird in the presence of witnesses. Since in the possession of the captain the hawk had stood on its dignity and repelled any attempts at familiarity. If now it should show any signs of recognition toward me and attachment, especially if it should play with the buttons on my coat, the captain was to give up his claim.

"The bird was accordingly brought in. In an instant she dashed at my shoulder, showing every sign of recognition and delight. She rubbed her head against my cheek and playfully champed the buttons on my coat with her beak. The witnesses rendered a verdict in my favor, and, to do him justice, the captain willingly gave up his claim, and I bore my pet home in triumph."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

IRELAND'S RUINED CASTLES.

The Green Isle Is Rich In These Ancient and Interesting Landmarks.

Ireland is rich in castles and ruins. One of the most ancient of these is the Grianan of Aileach, a ruin that stands on the heights above the Swilly, and which was, centuries ago, the stronghold of the northern princes.

Around this fort many battles were fought. Hosts swarmed over the adjacent hills or fled down the river, and in those deadly engagement scenes were enacted that often cast a gloom over the whole country and wrecked the social life of Erin.

As England gained power she strove again and again to exert her influence over the sister isle, but warriors like Strongbow spurned a "foreign" supremacy, and when the battle went against them found a safe retreat in the bogs, the valleys and the hills of that lonely country, only to sally forth to avenge themselves anew upon their enemies.

The rock of Cashel, Dunluce castle and many other spots were the centers of these fearful combats.

The picturesque ruins of Sligo abbey, built by Maurice Fitzgerald in A. D. 1253, and the more imposing proportions of Donegal castle are silent witnesses of a progress that proceeded steadily in spite of these disturbances.

That unhappy land, with all its beauty and its early advantages, has been the scene of endless struggles.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Horned Sea Serpent.

The horned sea serpent, otherwise "the Pearl island monster," excited more curiosity among scientific men than any other marine snake of modern years. It was seen late in 1883 by Capt. A. Seymour and others of the officers and crew of the New England boat Hope On while they were lying off the Pearl islands, 40 or 50 miles from Panama, watching for whales. Captain Seymour describes the creature as being 40 or 50 feet in length, with a very large and fine horselike head, having two twisted unicorn shaped horns protruding from near the ears. Besides being provided with mane, ears and horns, this Pearl island monster also had legs, four in number, much resembling large, flattened, double jointed flippers. His skin was of a dull bronze hue, profusely speckled with large black spots, and a tail which all hands agree in saying was forked or split for at least ten feet back from the point. It was seen on two different days, and if whales had not been sighted at about the same time an effort would have been made to capture it. The accounts of Captain Seymour and those of his men agree in every essential particular, even to the approximate size of the huge creature's great lidless eyes. It is important to note in this connection that the officers and men of the Pacific Mail steamers which ply the same waters have frequently seen the reptile, but never so closely as did those aboard the Hope On.—St. Louis Republic.

German Penny Dreadfuls.

The "penny dreadful" is not unknown, as it seems, in Germany, where it bears the characteristic title of "shudder romance." It is not sold in the shops, as among us, but is carried about from street to street and village to village by an army of colporteurs. The Berlin Tagliche Rundschau asserts that there are no fewer than 43,000 shudder romance colporteurs who earn their bread by the sale of the weekly numbers of these novels in Germany and Austria. It estimates the regular subscribers at about 2,000,000! The novels of crime and horror are not complete in one number, like those in our comparatively innocent penny novelettes, but usually run about 150 weekly numbers and rarely conclude in less space than 100 numbers.—Westminster Gazette.

No Chance For Such an Impression.

"That is a wonderful work of nature," said the man who was visiting Niagara falls for the first time.

"Pretty big," replied the hotel keeper.

"I don't see how anybody could contemplate it without feeling terribly insignificant."

"Well, I suppose a good many people do feel that way. But, you see, most of the people who stop at this house are brides and grooms."—Washington Star.

Wire hairpins were first used in 1545 and were invented in England. Before that time the hair was held in place by little wooden skewers.

VERY LIVELY CORPSE

THE TIN PLATE INDUSTRY ACTIVE AND VIGOROUS.

Many New Plants In Course of Erection, Notwithstanding the Republican Wail That the "Avalanche of Free Trade" had Swept It Away.

The Republican din of weeping, wailing and lamenting over prostrate industry, silent factories and moribund trade is mostly inarticulate. Very little of it is specific or intelligible.

But now and then a stentorian voice rises above the general outcry proclaiming that one industry is dead, really and truly dead, and calling upon all men to mourn its departure.

This industry which we are assured has been done to death by Democratic daggers is the tin plate industry. A Cincinnati mourner lifted up his voice a few days ago and proclaimed that the "avalanche of free trade" had "swept down" and overwhelmed this poor infant industry. "All the plants in America are closed," he shouted and then grew inarticulate with sobbing.

Before the reader gives way to uncontrollable grief let him attend to one or two facts, which must be facts, because they have been stated in the columns of McKinley newspapers. First observe that the Cincinnati announcement of the assassination of the tin plate industry was made one morning, and the very next morning numerous McKinley papers printed a dispatch from Pittsburg stating that within a week ground would be broken near that city for a new tin plate factory with a capacity of 60 tons a day; also that another factory was to be built by another company in the vicinity of this one, with a capacity of 30 tons a day.

Next, observe that recently The Iron Age made the following statements: "The Atlanta Steel and Tin Plate company is making rapid progress in the erection of its works." "One of the sheet mills at Canal Dover, O., has been converted into a tin mill, and it is reported that a six mill plant will soon follow." "The addition to the works of the American Tin Plate company at Elwood, Ind., is now completed and in operation. We understand that the employees have been informed that there will be no reduction of wages." And one week later, the very day when the Cincinnati wail went forth, the same trade paper made no less than seven announcements of the erection of new tin plate plants and the starting up of old ones which had been temporarily closed.

All this would seem to indicate that the tin plate industry is a singularly lively and active corpse.

It is proper to state, however, that there was an error in the Cincinnati assertion that the "free trade avalanche" had overtaken this industry, for it still enjoys a protective duty of 1.2 cents per pound. That is 1 cent less than the McKinley duty, but it seems to be enough to keep the infant alive and vigorously kicking. The reduction is equal to $1.08 per box, and consumers are getting the benefit of nearly all of it, for the price has fallen $1 per box, or about 20 per cent, while the manufacturers are going right on very much as though the Democratic congress had not murdered their industry.

And now will the Republican hired mourners be good enough to descend to particulars once more and mention some other industry that has been exterminated by Democratic assassins? If they fail to respond, people will suspect that the rest of the corpses which the Reeds and McKinley are pickling in their briny tears are as lively as the tin plate cadaver.—Chicago Herald.

Phenomenal Increase In Business.

Comptroller of the Currency Eckels, in an address to the Bankers' club at Chicago, recently said: "The last call for a statement from the national banks was made on Oct. 2. It showed an increase in the reserve cities since July 18 of $38,000,000 of loans and discounts. We estimate that, in addition to this, there was an increase of $20,000,000 in outside cities. It was not confined to the financial centers, but seemed to come from every section of the country, indicating a very general and healthy revival. Compared with the statement of one year ago, however, the increase is phenomenal—more than $150,000,000. All this indicates a restoration of public confidence and more liberal investments."

Beneficent Results.

Reduction in the prices of commodities such as is effected through reduction in the tariff duties increases the ability to purchase. Increased consumption increases the profits of the producer, increases the value of his plant and enables him to pay better wages. These are the beneficent results of a wise and thoroughly considered tariff reduction. Decrease in the cost of production goes hand in hand with increase in the value of the manufacturing plant.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

They Had Reason to Be Scared.

Benjamin Harrison says the cause of the hard times was the fact that people got scared. They had good reason to be scared at the policy of the party which Mr. Harrison represents. If they had not been scared, they would not have overthrown it and consequently would not be witnessing a revival of business prosperity.—St. Paul Morning Call.

Harrison's Boom Is Away Off.

Mr. Harrison more ably misrepresents the causes of the now disappearing business depression than Mr. McKinley does, but the Harrison boom is still away back yonder.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Illogical Republican Logic.

The new tariff is in full force and effect. Wool is no cheaper and sugar no dearer. There are blowholes in Republican logic.—Chicago Dispatch.

Elizabeth is getting ahead. She has adopted an ordinance compelling the use of a subway for electrical wires on the main streets.

PLEA FOR PROHIBITION.

Orator Wooley Blames Christians for Not Suppressing the Liquor Traffic.

The meeting yesterday afternoon in the series of the W. C. T. U. was the most largely attended of all, Music Hall being packed to the doors. After the congregation sang, a quartette composed of Messrs. Martin, Jessup, Allen and Moore rendered a selection. Rev. W. E Honeyman led in prayer, and then the speaker of the day, John G. Wooley of Chicago, was introduced.

He made a stirring address on various phases of the temperance and prohibition question, dwelling especially on the neglect of Christians to put an end to the liquor traffic. An eloquent speaker, thoroughly enthusiastic in his cause, a man who could draw pathetic pictures and denounce the originators of misery, Mr. Wooley held the closest attention of his audience for an hour. His plea for prohibition was put in wonderfully effective words.

UNION COUNTY HUNT.

Development of the Plainfield Riding Club.

The Crescent Avenue Rink has been rented for seven months by the Riding Club. The entire floor is to be removed, and the sidings are to be lowered. The arena will have an earth flooring, so all the dread of breaking through will be avoided. The building will be in readiness by Nov. 15.

The club has a greatly increased membership, and as Mr. Holly has them fairly well drilled into the requirements of school riding and military deportment, they can this Winter indulge in more fancy riding, hurdling, etc., and so perfect the club to do justice to their leader and to the new name which has been suggested, the Union County Hunt. Plainfield may expect soon to see these equestrians in red coats, rushing across the fields taking fences and ditches, following the hounds, with reynard in the lead.

J. P. Mosher of Alfred, N. Y., manager of The Sabbath Recorder, was in Plainfield yesterday attending the meeting of the Tract Society in the Seventh Day Baptist Church. He visited his sister, Mrs. Eugene Lorton of West Fifth street, and was a welcome caller at The Press office this morning.

Many hearts grieve over the death of Peter Vandeventer, son of William, who died yesterday at the home of his parents, 336 East Fifth street, after a brief illness. He was a popular young man, and will be sadly missed. His pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, and Sunday-school teacher Frank Morse, were with him constantly during his illness, and his acceptance of the Saviour leaves a blessed memory and example.

The Pearls of the Gates.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich of the Congregational Church preached a special sermon to young men yesterday morning. He took as his text Revelations 21:21. He spoke of the temptations of young men in the world and in Plainfield and called a pure mind, honor, and a wish to serve God and fellow men the pearls at the gates of the heavenly city.

BOND ISSUE CERTAIN.

The Government Will Seek to Raise $50,000,000.

There will be a new issue of Government bonds this week.

This was learned this morning from John A. Stewart, President of the United States Trust Company, who has returned from Washington, where he went to visit President Cleveland last week.

The amount of the issue will be $50,000,000. This was the amount that was named in the predictions regarding the issue last week.

The date of the issue has not been learned, but the bonds will probably be offered within two or three days.

Charming Birthday Party.

A very pleasant party took place Saturday afternoon at 314 East Fifth street, the occasion being Miss Florence May Morrison's tenth birthday. She and her many little friends had a very enjoyable time. They all remembered her kindly in giving her both lovely and costly gifts. Those who enjoyed the afternoon with her were: Anna and Harvey Morrison, Etta Havens, Bertrand Brandon, Alice Morgan, Carrie Mulford, Etta Randolph, Nellie Machutte, Anna Clarkson, Clyde Slater, Belle Williams, Florence May Morrison, Elma Hays Morrison, Clara and Hazel Martin, Grace Ulrich, Martha Codington, Nellie Giles, Frances Ketcham, Juliet Hill, Mollie Templer, Edith Robinson, Edna Moore, Emma Straton, Mrs. Brandon, Miss Hays and Mrs. J. Killed by a Snowball.

Alfred Carpenter, aged 15, a son of John C. Carpenter, the President of the Norfolk and New Brunswick Hosiery Company, was struck on the head by a snowball, at St. Paul School, Concord, N. H. He fell insensible, and died a few hours later without regaining consciousness. His father learned of the affair and left New Brunswick for Concord at once.

Restored.

A six-year-old Italian boy, cold and crying, was found in Washington Park at 9:30 this morning by a kind-hearted butcher who took him to Chief Marshal Pangborn's house. After he was thawed out he said his name was Bennie Richman. His father had taken him to a store at 7 and then sent him home. The lost boy's residence was finally found to be 129 Duer street.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Climax Gun Club will have a regular monthly shoot Thursday.

—Postmaster Hetfield and staff have been finely photographed at Monfort's.

—Mrs. Mary J. Laing, a widow negress of West Fourth street, died today.

—Classes in arithmetic and bookkeeping will meet in the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening.

—The Plainfield Bowling Club will play the C. Y. M. L. on the Trade Temple alleys tomorrow night.

—George Taylor, expert in hot-air heating and tinning, has started in business for himself in Dunellen.

—If the Sabbath Recorder plant comes to Plainfield a part of the Babcock Building will probably be used for it.

—John Emmons's horse ran home from Mr. McCutchen's house down Washington avenue Saturday and wrecked a wheel against a tree.

—Chief Grant thinks the description of one of the negro assailants of the Dunhams tallies with James Johnson, who has for weeks been eluding arrest on other charges.

—The entertainment to be given by the Woman's Relief Corps Wednesday evening, in Post 73 rooms, was rehearsed Saturday evening. It gives promise of great success.

—This season reminds householders of odd rooms that are hard to heat. The new oil heater stove sold by Gavett is an effectual remedy. It is inexpensive and handsome, and easy to operate.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

MAY COME TO PLAINFIELD.

Talk of Moving the Sabbath Recorder Plant from Alfred Centre.

A regular monthly business meeting of The American Sabbath Tract Society was held in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church yesterday. The principal matter for consideration was the moving of the printing plant of the society from Alfred Centre to Plainfield or New York. No definite decision was made.

The publications of the denomination which are now being issued from Alfred Centre include The Sabbath Recorder, weekly; The Evangel and Sabbath Outlook, weekly; The Peculiar People, a monthly paper for the Jews; and The Helping Hand, a Sabbath-school quarterly. Pamphlets and circulars and miscellaneous printed matter are also published there. The governing board of the society has had its headquarters in Plainfield many years, and the moving of the plant will make the transaction of business much more convenient.

Saturday Nights at the Boys Club.

People who pass through North avenue every Saturday evening hear merry sounds proceeding from the building over the way from The Daily Press office. The members of the Boys Club are holding their weekly entertainment, and indulging their souls with singing and good-natured fun. Last Saturday night Mr. Marks, the superintendent, had engaged a man to entertain the club with tricks and sleight-of-hand performances, but much to the disappointment of the 73 boys who gathered to see him, the entertainer did not appear at the appointed time. The evening was not lost, however, for there were plenty of songs to sing, "Comrades", "Suwanee River", "Hail Columbia", and so on, and with Miss Erskine at the piano and Mr. Duxbury to lead, things went finely. Then one of the boys gave an exhibition of clog-dancing and played "Home Sweet Home" on the harmonica which he had recently purchased with money saved in the Benefit Society. A comic solo from Mr. Marks was received with much applause. The club thought they would like to hear a good short story, and so Mr. Tiffany told of the brave deeds of an engineer and fireman who saved the people of a burning western town W. B. Wadsworth read an account of how the first Boys Club came to be formed, and the evening closed with the singing of "America" by all assembled.

These Saturday entertainments are getting to be more and more popular, and it is proposed to keep them up through the Winter, varying the programmes as opportunity may offer.

New Jersey Whist League.

The first game for the New Jersey Whist League trophy was played at the residence of L. J. Briggs, Fanwood, Wednesday, Nov. 7.

The contesting clubs were the Park Club of Plainfield represented by Messrs. Rogers, Howell, McCutchen, Townsend, Drayton and Horne; and the Fanwood Whist Club represented by Messrs. Kieb, Bates, F. W. Quereau, J. McCarthy, L. J. Briggs. The Fanwoods were victorious.

The other clubs are the Montclair, Elizabeth Athletic, New Jersey Athletic, and Newark clubs. The next games will be played Nov. 21, the Fanwoods at Newark, the Parks at Plainfield with the N. J. A. C., and Montclairs at Elizabeth.

Young Men Speak.

It being the week of prayer for young men, Rev. Cornelius Schenck preached a special sermon in Trinity Reformed Church yesterday morning, which was specially touching in its reference to the death of Peter Van Deventer.

In the evening A. B. Clemens spoke on "Work for Young Men", E. E. Anthony on "Opportunities and Temptations of Young Men", and Fred E. Smith on "Why Young Men Should be Christians". B. F. La Vere's cornet-playing was a help to the singing.

His Senses to Be Tested.

STORIES OF FAMOUS PEOPLE.

Notes About Royal Personages and Others of Interest.

Into her guest chamber the Duchess of Westminster puts a curious Swiss clock on which appears the printed notice: "Please do not touch," and she says that of all the men who have occupied the chamber only one failed to ask the reason for the prohibition. The exception was Mr. Fawcett, the late Postmaster General. Mr. Fawcett was blind.

Kwang Hsu, the present Chinese Emperor—who is in danger of losing his job—is 23 years old, with a pale, oval face and lustrous black eyes. Pictures of him look as if an amiable girl might have sat for him.

Gov. and Mrs. Waite, of Colorado, live in a boarding-house and take no interest in social matters; but Mrs. Waite is even more anxious than the Governor to impress upon the public that they are apostles of a great reform. The boarding-house clause itself is enough to make Easterners afraid of equal rights.

After much labor and many alterations Alma Tadema has finished and is self-satisfied with his ambitious magnum opus, a picture of a festival in ancient Rome. A Berlin dealer has already bought it, the price being $100,000.

Emperor William never rides any but his own horses, which are trained specially to be guided by pressure of the knees on either side. This is necessary to His Majesty, for when his sword arm is occupied the left arm being weak is quite incapable of controlling his horse. His horses are beautiful creatures and trained to obey his voice and even a gentle pull at the hairs of the mane.

The Czar's physician, Dr. Zacharin, is a man of many eccentricities. He is fond of wearing a dressing gown and the big boots of a peasant when he attends his royal patient, and his unconventional ways profoundly shock the courtiers. He refused to occupy apartments on the third floor of the palace because his apartments at home were on the ground floor, and he declined to lunch with the Czarina at the imperial table on the ground that he was not in the habit of taking meals with women. He charges the rich large fees and the poor small, and gives to charity his salary as professor in the University of Moscow.

BRINGING HUBBY TO TIME.

There are Various Ways of Overcoming the Horrid Men, but this is Ingenious.

It was at a swell dinner party, and two little women smiled knowingly across the table at each other. As soon as dinner was over they rushed into a quiet corner and demanded simultaneously:

"Tell me how you ever induced your husband to bring you? How on earth did you manage to make him come?"

"I had rather a hard time of it—a second wife always does; you see, her husband is versed in all the ordinary feminine wiles, and she must always be original. I tried coaxing, tears, threats, everything, for mamma had brought me this gown from Paris and I was determined to show it if it landed me in the divorce court."

"Of course you were. Sleeves like that are worth it."

"Yes. I took twenty-four hours to think it over; then an idea occurred to me. You know Tom is awfully sensitive in regard to the differences in our ages, so the next day I allowed him to find me in a flood of tears. Naturally he demanded to know the cause. At first I refused to tell, but finally sobbed out that it was because people were saying such cruel things of me. What things? He was furious. 'They—they say that I—I'm ashamed to be seen anywhere with you because you—you are so old! And it isn't true at all!' He was quiet for a minute or two. Then, in a queer voice, he said. 'By the way, you were speaking of an invitation to dine with the Swellstyles yesterday, weren't you? Well, I find that I can manage to break the business engagement I had for that evening, so you had better except.'"

"So you merely did as you were bid, after all."

"Exactly. Mercy! do look at Clara over there. She is actually wearing her wedding dress again!"—Chicago Daily Tribune.

THE WEIGHT OF CATTLE.

Experts Who Dispense With the Use of Scales When Buying.

The dealers in live stock who buy and sell the thousands of cattle, hogs, and sheep which are daily handled at stockyards, must be expert in guessing the weight of a live animal at a glance, says an exchange. In a couversation with a well-known stock man, a few days ago, he explained why this is necessary.

"It would be impossible to weigh the cattle in many cases because of the immense labor involved and the length of time it would take. Why the market price, which is subject to constant fluctuations, might easily vary from its highest to its lowest limit while we were weighing the animals in one of our big sales.

For instance, to-day there have been received over 2,000 head of cattle and about 6,000 hogs Suppose we had to drive all of these upon the scales to ascertain their weight? There are dozens of old stockmen who can inspect a heard of animals and form an estimate of their average weight which will be readily accepted by purchasers as the basis of a trade. In a test which was made some time ago, a man who had had a lifelong experience in buying and selling a herd of cattle, after inspecting a herd of 500 animals, guessed their average weight within one-third of a pound of the actual figure ascertained by weighing them singly. The feat was accomplished by Ben D. Offutt, and it is not so extraordinary as it appears, because similar instances of expert guessing occur every day."

HARDER THAN EBONY.

An African Wood Which is Fire and Bullet Proof.

Several species of iron wood have been long known and widely used, on account of their extraordinary weight and hardness, in the manufacture of such articles as axles and ploughs, says a writer in Invention. It is said, however, that these are entirely surpassed by a certain tree found in the Northern Transvaal. The wood is a sort of ebony, and so excessively hard that it cannot be cut in the ordinary manner, except when green. When mature and dry it resists every known tool, and blunts or breaks the finest tempered steel. It is apparently almost impregnable against fire, as it requires a fortnight's constant burning to reduce the trunk of one of ths trees to ashes, and although heavy, it is said to be considerably lighter than steel or iron.

The Oldest Sport Yet Devised by Idle Men.

The mussuck race is the queerest known in the history of civilized sport. Imagine a lot of well-to-do, well-fed, well-dressed men plunging into a tank and paddling along on inflated goat-skins!

Yet, says the New York Journal, that is just what is done by English army officers and civilians in India.

Their excuse is that life in garrison towns is frightfully slow, and that they need all the amusement that they can find or invent.

At the Calcutta swimming bath ladies attend in large numbers to witness the annual sports and races.

Among all the exhibitions of swimming, racing and diving none produce merriment like the mussuck race, which has to be swam in full costume, with boots and tall hat, any competitor being counted out who arrives at the goal—one hundred feet from the starting point—with head uncovered.

A mussuck is a tanned goat-skin which, when used by water-carriers, has all the openings sewn up except at the neck, and is in use throughout all those parts of India where British civilization has not laid on pipes.

For the race they are inflated with air, the neck of the opening closed, and the racers have to bestride them and make their way by paddling along the bath.

Those who hurry get underneath, while the wary one who goes slowly preserves his equilibrium to the end and is hailed the winner.

Dead and Living Men Who Signed the French Proclamation.

Twenty-four years ago the French republic was proclaimed amid exciting scenes, the narrative of which created a profound sensation throughout the civilized world. Many of the politicians who played a prominent part in the events of the Quatre Septembre have, like the generals who fought at Sedan, gone over to the majority. Thus, among those who appended their signatures to the proclamation which was published on the following morning in the Journal Officiel, Gambetta, Jules Favre, Jules Ferry, Cremieux, Eugene Pelletan, Ernest Picard, Dorian and Guyot-Montpayroux have passed away, some of them many years ago. The government of the national defense, says the London Telegraph, included several of the politicians whose names have just been mentioned, and M. Henri Rochefort, who now lives in London in consequence of his condemnation by the high court of justice, was also a member of it.

Gen. Trachu, military governor of Paris, who was at the head of the national defense, has for years led a very retired life on his estate in the neighborhood of Tours. Etienne Arago, who died about two years ago, while holding the office of keeper of the Luxembourg museum, was appointed mayor of Paris, with as his deputies, among others, M. Floquet, ex-president of the chamber of the council, and M. Henri Brisson, who has also occupied both these posts. Then among the prefects who were nominated on the proclamation of the republic may be noted M. Challemel Lacour, now president of the senate, who was appointed to Lyons, and Senator Camescasse, for some time prefect of police, who was sent to Finistere. Among others who played a foremost part during this eventful period must be mentioned M. Jules Simon, academician and senator, and M. Emmanuel Arago, also a member of the upper house and also minister to Switzerland, both of whom also signed the famous proclamation.

Bonaparte's Heroic Example.

During a stay in Jaffa in March, 1799, Bonaparte visited the hospitals, which were filled with the sick, and where the fever was raging with deplorable results. He expressed great compassion for their sufferings and was apparently much affected by so melancholy a spectacle. He passed through all the wards, extending encouragement and sympathy to the suffering. Baron Larrey, the principal surgeon on the French staff, after his return to Europe, spoke in the highest terms of Bonaparte's care and attention to the sick and wounded soldiers. "I have seen him," he says, "in the hospitals of Jaffa, inspecting the wards and talking familiarly with the soldiers attacked by the epidemic fever, a conduct which produced the best effects on the spirits not only of the sick but the whole army. This heroic example at the same time encouraged the hospital attendants, whom the progress of the disease and the fear of contagion had alarmed considerably."

Every "Miller" lamp is perfect, whether it costs $1,00 or $100.

FINE "MILLER" LAMPS with Exquisite Shades for Gifts.

ARE BEAUTIFUL, USEFUL, APPROPRIATE.

The "Miller" is made in all styles of Banquet, Boudoir, Piano, Vase, Study, Bracket, Hall, Library, Chandelier, so everybody can find designs to please in our assortment, which is the best in New York. Our "Miller" Oil Heater will warm a room. We also make Brass Tables with Onyx Tops, The "Rochester" lamp, etc. Established 1844. We make only the best.

The "Miller" gives bright, steady light, flame does not "climb" to smoke ceiling; lighted without removing chimney; a simple turn of button (which a child can do safely), adjusts the wick so the flame is always even (a great improvement over the old way of pulling up the wick); to put in new wick is no trouble. An Indicator tells when lamp is full of oil; the draft is so controlled that chimneys are not broken by the flame. THE "MILLER" A WONDERFUL LAMP; EVERYBODY SHOULD BUY IT. If your dealer will not supply come to us. Catalogues sent on application.

LIBERAL GERMANS MAD

Bad Blood Stirred by Hammerstein's Appointment.

Emperor William's Unenviable Position—Finds It Necessary To Explain the Crisis to the Grand Duke of Baden, Who Is Angry at the Feeling Displayed Against the Kaiser.

Berlin, Nov. 12.—Freiherr von Hammerstein, the high tariff feudal agrarian, has entered the ministry of agriculture amidst the fears and reproaches of all liberal Germany. His appointment has provoked so many comments from the unofficial newspapers, that the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung felt moved to publish a general defense of the government's course in the present crisis. The burden of the article was that the German dailies erred in attacking men and should withhold their criticisms until they should learn the nature of the measures to be introduced by the new ministers. The National Zeitung, national liberal, replies: "The choice of Freiherr von Hammerstein is deplorable in itself. What measures are to be expected from a man who has identified himself with the active agitation of the agrarians and has negotiated for the restoration of the Guelph fund to the Duke of Cumberland?"

In his Freisinnige Zeitung Eugen Richter says n a defiant article: "We desire an explanation of the role which Herr von Lucanus, chief of his majesty's civil cabinet, played in the shuffling of cards before this ministerial crisis. It is declared publicly and credibly that Herr von Lucanus, before the crisis, approached secretly and separately Prince Bismarck, Count von Caprivi, Prince Hohenlohe and several ministers, to sound their opinions on certain subjects:" Richter does not dare to accuse the emperor directly of preparing the dramatic wreck of his cabinet, but he asks significantly: "What business had Herr von Lucanus to meddle thus with the ministers? What were his aims? Who put him up to this sort of work?"

Emperor William undoubtedly has got himself into an unenviable position. He has found it necessary to explain the crisis even to his closest ally and family friend, the Grand Duke of Baden. On the eve of Caprivi's fall the grand duke was in Berlin and was convinced that all was harmony between chancellor and emperor. He left the city at once, but before his express train could land him in Karlsruhe, everything was upset, Caprivi and Eulenburg had gone, and the whole cabinet was shaking. The grand duke was thoroughly angered and under the revulsion of feeling against the emperor, suddenly appointed Freiherr von Bodmann to be his special envoy at Munich and Stuttgart. His purpose in reviewing these obsolete missions was to arrange for a closer understanding among the south German courts so that they might watch and influence imperial matters more advantageously. Semi-official newspapers pretend that Bodmann's mission has no bearing on the crisis but relates solely to south German questions, but it is plain that the emperor has been forced into a half apologetic position. Prince Hohenlohe's hasty visit to Karlsruhe cannot be explained on any other ground than the necessity of appeasing the grand duke.

Prince Hohenlohe will stay in Strassburg four days. The new governor will meet him there, although he will not enter office for two or three weeks. On Tuesday Prince Hohenlohe will be honored with a farewell demonstration by the civil and military functionaries, the presidents of the German societies in the Reichsland, the mayor and municipal councillors of Strassburg and about everybody else except the implacable protestors. Proposals to take part in this official leave taking were discussed by the protestors but were voted down although many expressions of esteem and good will toward Prince Hohenlohe are heard in all the pro-French circles.

Dr. Kayser's retirement from the colonial office is attributed to the emperor's decision to enforce a more energetic policy in colonial regions. His successor, Major Lieber, made a good record as special commissioner to east Africa in 1893. Under the emperor's direction he will aim to martialize the colonial administration and reduce the number and influence of civilian officials. The Koelnische and the Kreuz Zeitung agree that a new era in German colonial policy is about to open and that one of its main objects will be to check British greed of land and trade in Africa. The Kreus Zeitung advises that the first step should be the ousting of England from Samoa.

Count von Caprivi is enjoying his holidays with Major von Ebmeyer, his former aide, on the shore of lake Geneva and probably is oblivious to the slanders which his enemies still heap upon him. The Volkszeitung remarked maliciously several days ago that, although Caprivi lost a fortune by the failure of a Berlin bank two or three years since, he had saved enough while in office to buy a large estate near Crossen. The insinuation was repeated until the Koelnische Zeitung exposed its falseness and dressed down the Volkszeitung editor. The truth is that both in and out of office Caprivi has never been a man of property. As lieutenant and as general he spent all his pay. He never economized as he had good reason to realize when he left Berlin after his dismissal with just 500 marks in his pockets. After this small sum was spent, Ebmeyer had to provide for the ex-chancellor's needs at Montreux. During the four years and a half of Ebmeyer's stewardship, he saved 40,000 marks for the chancellor, and this sum has now been deposited in a German bank to Caprivi's credit. The income from this source and his pension of 18,000 marks are all that Caprivi has. As a bachelor of simple habits, Caprivi will have no difficulty in living within his income; in fact, his total personal expenses have been barely 10,000 a year; the rest has gone to his relatives.

Twenty Miners Killed.

Prague, Nov. 12.—A fire damp explosion in the coal mine at Bruecho, Bohemia, yesterday killed twenty miners and injured many more.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Cars Filled With Anarchists in a Wreck Near Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Fifteen hundred anarchists went out to Waldheim cemetery yesterday afternoon to attend a demonstration in memory of Spies, Parsons, Fischer, Lingg and Engel, who were hanged for the part which they took in the Haymarket riot. Herr Most addressed the assemblage.

One thousand of the red bedecked men paraded the streets and marched to the Wisconsin Central depot where they boarded a train of twelve cars. The train was wrecked at Fortieth street, however, and the passengers had some difficulty in reaching their destination.

The place of the wreck was a junction. As the train approached it at the rate of about twenty-five miles an hour, the engineer noticed that the switch was set for the wrong track and blew his whistle. As the front of the engine went over the switch, the switchman shifted his leaver, sending the front trucks of the engine on one track and the other wheels on another track. The engineer and fireman jumped, but the engineer was probably fatally injured. The engine and first car is a total wreck. The car was crowded. The doors and windows could not be opened so no one could get out until after an exit had been cut. A number of passengers were cut and bruised. One man had his hands so badly mashed that his fingers will have to be amputated.

The anarchists reached their destination by walking a mile to Madison street and going out on electric cars. The cemetery was finally reached and wreaths of flowers mostly red in color, were placed on the graves of the five dead anarchists.

GREATER NEW YORK.

Many Assemblymen Will Vote for Consolidation.

New York, Nov. 12.—Now that the votes of the localities interested have expressed themselves in favor of a Greater New York interest in the question is transferred to the action of the legislature. It remains for the legislature of 1895 to carry out the expressed wishes of the citizens of New York, Brooklyn, and the Staten island, Long island and Westchester towns embraced within the boundaries of the coming metropolis. In order that the prospect for favorable legislation on the subject of consolidation may be known a morning paper has made a canvass of the new assembly. To every one of the 128 members it addressed the question: "Do you favor Greater New York?" It has not been possible to obtain answers from all—a number were absent from their homes. But a sufficient number of the assemblymen have replied to make it assured that the project will be favorably acted upon. Answers have been received from seventy-five assemblymen. They express themselves as follows: For consolidation, 46; against consolidation, 4; undecided, 25.

PORT ARTHUR INVESTED.

Japan's Victories and Progress Confirmed.

London, Nov. 12.—A dispatch from Tokio states that the Japanese have invested Port Arthur, and that the two outermost forts on the land side have been captured. A dispatch from Shanghai says it is reported there that the emperor is suffering with a fever and is confined to his bed. A dispatch from Tien-Tsin dated Tuesday and coming by way of Shanghai says that the emperor and his court are preparing to leave Pekin for Singe-Janfu, in the province of Kiangsu, about 125 miles northwest of Shanghai. It is stated that 70,000 Russian troops are concentrating at Vladivostock.

The Choctaw Uprising.

Hartshorne, I. T., Nov. 12.—No hostile demonstration has yet been made by the Indians, but the mobilization of their forces continues. A band of sixteen passed through here at 9 o'clock Friday night and another numbering fifty passed three hours later. All were heavily armed. It is not known to which side these belong. The 200 who passed Friday morning though, were intent upon avenging the execution of Silan Lewis. It is said upon reliable authority that two large bands of Choctaws are in the neighborhood of the Jack Fort mountains and that they are being constantly reinforced. The Choctaw district court will be convened at Wilburton Tuesday, when the twenty-six prisoners indicted for the same offense for which Silan Lewis was executed will be placed on trial.

Another Manifesto Expected.

London, Nov. 12.—The Daily News hears from: Odessa "Another and more important manifesto from the czar is expected after the funeral. I gather from all sides that the regret for the deceased czar is materially qualified by a certain feeling of relief that his iron control has been removed. Anyhow, the momentary popular mind hovers between hope and fear whether Nicholas II. will load the press with equal weight or relieve it of its more grievous burdens."

The Massacre of Armenians.

London, Nov. 12.—The Daily News correspondent in Constantinople says that it is impossible to obtain correct details of the recent massacre of Armenians in the Sassoun region, near Moosh. He mentions a report that 3,000 were killed, including women and children. The most credible story, he says, ascribes the guilt to Turkish troops. The British ambassador is making all possible inquiries.

Dr. Parkhurst Ill.

New York, Nov. 12.—The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, who has been suffering from a severe cold for some time, was not sufficiently well to occupy his pulpit in the Madison Square Presbyterian church yesterday. Dr. Francis S. Brown, of the Union Theological seminary, preached instead. The doctor will leave to-day for Lakewood where he will remain two weeks.

Captured After 21 Years.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 12.—E. L. Schultz, who escaped from the authorities in Crawford county twenty-one years ago at the conclusion of his trial, which resulted in his conviction of murder in the first degree, was yesterday delivered to the sheriff of that county. He was captured at Purcell, I. T., and is charged with the murder of a stock drover.

DEAD CZAR IN MOSCOW

Russia's Holy City Sacredly Receives the Body.

An Impressive and Magnificent Spectacle—Emperor Nicholas and Royalty from Other Countries Accompany the Funeral Car—Scenes in the Cathedral.

Moscow, Nov. 12.—The imperial party with the body of Alexander III. arrived here in typical Moscow weather. The sky was dull, the thermometer was two degrees below the freezing point, and a north wind blew fitfully throughout the day. Ten thousand men worked all night to complete the draping of the city. More than a thousand men were employed in paving with cobble stones the streets through which the body was to pass. They laid two and a half miles of pavement and scattered over it layers of sand to smother the rattling of carriages and the clatter of cavalry. The route was marked not only by the newly-laid pavement, but also by the density of the black and white drapery which covered the fronts of the buildings. Hundreds of draped portraits of Alexander III. were displayed in the windows of shops and private houses. The streets near the route, already crowded before daylight, had been wholly impassable by 8 o'clock, when all traffic in the adjacent districts was stopped and the way was cleared for the procession.

The train with the body arrived at 10:40 o'clock. Czar Nicholas II. was saluted as soon as he alighted by the Grand Duke Sergius, the metropolitan of Moscow and Kolomna, the higher clergy, the commandant and civil governor, members of the court, officials of the court, the chief nobility to the third class, the mayor, many generals and other officers. All stood bareheaded. The procession then was formed in groups as had been arranged, and the generals carried the coffin to the dais in the temporary chapel near the station. Four of them removed the pall and the metropolitan read a short service.

The funeral car was drawn by eight horses led by eight major generals. The tassels of the canopy were held by four adjutant generals flanked by sixty cadets bearing torches. Directly behind them rode Emperor Nicholas II. alone, looking pale but resolute. His uniform was half hidden in crape. The order was then: Count Woronzoff-Dachekoff, minister of the imperial court; the commandant of the guards and eight adjutant generals; the Prince of Wales, alone; the Grand Duke Michael Nicolaievitch, the Grand Duke Sergius, the Grand Duke Alexander Michaelevitch, the King of Greece, Prince Alexander Petrovitch and the Duke of Oldenburg, escorted by adjutant generals; the Moscow division of grenadiers.

In the first carriage behind the grenadiers rode the czarina, the Princess Alix of Hesse, and the Grand Duchess Xenia. The carriage was flanked with esquires, and behind it walked two Cossacks. The Queen of Greece, the Grand Duchess Elizabeth Feodorvna and the Princess of Wales occupied the second carriage, which was flanked with equerries and two grooms of the chamber; the czarina's suites, foreign ladies and their suites, ladies of the court and bedchamber, attaches, secretaries, etc., in carriages; the czar's physicians and personal attendants, a company of cadets, several companies of artillery, a deputation from the Frederick William IV. grenadiers, eight military companies from as many Russian military districts.

The windows and walks from the station to the Kremlin were thronged with silent, reverent crowds. Nobody spoke above a whisper and not a voice could be heard above the tread of the passing column. All the men removed their hats the moment the funeral car came in sight, and remained uncovered for half of three quarters of an hour. Dragoons were stationed in an unbroken line on one side of the entire route. The procession passed ten churches. In front of every one stood the priests in their robes, purple hats and chasubles. The popes, wearing their mitres and carrying sacred pictures, met the hearse and prayed briefly. At the Iberian chapel the procession halted and the clergy stepped out bearing the miraculous picture of the Virgin, with which they blessed the body. Hundreds of sacred ikons were carried also in the procession. Everyone was of gold of silver and was guarded by a little body of attendants from the church to which it belonged. From the beginning to the end of the procession minute guns were fired from the citadel of the Kremlin.

The metropolitan and higher clergy awaited the body at the door of the Cathedral of the Archangel Michael. They walked before it to the great crimson dais under the gold and silver canopy in the middle of the building. Generals of the army placed the coffin on the dais and removed the pall. The members of the imperial family gathered between the gorgeous pillars at the foot of the coffin and listened in silence, broken only by sobs, to the reading of the solemn mass for the dead. The service closed with music. The imperial family and their attendants then retired to the palace within the Kremlin and the persons holding tickets were admitted to the cathedral. They passed round the dais slowly, looking at the dead czar's face. After them came people of all sorts, admitted in the order dictated by rank. Strange scenes were witnessed as this mixed throng filed past the coffin. Men and women wept, crossed themselves, prayed aloud and begged loudly for the peace of the dead man's soul.

The body is watched day and night by six staff officers, twelve subalterns and two special guards at each door. Masses are held at appointed hours and everybody, whatever his creed or nationality, is welcomed to bid farewell to Alexander III.

COULD HARDLY BREATHE.

Catarrh of the Nose, Throat, and Stomach—Life Made Miserable by Headaches, Pain and Cough.

Lida McCandless, No. 1230 South Thirtyfifth street, Philadelphia, in conversation with a reporter, said: "I had a very bad case of catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach, with frequent headaches, pain under the shoulder blades and a horrible cough. I had to keep my mouth constantly open day and night to breathe, and felt as miserable as one possibly could. I was advised to try Munyon's Catarrh Cure. I am happy to say that from the beginning I felt relieved and continued to grow better until now I am entirely well. I am so thankful that this remarkable remedy was ever discovered, and hope others will take advantage of my experience."

Have you Catarrh? Are you willing to investigate a treatment that cures Catarrh by removing the cause? If so ask your druggist for a 25c bottle of Catarrh Tablets. The Catarrh Cure will eradicate the disease from the system, and the Tablets will cleanse and heal the affected parts and restore them to a natural and healthful condition.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

WILLING TO MEDIATE

United States' Proposition to China and Japan.

Influenced by Sentiments of Friendship for Both Countries—If the War is Prolonged England May Interfere and Prevent Further Aggression on the Part of Japan.

Washington, Nov. 12.—A complete history of the position taken by this government with reference to the China-Japan war is as follows:

On Tuesday last, Secretary Gresham, acting under instructions from President Cleveland, telegraphed Minister Denby at Pekin, that this country would, if desired, arbitrate the differences between China and Japan. On the same day another dispatch, also inspired by President Cleveland, was sent by Secretary Gresham to Mr. Dun, the United States minister at Tokio. This dispatch, after stating the willingness of the United States to mediate between the two countries proceeded at considerable length to define our position. It added that in making this suggestion the United States were influenced only by sentiments of friendship for both the contending parties; that no consideration of territorial aggrandizement entered into the question; that our interests in the east were not materially affected by the war and that the attitude of this government could not be open to any other construction than that of an earnest friend of the two nations interested.

Since these dispatches were sent the state department has received assurances that China will accept the proposition. Nothing meanwhile has been heard from Tokio, but it is shrewdly suspected in administration circles that the Japanese government will take no action until they have first been apprised of China's intentions.

In other words, the Japanese feel that they have all the advantage at present and they will not move in the matter until satisfied that China is willing to make peace on terms satisfactory to them. These terms are well understood. They include two conditions—the independence of Korea and a war indemnity sufficient to compensate Japan for the expenses incurred by her since hostilities began. Japan, it is understood, is satisfied that if President Cleveland be chosen as arbitrator he will act fairly with both parties and that he will fix the indemnity at such a figure as will satisfy Japan.

As to the amount of cash it is not likely that Japan will accept the mediation unless $100,000,000 is offered. This will about represent what Japan has actually spent on the war. She does not ask for exemplary or punitive damages, as the term is used in law, but merely the damages which will reimburse her outlay.

When France paid Germany an indemnity for the Franco-German war it represented not only what Germany had spent but exemplary or punitive damages as well. Japan does not expect this, but she will insist on actual damages. This is roughly figured as follows: Japan had a reserve fund of $25,000,000 on hand when the war began. This has been spent. Then she negotiated a war loan of $50,000,000 yen (a yen being about equivalent to our one dollar).

This makes $75,000,000 actually used in the war. Besides this, Japanese citizens have contributed large sums. The total outlay, including obligations incurred, is estimated at about $100,000,000. The extra session of the Japanese diet resulted in a law authorizing a war expenditure up to $150,000,000, but this limit has not been reached.

Meanwhile, Great Britain is making every effort, with the co-operation of France and other continental countries, to bring the war to a close. Thus far she has been unsuccessful, and she has been equally unsuccessful in her desire to secure the co-operation of the United States in a joint intervention. The belief is expressed in diplomatic circles that if the war be prolonged much further England may interfere and forcibly prevent any further aggression on the part of Japan. Such a step would involve the latter country in war with Great Britain, for now that the Japanese have their fighting blood up they will not be balked in their purpose of punishing China, unless prevented by superior outside force. For this reason, therefore, Japan it is thought may the more willingly consent to arbitration, although the fact is indisputable that their consent to arbitration cannot be gained until China shall have first shown a disposition to accept the proposition made by the United States.

"General" Sanders Arrested.

Pueblo, Col., Nov. 12.—"General" J. S. Sanders, of commonweal fame, was arrested here on a warrant charging him with grand larceny. He pleaded not guilty and was placed under $300 bonds, which he furnished. The particular offense against Sanders is stealing a Rio Grande locomotive and running it over the Missouri Pacific tracks last May to Horace, Kas., where he and his followers were overpowered by deputy United States marshals and arrested. Sanders was fined $50 in the United States court at Wichita for the theft. He returned to Pueblo about three weeks before the election and made speeches for Gov. Waite and the populist ticket.

Glass Works Destroyed.

Fairmount, W. Va., Nov. 12.—The Sloan Glass works owned by D. J. Sloan, of North Baltimore, Ohio, and leased and operated by Alex. Humphreys, of Steubenville, Ohio, were destroyed by fire last night. Loss $25,000 on buildings, and $2,500 to $3,000 on contents. The gas had been short and it is supposed that a high pressure coming on suddenly caused the fire. Insurance about $15,000 on buildings, placed in New York companies.

Holcomb Governor of Nebraska.

Omaha, Nov. 12.—Complete official returns show the election of Judge Holcomb, fusionist, for governor by 3,000 plurality over Majors, republican. The friends of the latter have decided not to contest the election.

THE BILLIARD MATCH.

Ives and Schaefer Will Meet To-Night in New York City.

New York, Nov. 12.—Those masters of the cue Frank C. Ives and Jacob Schaefer will meet to-night in the Madison Square Garden Concert hall to begin a billiard tournament of 3,600 points at 14-inch balk line for $2,500 a side and the entire net receipts. Each night 600 will be scored, the tournament finishing Saturday.

The men are considered to be as evenly matched as it is possible to get such players, and the best judges declare there is no choice between them. Both have shown magnificent work in practice. As a consequence there is little betting on the result. The few bets that have been made were even money.

Schaefer and Ives have met many times over the regulation table. In March, 1892, the latter ran out an 800-point game while Schaefer was accumulating 499 buttons. In their second match, for 4,000 points, Schaefer beat Ives fifty-five points. In this city last winter they met again in a three-cornered match. The "Wizard" again won, with Ives second and George Slosson third. Then the two men played a tie game in Chicago, and afterward Ives won a three-cornered match in Cincinnati.

MINING TROUBLES.

Arbitration Hoped for in the Pittsburg District.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 12.—The Indiana coal operators are hoping that the threatened strike in the Pittsburg district may be averted by resort to the method of arbitration provided in the Columbus agreement of June 12, which brought the big strike to an end. According to that agreement, the interstate joint board of arbitration is to decide whether or not the scale for the Pittsburg district is being "generally recognized and observed" and not until the board has decided that it is not, can the wage schedule contract for the year ending next May be waived in Illinois, Indiana or Ohio. Indiana operators insist that the Pittsburg operators are wrong in announcing that they will arbitrarily reduce wages on Nov. 15 because two of the larger operators are not observing the scale and that rather than violate the terms of the agreement of June 12 it were better that they suspend operations. The officials of the miners' organization of Indiana also are hoping there will be no strike. In this state the chief desire is for more work at the present scale although the Indiana organization at first bolted the action of the Columbus conference.

POPULAR TO THE END.

Over 8,000 Persons Take a Last Look at "King" Kelly.

Boston, Nov. 12.—Yesterday all that was mortal of poor Mike Kelly was gently lowered to the grave by those who had been near and dear to him throughout life. Not for many a long day has the funeral of one man been so largely attended as that of Kelly. For four hours a steady stream of people filed slowly into the rooms of the Boston lodge of Elks of Hayward place and did the dead man honor. Peacefully he reposed in a magnificent casket, half buried beneath floral decorations placed there by loving hands. Around the room were wreaths and crosses and costly pieces of floral work contributed by friends. Men, women and children came, looked reverently on the features of the dead man, and silently glided away to make room for others. Something like 8,000 people came and thousands more would have come had there been time.

Annie Kampf Arrested Again.

New York, Nov. 12.—Annie Kampf, a German girl 17 years old, who narrowly escaped a sentence of two and a half years in Trenton state prison, recently, on a charge of picking pockets, is now confined in Jefferson Market prison on a similar charge. She was arrested Saturday afternoon in Macy's store, Fourteenth street and Sixth avenue, by Detectives McCauley and Stephen O'Brien, who claim to have caught her picking the pocket of Mrs. Cecilia Clark, of Pleasant Mount, Pa. The prisoner was remanded for further examination. She has been at liberty but one week. On April 12th, last, she was arrested for picking pockets on the Hamburg line pier in Hoboken, but was finally released at the instance of her lawyer who claimed that she had not been tried before a legally constituted court.

Opposed to a Strike.

Princeton, Ill., Nov. 12.—A meeting of the coal miners of Spring Valley to consider a strike was held in the Opera house. It was called by the Driver & Co., men whose grievance is that three of their number were discharged because they absented themselves from work on election day without giving their employer the customary notice. The meeting adjourned until Tuesday without taking action. The rank and file of the miners oppose a strike at this time.

The Calypso Sighted.

London, Nov. 12.—The British cruiser Calypso, of the training squadron, was sighted yesterday sixty miles north of the Canary islands. She parted from the rest of the squadron in a gale a few days ago, and when the other vessels reached Las Palmas without her much anxiety for her safety was felt.

THE "PETER'S PENCE"

Must Be Sent To Mgr. Satolli Hereafter.

Individual Contributions May Be Addressed Directly to the Ecclesiastic—Text of the Letter Sent to the Apostolic Delegate—Various Seminaries To Be Founded.

Washington, Nov. 12.—An interesting and important letter has been received from Rome by the apostolic delegate, Mgr. Satolli, to be forwarded by him to the archbishops, who are to distribute it to their suffragans.

Heretofore the Peter's pence collected each year in every diocese have been sent directly by the bishops to Rome. Now those collections must be transmitted to the delegate. Moreover, any individual who wishes to make in his own name a more liberal contribution than he would ordinarily put in the diocesan collection, may do so by addressing it directly to the pope through the delegate.

Following is the letter of the holy father to the bishops:

"Among other efficient means of fostering and proving devotedness to the Roman pontiff, one deserves notice—we mean the financial support given him that he may the more readily provide for the interests of the church. Since the days of the apostles the faithful have given in this matter a noble example which has continued through all the vicisitudes of time and events. This support is justly called Peter's pence.

"Assuredly in these latter days when the rights of the Roman church are unjustly violated and its former means have ceased, it is a fact worthy of remembrance and commendation that Catholics of almost every nation have been so warm in their attachment to the successor of St. Peter as to come in aid of his honorable destitution. In this concert the faithful of your great country deserve a meed of praise, for under the guidance and exhortation of their bishops they have given remarkable proofs of their ardor, of their faith and the native generosity of their hearts.

"Useless, then, to urge them to a further continuance of this custom. Our purpose rather, is to point out an arrangement which shall facilitate and, if possible, also increase their generosity. Not long ago, as you know, we thought proper to give your diocese and your flocks a special pledge of our affection in the establishment of a permanent apostolic delegation, so that there might be constantly in your midst one who should represent our person and manage your more important affairs in our name with our power. Now this institution naturally suggests the new arrangement we should like to make as to the Peter's pence. It is this. The collections for this purpose which each bishop orders in his diocese as well as the private contributions that individual Catholics may wish to make to the holy father in their own names, shall henceforth be forwarded to and placed to the credit of the apostolic delegate residing in Washington. He afterwards will remit the sums to us with itemized details.

"Your generosity will be most acceptable and opportune just now, for the needs increase day by day with our growing solicitude for the faith, and especially since the publication of our late apostolic letter on unity. We cherish certain projects by which we hope, not without good grounds, to foster and hasten that devoutly wished consummation, the reunion of Christendom. Such, venerable brother, is our wish in this matter. We know well and duly praise your willingness to correspond to our counsels and desires. And now we lovingly bestow on yourself, your work, your clergy, your people the apostolic benediction as a pledge of God's choicest blessings that unfailing success may attend your pastorate.

"Given at Rome, in St. Peter's, the 16th day of September, 1894, the 17th year of our pontificate.

"LEO P. P., XIII."

The projects above referred to are seminaries to be founded at various points in the Orient, Athens, Smyrna, Corfu and others. The letter also, it is understood, implies that priests and people are expected to avail themselves of this opportunity to show their pleasure at the establishment of the apostolic delegation.

The transmission of this letter has been to some extent foreshadowed in United Press dispatches from Rome. It must not, however, be confounded with the forthcoming encyclical, which will appear in due course.

KILLED BY HER BOARDER.

Henry Powell Commits Murder and Then Shoots Himself.

Rochester, Pa., Nov. 12.—Henry Powell shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Sapira McLaughlin and then killed himself at Vicary, two miles north of here. Jealousy is supposed to have been the cause of the crime. Mrs. McLaughlin was a widow with three children and Powell boarded with her. Powell was married and the father of a family, but did not live with his wife. Saturday night after Mrs. McLaughlin's children were put to bed three shots were heard down stairs. An investigation showed that Powell had shot the woman twice in the head and then put a bullet through his own brain, dying instantly. Mrs. McLaughlin cannot live. She came here from New Cumberland, W. Va., and had intended moving to East Liverpool so as to be rid of Powell's attentions. The dead man was employed in the Freedman oil refinery.

IV.

"Not before the fifth shot," said the mugger, as though he had never dreamed of stunning one of his listeners—"not before the fifth shot did I sink, and I rose in time to hear a thief of a boatman telling all those white women that I was most certainly dead. One bullet had gone under a neck-plate of mine. I know not if it is there still, for the reason I cannot turn my head. Look and see, child. It will show my tale is true."

"I?" said the jackal. "Shall an eater of old shoes, a bone-cracker, presume to doubt the word of the Envy of the River? May my tail be bitten off by blind puppies if the shadow of such a thought have crossed my humble mind. The Protector of the Poor has condescended to inform me, his slave, that once in his life he has been wounded by a woman. This is sufficient, and I will tell the tale to all my children, asking for no proof."

"Over-much civility is sometimes no better than over-much discourtesy, for, as the saying is, one can choke a guest with curds. I do not desire that any children of thine should know that the mugger of Mugger-Ghaut took his only wound from a woman. They will have much else to think of if they get their living as miserably as does their father."

"It is forgotten long ago! It was never said! There never was a white woman! There was no boat! Nothing whatever happened at all."

The jackal waved his brush to show how completely everything was wiped out of his memory, and sat down with an air.

"Indeed, very many things happened," said the mugger, beaten in his second attempt that night to get the better of his friend. (Neither bore malice, however. Eat and be eaten was fair law along the river, and the jackal came in for his share of plunder when the mugger had finished a meal.) "I left that boat and went upstream, and, when I had reached Arrah and the back waters behind it, there were no more dead English. The river was empty for awhile. Then came one or two dead, in red coats, not English, but of one kind all—Hindoos and Purbeeahs—then five and six abreast, and at last, from Arrah to the north beyond Agra, it was as though whole villages had walked into the water. They came out of little creeks one after another, as the logs come down in the rains. When the river rose they rose also in companies from the shoals they had rested upon; and the falling flood dragged them with it across the fields and through the jungle by the long hair. All night, too, going north, I heard the guns, and by day the shod feet of men crossing fords, and that noise which a heavy cart wheel makes on sand under water; and every ripple brought more dead. At last even I was afraid, for I said: 'If this happen to men how shall the mugger of Mugger-Ghaut escape?' There were boats, too, that came up behind me without sails, burning continually as the cotton boats sometimes burn, but never sinking."

"Ah!" said the adjutant. "Boats like those come to Calcutta of the South. They are tall and black, they beat up the water behind them with a tail, and they—"

"Are thrice as big as my village. My boats were low and white; they beat up the water on either side of them, and were no larger than the boats of one who speaks truth should be. They made me very afraid, and I left water and went back to this my river, hiding by day and walking by night, when I could not find little streams to help me. I came to my village again, but I could not hope to see any of my people there. Yet they were plowing and sowing and reaping, and going to and fro in their fields as quietly as their own cattle."

"Was there still good food in the river?" asked the jackal.

"More than I had any desire for. Even I—and I do not eat mud—even I was tired and, as I remember, a little frightened of this constant coming down of the silent ones. I heard my people say in my village that all the English were dead, but those that came face down with the current were not English, as my people saw. Then my people said that it was best to say nothing at all, but to pay the tax and plow the land. After a long time the river cleared, and those that came down it had been clearly drowned by the floods, as I could well see; and, though it was not so easy then to get food, I was heartily glad of it. A little killing here and there is no bad thing—but even the mugger is sometimes satisfied, as the saying is."

"Marvelous! Most truly marvelous!" said the jackal. "I am become fat through merely hearing about so much good eating. And afterward what, if it be permitted to ask, did the Protector of the Poor do?"

"I said to myself—and by the Right and Left of Gunga I locked my jaws on that vow—I said I would never go roving any more. So I lived by the ghaut very close to my own people, and I watched over them year after year; and they loved me so much that they threw marigold wreaths at my head whenever they saw it lift. Yes, and my fate has been very kind to me, and the river is good enough to respect my poor and infirm presence; only—"

"No one is all happy from his beak to his tail," said the adjutant, sympathetically. "What does the mugger of Mugger-Ghaut need more?"

"That little white child which I did not get," said the mugger, with a deep sigh. "He was very small, but I have not forgotten. I am old now, but before I die it is my desire to try one new thing. It is true they are a heavy-footed, noisy and foolish people, and the sport would be small, but I remember the old days above Benares, and if the child lives he will remember still. It may be he goes up and down the bank of some river, telling how he once passed his hands between the teeth of the mugger of Mugger-Ghaut, and lived to make a tale of it. My fate has been very kind, but that plagues me sometimes in my dreams—the thought of the little white child in the bows of that boat." He yawned and closed his jaws. "And now I will rest and think. Keep silent, my children, and respect the aged."

He turned stiffly and shuffled to the top of the sandbar, while the jackal drew back with the adjutant to the shelter of a tree stranded on the end nearest the railway-bridge.

"That was a pleasant and profitable life," he grinned, looking up inquiringly at the bird who towered above him. "And not once, mark you, did he think fit to tell me where a morsel might have been left along the banks. Yet I have told him a hundred times of good things wallowing down-stream. How true is the saying: 'All the world forgets the jackal and the barber when the news has been told!' Now he is going to sleep. Arrh!"

"How can a jackal hunt with a mugger?" said the adjutant, coolly. "Big thief and little thief; it is easy to say who gets the pickings."

The jackal turned, whining impatiently, and was going to curl himself up under the tree trunk, when he suddenly cowered and looked up through the draggled branches at the bridge almost above his head.

"What now?" said the adjutant, opening his wings uneasily.

"Wait till we see. The wind blows from us to them, but they are not looking for us—those two men."

"Men, is it? My office protects me. All India knows I am holy." The adjutant, being a first-class scavenger, is allowed to go where he pleases, and so this one never flinched.

"I am not worth a blow from anything greater than an old shoe," said the jackal, and listened again. "Hark to that footfall!" he went on. "That was no country leather, but the shod foot of a whiteface. Listen again! Iron hits iron up there. It is a gun. Friend, those heavy-footed, foolish English are coming to speak with the mugger."

"Warn him, then. He was called Protector of the Poor by some one not unlike a starving jackal but a little time ago."

"Let my cousin protect his own hide. He has told me again and again there is nothing to fear from the whitefaces. They must be whitefaces. Not a villager of Mugger-Ghaut would dare to come after him. See! I said it was a gun. Now, with good luck, we shall feed before daylight. He cannot hear well out of water, and—this time it is not a woman!"

A shiny barrel glittered for a minute in the moonlight on the girders. The mugger was lying on the sandbar as still as his own shadow, his forefeet spread out a little, his head dropped between them, snorting like a—mugger.

A voice on the bridge whispered: "It's an odd shot—straight down almost—but as safe as houses. Better try behind the neck. Golly, what a brute! The villagers will be wild if he's shot, though. He's the deota (godling) of these parts."

"Don't care a rap," another voice answered. "He took about fifteen of my best coolies while the bridge was building, and it's about time he was put a stop to. I've been after him in a boat for weeks. Stand by with the Martini as soon as I've given him both barrels of this."

"Mind the kick, then. A double four-bore's no joke."

"That's for him to decide. Here goes!"

There was a roar like the sound of a small cannon (the biggest sort of elephant-rifle is not very different from some artillery), and a double streak of flame, followed by the stinging crack of a Martini, whose long bullet makes nothing of a crocodile's plates. But the explosive bullets did the work. One of them struck just behind the mugger's neck, a hand's breadth to the left of the backbone, while the other burst a little lower down, at the beginning of the tail. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred a mortally wounded crocodile can scramble off for deep water and get away; but the mugger of Mugger-Ghaut was literally broken into three pieces. He hardly moved his head before the life went out of him, and he lay as flat as the jackal.

"Thunder and lightning! Lightning and thunder!" said that miserable little beast. "Has the thing that pulls the covered carts over the bridge tumbled at last?"

"It is no more than a gun," said the adjutant, though his very tail-feathers quivered. "Nothing more than a gun. He is certainly dead. Here come the white-faces."

The two Englishmen had hurried down from the bridge and across to the sandbar, where they stood admiring the length of the mugger. Then a native with an ax cut off the big head, and four men dragged it across the spit.

"The last time that I had my hand in a mugger's mouth," said one of the Englishmen, stooping down (he was the man who had built the bridge), "it was when I was about five years old—coming down the river by boat to Monghyr. I was a mutiny baby, y' know. Poor mother was in the boat, too, and she often told me how she fired dad's old pistol at the beast's head."

"Well, you've certainly had your revenge on the chief of the clan—even if my gun has made your nose bleed. Hi, you boatmen! Haul that head up the bank and we'll boil it for the skull. The skin's too knocked about to keep. Come along to bed now. This was worth sitting up all night for, wasn't it?"

Curiously enough, the jackal and the adjutant made the very same remark not three minutes after the men had left.

THE END.

KEEPING TAB ON WATCHMEN.

Means by Which They are Prevented from Sleeping While on Duty.

A night watchman in any of the large cities has small chance of enjoying gentle slumber while he is on duty. Even if he does give way to drowsiness he is apt to be rudely awakened before he has had time to get his eyes fairly closed, and this awakening is done by the American District Telegraph Company.

The system employed is simple but effective. In each building of a subscriber are placed calls, connected with tickers in the district office of the company. To reach the calls successfully the watchman has to traverse the whole building from top to bottom. There is a schedule made out for him, showing the time at which he must pull each call. If he fails to do so at the appointed time, he will soon be asked for an explanation. For instance, in one of the large drygoods houses there is a station, as the calls are named, in the delivery room in the subbasement. Here the signal must be turned in for the first time at 7 P.M. At 7:02 P.M. a call must be sent in from the soda water fountain on the main floor; at 7:04 from the front of the main floor; and so on, signals must be turned in at intervals of two minutes until the watchman has gone all over the store. Then at 8 o'clock he begins again, and keeps up his rounds until 6 o'clock in the morning.

If the signal does not come in within a short time of the hour and minute set for it, a man is sent immediately to the building to find out what is wrong, and the next morning a report is sent to the main office and to the subscriber, saying that the watchman failed to turn in a certain signal the night before, and giving the watchman's excuse for his failure to do so. By this system it is almost impossible for anything to happen in a building without the company knowing it in a very short time.

OUGHT TO HAVE IT.

Milwaukee Girls Should be Taught Not to Fool With German Lovers.

Adolph Scholtz wants $30,000 for breach of promise from Katherina Pitger, the daughter of a Milwaukee merchant. In his complaint it is stated that on August 1, 1885, Scholtz was engaged in the banking business in Berlin, Germany. He claims he met Miss Pitger and proposed marriage, and was accepted. Acting on her advice he disposed of his business interests in Germany and came to Milwaukee.

He arrived here in 1885, but Miss Pitger refused to marry him. Scholtz asks for $15,000 for the alleged breach of promise, and an additional $15,000 for his loss of business.

Gov. Seymour's Advice Settled It.

Says Mr. George J. Obermann, head of the famous Milwaukee brewing company: "I started out in life with the intention of being a lawyer, and firm in that purpose I entered the office of Judge Levi Hubbell, one of the ablest practitioners in the Northwest. I had been pegging away for two years over the law books when one day Horatio Seymour came into the office. Judge Hubbell and he had been schoolmates together at Canandaigua, N. Y. Happening to be in Milwaukee on his way to Minnesota upon a political campaign, he called to see his old friend. Judge Hubbell was busy just at that moment with a client, so Governor Seymour sat down and chatted with me.

"'What are you reading, my lad?' he asked.

"'Law books,' says I.

"'That's right,' says he, approvingly. 'Keep hard at it and let nothing swerve you from your course. Read and study, study and read—that's the only way to become a lawyer!' Why, my boy, I read and studied law seventeen years before I felt competent to go into court and try a case—seventeen years of hard study!'

"'Well, that settles it!' says I. 'If it took you seventeen years to learn the business, Gov. Seymour, why, I'm in the wrong business, and I'll quit right now before I waste any more time!'"—Chicago Record.

AN ORDINANCE

concerning the Construction, Maintenance and Repair of Sidewalks.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Section 1. That all sidewalks shall have a width not less than one-fifth of the entire width of the street and all sidewalks hereafter laid shall be raised, from the curbstone line to the side of the street adjoining, in the proportion of five inches in ten feet, unless otherwise specially directed by resolution of the Common Council, provided that this section shall not apply to sidewalks whose width has previously been established by ordinance.

Sec. 2. That all sidewalks in said city shall be well and sufficiently repaired and maintained at the expense of the abutting land owners, so as to be even on the surface and so laid and constructed as freely to shed water and for the width of at least four feet free from turf, grass, weeds, stubble and other foreign substances.

Sec. 3. That within that portion of said city described as follows, viz:—Beginning with the intersection of the northeasterly side line of Norwood avenue with Green brook and running thence along said northeasterly side line of Norwood avenue continuing along northeasterly side line of Richmond street to its intersection with the centre line of Watchung avenue; thence in a straight line to the intersection of the easterly side line of Ninth street with the southerly line of Third place produced; thence along said easterly side line of Ninth street and the same line produced to its intersection with the southwesterly side line of Plainfield avenue; thence with the southwesterly side line of Plainfield avenue northwesterly to Green brook and thence along Green brook to the point or place of beginning; also on both sides of Watchung avenue from Richmond street to Woodland avenue; both sides of West Front street from Plainfield avenue to Grant avenue; and both sides of East Front street from Richmond street to Farragut road; both sides of Central avenue from Ninth street to Randolph road; in all cases in which sidewalks are not already constructed of blue stone flagging, sidewalks shall be constructed at the expense of the abutting land owners, and unless otherwise specially permitted by resolution of the Common Council, shall be composed of blue stone flagging, smooth and even on the surface, and properly laid in one course under the direction of and on such lines as shall be given by the Street Commissioner, and the flags shall not be less than four feet long and not less than two feet wide and not less than one and one-half inches thick in the thinnest part. And within that portion of the City of Plainfield described in this section, in all cases in which sidewalks are not already curbed with stone, cement, concrete, hard and durable substance, said sidewalks shall, when ordered by resolution of the Common Council, be curbed at the expense of the abutting land owners, and unless otherwise specially permitted by resolution of the Common Council shall be curbed with blue stone or ironolithic, not less than four inches thick in the thinnest part and sixteen inches in depth, smooth and even on the surface and laid in one course under the direction of and on such lines as shall be given by the Street Commissioner. That all return curbs shall have a radius of six feet, no piece to be less than three feet two inches in length.

Sec. 4. That within that portion of the said city not embraced within the foregoing limits described in Section 3, in all cases in which sidewalks are not now constructed in the manner hereinafter provided in this section, sidewalks shall be constructed at the expense of the abutting land owners, when ordered by resolution of the Common Council, and unless otherwise specially permitted by resolution of the Common Council, said sidewalks shall be composed of bluestone flagging as specified in Section 3, or crushed stone not less than six inches deep, thoroughly rolled and compacted, or cement not less than one-half inch in thickness, laid on at least four inches of concrete, said bluestone flagging, crushed stone or cement and concrete to be made smooth and even on the surface and properly laid in one course under the direction of and on such lines as shall be given by the Street Commissioner, and said sidewalks to be so laid for the width of not less than four feet, and in case bluestone flagging is used, the flags to be not less than two feet in width and not less than one and one-half inches thick in the thinnest part.

Sec. 5. It is hereby made the duty of the owners of land abutting on the sidewalks of said city to comply with the preceding sections of this ordinance under the direction and supervision of the Street Commissioner. The Street Commissioner is hereby authorized to serve notices in writing upon the owners or occupants of said lands requiring the necessary specified work to said sidewalks to be done by said owners or occupants within a period of thirty days from the date of service of such notice, and shall file with the City Clerk a list of the names of parties on which notices have been served; if any of said lands are unoccupied and the owner cannot be found within the city, the said notice shall be mailed, postage prepaid, to his or her postoffice address if the same can be ascertained; in case such owner is a non-resident of the city and his or her postoffice address cannot be ascertained, then the notice may be inserted for four weeks, once a week, in the official newspapers of the city.

Sec. 6. That in case the owner or occupant of such lands shall not comply with the requirements of the notice specified in the preceding section, said Street Commissioner shall file in the office of the City Clerk due proof of the service or publication of the aforesaid notice and thereupon the Common Council may by resolution order the required work to be done and paid for, and proceedings to be taken to perfect a lien for the costs thereof and to enforce payment of the same pursuant to the statute in such cases made and provided.

Sec. 7. That Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, of an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance Relating to Streets and Sidewalks and Encroachments Thereon", and the ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance Concerning the Construction, Maintenance and Repair of Sidewalks", and the amendment of said last named ordinance approved August 4th, 1890, be and the same are hereby repealed.

Sec. 8. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances which were repealed or abrogated by any ordinance hereby repealed, shall continue to be so repealed and shall be deemed abrogated.

Adopted by the Common Council Nov. 5, 1894.

Approved by the Mayor Nov. 10, 1894.

A. GILBERT, Mayor.

Attest—J. T. MacMurray, City Clerk.

MONTE GETS DECISION.

The Racing Board Declares Him a Class B Man.

The annual fall meeting of the Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen was held at the office of Chairman Raymond, at 245 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday. The full membership of the Board, including E. C. Crongenger of Louisville, Henry Robinson of Boston, L. C. Jacquish of Chicago, George D. Gideon of Philadelphia, and H. E. Raymond, were present. The Board considered all the important racing problems and made recommendations to the National Assembly that will have an important bearing on racing next season. Immediately upon going into session the Board considered the infringement of rules by a number of riders with the result that the following men have been declared in class B:

E. E. Anderson, Roodhouse, Ill.; O. P. Bernhardt, Toledo, O; William Bainbridge, Chicago, Ill.; L. P. Callahan, Waltham, Mass.; W. F. Clark, Dorchester, Mass: F. B Emerson, Chelsea, Mass.; J. T. Hamlin, Sacramento, Cal.; F. M. Haggerty, Waltham, Mass.; P. O'Connor, Boston, Mass.; A. W. Porter, Newton, Mass.; F. B. Rugby, Toledo, O.; L. P. Swett, Norway, Me.; Monte Scott, Plainfield, N. J.; J. C. Wettergreen, Malden, and C. G. Williams, Waltham, Mass.

The request of the bicycle manufacturers that the Racing Board should protect them in their contracts with the Class B men resulted in the Racing Board deciding to give them protection, and a rule will accordingly be framed and presented to the assembly. A new rule will be presented to the assembly placing all men connected with the trade in Class B. This move was unexpected. In order to derive a bigger revenue to the league steps will also be taken to charge a fee to all clubs, associations, and individuals, excepting L. A. W. clubs, for sanctions for tournaments. It will be suggested that special referees be appointed for the national circuit.

The suggestion that the Chairman of the Racing Board receive a salary, and the office be made an elective one, was approved of by the entire Board, and they will suggest that the assembly take action on this matter. The Racing Board put themselves on record as opposed to women racing, and they will endeavor to have a rule adopted preventing the L. A. W. from recognizing such races. A step which will be a big blow to road racing was the decision of the Board to suggest to the National Assembly that this branch of the sport be condemned, and that the L. A. W. co-operate with the local authorities to suppress such contests. An effort will be made to restrict record trials to a certain period, and to be governed solely by the L. A. W. officials.

Monte expected to go into Class B next year anyway, but he did want to race in Madison Square Garden as an A man. The questions sent to him in the Summer when he was asked to show cause why he should not go into the second class were all answered properly and there seemed to remain no excuse for throwing him over. Monte may turn up in one of the big teams next year.

Notes of the Nimrods.

Percy Ohl, while returning home Saturday evening from Mr. Holly's, heard his greyhound Prince barking under an apple tree. As it was moonlight and the tree an apple tree, it occurred to Mr. Ohl it might be a 'possum that caused the barking, and this proved to be the case. To say the animal is now in custody tells the story of its capture. Percy, Jr, will take it to school to afford an object lesson in natural history.

Fishermen report great success catching suckers with hook and line nowadays. George Teeple caught 70 in one day.

Black bass are beginning to hibernate, but they still are feeding. About noon is the best time to catch them now. It is illegal to catch them after Nov. 30.

Eels have left our streams and shallow ponds and got into deep water.

The flight of hawks which generally occurs between the 1st and 7th of this month has not been noticed yet.

Ruffed grouse have had a very favorable year, and thrived splendidly, but sportsmen should deal leniently with them.

The game laws, though hard to understand, have been well observed, but as ignorance of the law excuses no man 15 arrests in this locality have been reported.

Sons of Vets Inspected.

Inspecting Officer F. D. Morse of Elizabeth was present at the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., last evening, to inspect the work of the camp. Eugene V. Lerton was mustered as a recruit, and all the detail work was brought out. Mr. Morse was much pleased with the work, which was excellent considering the short time the camp has been organized. The attendance of members was large, and the interest is growing.

INTER-STATE TROLLEY.

Everything Ready for Municipal Consents.

THEN THE ROAD WILL BE BUILT.

Gigantic Enterprise to Gridiron New Jersey—Two Big Companies to Work Together—Capital $10,500,000—Outline of the Route.

The charter of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, which is to build the great system of electric railways to gridiron the central and northern sections of New Jersey and form a continuous line between New York and Philadelphia, as already laid out by the Central New Jersey Traction Company, has been obtained and filed in the Secretary of State's office at Trenton.

This electric railway enterprise is to be built, operated and managed by two corporations, the Central Jersey Traction Company, with a capital of $500,000, and headquarters at 2 Wall street, New York, and the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, with a capital of $10,000,000, and general offices at Trenton and New York.

The officers and directors of the new company are as follows:

Frank A. Magowan, president; J. Henry Darrah, secretary and treasurer. Directors: Joseph H. Reall, Bloomfield; Frank A. Magowan, Trenton; J. Henry Darrah, Trenton; Col. E. W. Hine, Orange; D. K. Bayne, New York; R. Duncan Harris, New York; John C. McNaughton, Philadelphia; William P Skirm, Trenton.

This projected system of electric roads is the most stupendous and important enterprise ever inaugurated in New Jersey since the building of the old Camden and Amboy Railroad in the thirties. It will do quite as much for the development and enrichment of the State. It is not merely a single trunk line, running by the nearest route between New York and Philadelphia, but a network of roads taking in and connecting all the principal cities, towns and villages of the State, and affording accommodations both for travel and traffic of the teeming millions massed in this populous centre and heart of the continent.

Starting at Paterson the road will pass through Upper Montclair, Montclair, Bloomfield, Orange, East Orange, West Orange, South Orange, Maplewood, Wyoming, Springfield, Westfield, Milburn, Fanwood and Netherwood to a connection with the present electrial railway system in the city of Plainfield; thence through Plainfield to Dunellen and Bound Brook, crossing the track of the New Jersey Central Railroad at Finderne, the road will continue past Hillsboro Station on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and Weston Station on the Philadelphia and Reading, Princeton, Lawrenceville and Trenton. Branches of the line will run from Bound Brook to New Brunswick, Somerville and Raritan, from Bloomfield to Caldwell and Irvington and to Morristown via Chatham and Madison. At Irvington connections will be made with the existing lines of the Consolidated Traction Company, making a direct route to Newark and Jersey City from North New Jersey.

From Westfield the road will be built to the city of Rahway, connecting there with the electric railway now being constructed through Woodbridge to Lebanon and Boynton Beach, with a spur from Woodbridge to Perth Amboy. Another branch will be built from the present system in Rahway to Elizabeth, connecting there with the Consolidated Company's system; also a branch from Bound Brook to the city of New Brunswick, connecting there with the present street passenger railway.

From Trenton the company will build to Philadelphia, passing through Morrisville, Tullytown, Bristol, Cornwall, Torresdale, Tacony, Holmesburg, Frankford and connecting there with existing lines to Philadelphia city, proper. It will also connect at Trenton with a line to be built on the east side of the Delaware to Camden, running almost parallel with the tracks of the Amboy division, passing through and connecting the towns of Bordentown, Edgewater Park, Beverly, Riverton, Palmyra and into Camden by existing lines, with probable branches to Merchantville, Moorestown and Mount Holly.

The entire system will comprise about 250 miles of electric railway, and will accommodate the travel of fully five millions of people. It will, while building, give employment to an army of men and impart a decided stimulus to the business of every place it passes through. When completed it will be a permanent and very important factor in the commercial and business life of all these cities and towns, and practically transform the farming sections it traverses into suburbs of the cities, to the great mutual advantage of both.

Nor will its advantages be limited to the facilities for travel and inter-communication that it will afford. For it is designed not only to carry passengers, but to transport, by means of combination trains, to be designed for local traffic, farming truck, agricultural implements, manufactured products, general merchandise, and all such goods and wares as enter into local commerce, at night.

The road will be built in sections, work to begin at half a dozen points, including Trenton. Gangs will operate from these points in opposite directions, one toward New York and the other toward Philadelphia. The aim will be to build the road between the most important and populous points first, so as to give immediate accommodation to local travel, and thus at once put the road on a paying basis as fast as it is built. The financial strength of the enterprise is further very materially promoted by the consolidation into the system of the local lines in different places. These lines embrace seventy miles of paying roads outside of Jersey City and Newark, and their earnings will be greatly increased through consolidation and the streams of traffic poured in over the through line. Besides, it will save the new company the necessity of securing franchises and building roads in these places. By these connections, consolidations and new lines the richest electric railway territory in America will be pre-empted. There is no shadow of doubt that it will prove the most valuable trolley road bonanza on the continent.

It will stretch diagonally across New Jersey with lateral branches and ramifications, taking in nearly all the large cities and principal towns of the State.

The scheme has been talked about for some time, but it is now to be a fact, and it will be one of the largest traction schemes of the century.

Construction on the road from Paterson southward will be begun in a few weeks, as soon as a few preliminary details are completed. It is the purpose to give New Jersey rapid transit, and at a cost to insure patronage from the start. The road will be an overhead trolley equipped with the latest and most improved electrical appliances. It will be built just as fast as municipal consents are granted. The connection with the Plainfield electric railway will be made as soon as the Fanwood Township Committee grants the franchise now pending.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

Mr. McQuaide's Big Dog Bites Georgie Voehl.

The large dog owned by James P. McQuaide of West Seventh street, which is charged with having bitten several persons, added another to its list of victims yesterday afternoon at 4. George, the six-year-old son of George A. Voehl of West Front street, was near the Babcock Building on his way home from school when the dog trotted up quietly, bit the boy's right wrist and then went on its way as if nothing had occurred.

The boy was taken to the rooms of Dr. Mathewson in the Babcock Building, where his wound was dressed by the physician. His wrist was deeply gashed by the dog's teeth. Mr. Voehl has been summoned home from his hunting trip in South Jersey.

Oliver's Defeat Unjust.

(From The Westfield Standard.)

It was nothing to the people's credit that they did not re-elect William M. Oliver to the position of County Clerk in which he has served the people so efficiently, vastly improving the public service during his clerkship, and having nothing whatever against him except that he was not on the winning ticket. It would be just as absurd and foolish to elect some one in place of George Kyte or George T. Parrot, the sheriff and surrogate, whose qualities of character eminently fit them for the delicate positions they hold—that of dealing with people in distress and bereavement; positions to which that of County Clerk holds a kindred relation. The trouble with the people is they do not stop to think and discriminate. It is bad enough when faithful officers are turned down by political party bosses; but when the people fail to put the premium of appreciation upon faithful service it is so much the worse.

Thanksgiving for the Poor.

The Relief Association intends giving the usual Thanksgiving dinner this year to its beneficiaries and the town poor. It is hoped that the many friends of the society will contribute generously, as is their custom, towards the supply, for the number to be helped is always a large one.

Contributions of money, vegetables and poultry may be sent to the Relief rooms, 303 West Second street, Tuesday, Nov. 27, and until noon Wednesday, Nov. 28.

SALLIE AMES BROOKS,
Secretary.

The Man of the Pure White Smile.

(From The Westfield Standard.)

Charles Nelson Codding knows just where he is at; he is at peace with all mankind. It is a good frame of mind to be in. He won his election in the face of opposition; some of it underhanded and unworthy, and some of it outspoken and within the fold. But it was all unavailing, and he returns to the Legislature, the people's choice, after a hot fight. May he be imbued with a spirit of partriotism to the people, which means opposition to the encroachments of monopolistic corporations!

"NEIGHBORHOOD SQUABBLE."

Craig Marsh Wins More Cases for Mrs. Tingley.

The Tingley-Runyon "neighborhood squabble", as Frank Bergen calls it, is getting interesting. Mrs. Tingley yesterday won her second suit in Elizabeth, and was awarded $100 damages and costs for the cutting of some trees done by Theodore Runyon over six years ago. This case was tried in the Court of Common Pleas. The jury were brought to Plainfield to view the premises, and they were out several hours before reaching their verdict.

The other case that Mrs. Tingley won was in the Supreme Court two terms ago, when Judge Van Syckel gave her a judgment to recover a small triangular tract of land one foot wide at the base and about one hundred feet long tapering to a point. She also recovered costs in that suit. There is still another suit which she may bring if she sees fit to do so, for mesne profits, as they are called, covering the time that Mr. Runyon had possession of the land. Craig A. Marsh is counsel for Mrs. Tingley and Frank Bergen for Mr. Runyon.

BAD START.

But There's Lots of Chance Ahead for the Park Club Bowlers.

The Park Club bowlers made a bad beginning for the season last evening. They went to Hoboken and were defeated by the Columbias 1558 to 1380. The opposing team was not very strong, but the high-score men of the Parks seemed unable to make the spares.

Discussing Plainfield Morals.

The meeting of the Plainfield Ministers Association held at the home of Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis was well attended. The reading of a paper by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards was postponed until the next meeting.

The whole session was taken up with an interesting confidential discussion of the moral condition of Plainfield and the best means of improving it. It had been expected that a citizen not a member of the association would be present to give information he had gathered about the morals of the young people of Plainfield, but he did not attend.

10 Days for Matthews.

James Matthews, alias Pointer Jack, got in trouble again yesterday afternoon. Ten-year-old Harry Vetterlein cycled by him yesterday afternoon on Craig place and referred to him as "Pointer Jack". Matthews went after the boy and threw him off the wheel.

The boy ran to Mrs. Mantz's house and was overtaken on the rear stoop. Matthews was beating him unmercifully when Samuel Taynor and others interfered. The man was arrested by Chief Marshal Pangborn and this afternoon he went to Somerville for ten days.

Routes and Rates to Winter Resorts.

The B. & O. Railroad Co. has just issued a little booklet, giving the routes and rates to various Winter resorts in Cuba, Florida, North Carolina, Virginia, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Georgia. The information is very conveniently arranged and indexed. Copies can be had by enclosing a two-cent stamp to Chas. O. Scull, Gen'l Pass. Agent, B. & O. R. R., Baltimore, Md. 2 t

George Bruce, Receiver.

George H. Bruce of Westfield has been appointed receiver for the American Ormonde Cycle Company, dealer in bicycles and sundries at 10 Barclay street, New York, on the application of Ernest J. Willis the President, on the ground that the company is insolvent. Only $13,000 is due to creditors other than stockholders.

$5 for His Drive.

Wm. Dolan was in the City Court this morning for reckless driving on West Second street election day. Judge Coddington adjudged him guilty and gave him his choice between a $5 fine and 20 days in jail. He paid the fine.

Grand Organizer Harry Easton is expected at the regular meeting of the International Order of Machinists to be held in the Sons of Temperance rooms tomorrow evening. A large attendance is requested.

Will Probably Move.

The governing board of the American Sabbath Tract Society is said to stand 11 to 8 in favor of moving the Sabbath Recorder plant from Alfred Centre to Plainfield.

ORGANIZED AID.

Meeting Held and Constitution Amended.

OFFCERS ELECTED FOR THE YEAR.

Miss Cornelia F. Bradford Talks Interestingly on the Work of a College Settlement—Plainfield Invited to Inspect.

The Citizens Organized Aid Association held their regular meeting last evening in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church. Reports were read by different officers and committees, and an amendment adopted to the constitution by which those contributing $10 annually should be made sustaining members.

The officers of the past year were re-elected, with the exception of the secretary, who declined. John Doull Miller was elected to this office.

By invitation Miss Cornelia F. Bradford, head worker of the Whittier House Jersey City, made a most interesting address on the work of a college settlement. She described the origin of such effort in London nearly thirty years ago in connection with Toynbee Hall, where Walter Besant found the suggestion for his "All Sorts and Conditions of Men". She mentioned other similiar institutions in England and in several of the larger American cities. The Whittier House is the only such settlement in New Jersey, and grown from very small beginning, a year ago, until now it is doing a most helpful work for the people in one of the neediest quarters of Jersey City. The residents at the house, young graduates from various women's colleges, are brought into helpful neighborly relations with the people living about them.

Friends in Montclair and Elizabeth and other neighborly cities have interested themselves in the support of the work, and a cordial invitation is extended to friends in Plainfield to call and inspect the house and its work.

The president of the Executive Committee is Dr. A. H. Bradford of Montclair. The treasurer, who receives all contributions, is H. Jay Hunt, 11 Cliff street, New York city.

DRUG CLERKS' SUNDAYS.

Rev. C. E. Herring Renews His Plea Against Sabbath Work.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—I should like to add a word to what has already appeared in your paper concerning drug clerks. Long hours and hard work seem to be their portion, and every other Sunday rest is apt to be used as a day of absolute rest. I candidly believe that opportunity should be given these men to attend their churches at least once every Sabbath; nay, there is no reason why they should not attend both services.

People are sick in the night, and yet the stores are closed every night from 10 till morning, and why must we have them open at such hours on Sunday?

CHARLES E. HERRING.

Court Nash.

An execution has been issued by Justice Nash in the case of Taylor et al against Illsley et al.

The landlord and tenant case of Vail against Matthews will be tried Nov. 22. Cases on contract will come up as follows: Cloyd against Cole, Nov. 20: Lees against Cole, Nov. 20; French against Delaney, Nov. 23; Vail against Delaney, Nov. 23.

Cycle Club Growing.

At the meet of the Plainfield Bicycle Club last evening nine new members were elected. The constitution was changed to suspend for 90 days the imposing of the regular initiation fee of $10. A special effort will be made to bring in new members during the next three months.

Court Crosley.

Henry Hatchett, colored, arrested on Race street at midnight, was sent to the County Jail by Borough Magistrate Crosley today.

Charles Herman for disturbing the peace on Manning avenue Sunday evening was fined $5.

Lyceum Bowling.

The following games in the Diocesan Union are announced:

Nov. 19.—C. Y. M. L. at the Institute, Newark.
Nov. 28.—Catholic Club at C. Y. M. L.
Dec. 5.—St. Josephs at C. Y. M. L.
Dec. 12.—Orange Valley at C. Y. M. L.

Steadily Growing.

Dr. Wright of Philadelphia, a noted Odd Fellow, made a fraternal visit to Queen City Lodge last evening. Two candidates were initiated at the meeting.

To Mend Their Drums.

The Independent drummers packed up all their drums last night to ship them today to New York, where they will be thoroughly overhauled by the makers.

Prayer for Young Men.

George S. Beebe will conduct the prayer meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening.

JUNIORS HAVE A FAIR.

Franklin Council Provides Pleasure to Its Friends and Profit to Itself.

Another fair began last night when Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., opened Independent Hall with dances, contests and sales of fancy articles and refreshments. The pretty, patriotic decorations of the Drum Corps had been supplemented by the additions of the Juniors. Whitney Frazee's music was in attendance and dancing went on without interruption until after midnight.

The prospects for a successful week of sales and social pleasure are more than usually encouraging. There are two contests among the women, one for a gold watch and another for a parlor lamp. A bicycle has been offered to excite rivalry among the boys. The largest donation received is a barrel of Pillsbury flour given by the makers. A large supply of fancy articles and other desirable goods has been provided.

The fair is managed by the following:

Committee—C. I. Young, chairman; W. V. Sutton, secretary; F. A. Long, treasurer; and Fred Leland, J. V. Beekman, Frank Splane and T. A. Kurzhals.

Doll table—Miss Cortell, Miss Hughes.
Candy table—Mrs. Young.
Cake table—Miss Cortwright.
Fancy table—Miss Schenck.
Soda water stand—Isaac Squires, Frank Jones.
Cloak room—J. Haffner.
Fish-pond—Fred Leland.
Floor—J. V. Beekman, W. V. Sutton.
Admission—Ephraim Compton.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The regular declamations in Assembly Hall were continued this morning by George A. Horne '95.

The drill of the cadet corps was held immediately after recess as usual Owing to the cold weather the drill will soon be discontinued.

The pronouncing match in the Senior class has interested the members of that class in the pronouncing of various words. Hereafter one period a week will be spent in pronouncing any words that have been heard mispronounced by any of the class during the week. Beware of your pronunciation now when the Seniors are around.

A challenge to a game of football has been received from the captain of the eleven of the New Brunswick High School Cadets. It has not yet been accepted but if a suitable team can be organized there is no doubt that the game will be played. The date will probably be next Saturday.

The contest with the North Plainfield School team will probably occur tomorrow afternoon on the Park avenue grounds.

The Senior Class held a class meeting this afternoon immediately after dismissal. H. Oscar Nightingale was elected class poet, and Miss Helen A. Hazen historian. Further arrangements were made for the Thanksgiving Day spread and it was decided to engage Max Wierth as caterer.

Miss Etta Raybert, Charles B. Morse and Miss Frank E. Bailey were appointed a committee to confer with committees from the other classes to choose school colors and a school yell. NINETY-FIVE.

Wedding Congratulations.

A delightful surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Moebius on East Second street last night. The affair was in honor of the recent marriage of the host and hostess and the guests took advantage of the opportunity to bring wedding presents.

Dancing to Naylor's music was continued until nearly 4 this morning. A supper was served at 12. The guests included the Misses Sarah Cain, Mary Kearns, Annie Kearns, and Emma Moebius of Paterson, Robert Hodge, William Blake, B. Blake, John and Joseph Kearns, I. M. Morris, Mrs. William Hodge and Mrs. William Pangborn.

Death of T. F. Gambling.

Theodore F. Gambling died at his home, 417 West Fifth street, at 10:30 this morning. He was 57 years of age. He leaves a wife and several step-children. He was formerly employed in the Pond Machine Tool Works. The funeral services will be held at the house Friday afternoon at 2:30.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Miss Florence Hawkins leads the meeting in the First Church of Christ this evening.

—Kate Parkinson of North Plainfield has been committed to the State Industrial School by Judge Bartine.

—A saddle-horse ran away on Prospect avenue yesterday afternoon and received several bad cuts from barbed-wire fences.

—Alexander Prentice of the first mountain was examined by Dr. J. H. Carman this morning and declared insane. Arrangements were made to commit him to the Trenton asylum.

—Mind-Cure Doctor: "Make up your mind that there is no pain, and there is none. Five dollars, please." Patient (moving toward the door): "Make up your mind there is no payin', and there is none. Good day, sir. I take my five dollars down to Peck's."

ABSOLUTELY PURE

WOOL IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The McKinley Tariff Has Cost $50 Per Head for Every Sheep In the State.

Pennsylvania has a population of 5,500,000, and they consume much more than $100,000,000 of woolen goods per annum, on which the McKinley tariff levied taxes averaging not less than 80 per cent. This tax is paid by the consumers ostensibly to protect the wool growing interests of the state and country.

Making very liberal allowance in every way, the taxes paid by the people of Pennsylvania under the McKinley tariff for the woolen goods they consume could not be less than $50,000,000 a year. In other words, the people of Pennsylvania put their hands into their pockets under the McKinley tariff and paid $50,000,000, as is claimed, for the protection of the woolgrowers.

There are in round numbers 1,000,000 sheep in Pennsylvania. When the tax on wool was very much less than that of the McKinley bill, we had many more sheep, reaching as high as 3,422,000 in 1868, but under an unbroken system of high taxes on wool our sheep industry has declined until today we have not more than one sheep to every five people in the state, and each one of these five people has been paying under the McKinley tariff an average tax of about $10 to protect that one sheep.

The tax paid by the people of Pennsylvania on woolen goods under the McKinley tariff amounted in round numbers to $50,000,000 annually. In other words, our people paid an average tax of about $50 per head for every sheep that exists in the state, which would be from 10 to 20 times their entire market value. Even in Washington county, the largest sheep county in the state, the people will be largely benefited by free wool over and above all possible losses to woolgrowers. The taxes that the people of that county alone would pay on woolen goods under the McKinley bill would buy out the entire sheep product of the county in a very few years at the most.—Philadelphia Times.

RECORD OF THE M'KINLEY BILL.

It Brought Disaster to the Commerce and Industry of the Nation.

When Grover Cleveland was elected president, the country was still in the throes of the commercial depression incident to and following upon the famous Grant-Ward fiasco and the general condition of rottenness that failure revealed among New York banks of a certain class. The failures of 1884 numbered 10,968, and the total liabilities involved $226,343,427. The following year, the first of Cleveland's administration, public confidence was so far restored that the liabilities of bankrupt concerns that year fell to $124,220,321 and in 1886 to $114,644,119. In 1888 the Republicans elected Harrison on a platform in which the notorious McKinley plank was, to say the least, the most remarkable feature. Immediately the commercial world felt the influence of the proposed revolution in the nation's tariff history, for it was a revolution in that the protectionist pirates threw off all disguise and boldly demanded the nation's money or its life.

Oct. 6, 1890, the McKinley bill went into effect. The result was a paralysis of many lines of trade, and failures followed fast, the number in 1891 reaching the unprecedented figure of 12,273, with liabilities of $189,868,638. Then followed an era of industrial depression such as the country never before experienced. Manufactories of all kinds closed their doors, and honest artisans were thrown out of employment to become wanderers over the land, seeking for a pittance to stay their hunger. In 1893 the failures reached the stupendous number of 14,212, with liabilities aggregating $331,422,939. That is the record of the McKinley bill as shown in the commercial and industrial life of the nation.—Chicago Times.

"No duties should be levied for protection that are not needed for revenue," said Senator Sherman. McKinley has received few severer rebukes than this from Democratic sources. It is evident that he is out of touch with all parties. McKinleyism is a dead duck.—Exchange.

Opened the Eyes of the People.

The larger the "revolt" in Louisiana is made to appear the better. It only makes clearer the gigantic system of robbery to which the consumers of the United States are subjected.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In a Bad Position.

Benjamin Harrison is in an uncomfortable position. He cannot repudiate McKinleyism without crawling out from under a large section of his own administration.—Washington Post.

They Will Be Permitted to Take a Rest.

Tom Reed says Republicans can do little before 1897. Will they be able to do anything even by that time?—Chicago Post.

A traveler stopped for the night at a cabin in the Georgia woods. "I am very hungry," he said to the host. "Have you anything to eat?"

"Nuthin but possum."

The traveler winced, but watched patiently for the repast.

After the lapse of a half hour the host came in, accompanied by three hound dogs and holding a lightwood torch aloft.

"Here," he said to his almost starving guest, "take this rabbit foot an rub my shoulder with it."

"What is that for?" asked the guest.

"Well, ding it all, ain't I got to go out an ketch a possum fer yer supper?"

GEMS IN VERSE.

Old Ironsides.

Aye, tear her tattered ensign down.
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky.
Beneath it rang the battle shout
And burst the cannon's roar.
The meteor of the ocean air
Shall sweep the clouds no more!

Her deck, once red with heroes' blood,
Where knelt the vanquished foe,
When winds were hurrying o'er the flood,
And waves were white below,
No more shall feel the victor's tread
Or know the conquered knee.
The harpies of the shore shall pluck
The eagle of the sea!

Oh, better that her shattered hull
Should sink beneath the wave.
Her thunders shook the mighty deep,
And there should be her grave.
Nail to the mast her holy flag,
Set every threadbare sail
And give her to the god of storms,
The lightning and the gale!

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Songs of the Heart.

I love the sweet songs that never can die,
That gladden the heart and moisten the eye,
Echoes of song from the morning of life,
A balm to the heart when weary of strife.

Oh, sing me a song of the babbling brook,
The trees overhanging its shady nook,
Where the pebbles the purling waters part,
Murmuring music so sweet to the heart.

Sing me a song of the house on the hill,
The creaking water wheel down by the mill.
The old broken boat we rocked in our play
And laughed as the eddies drifted away.

Sing me a song of the bucket and well,
Daisies and buttercups down in the dell,
Of the droning bee and its drowsy tune
In the listless lull of the summer moon.

Sing me a song of a mother so kind;
Bring the loved features back fresh to my mind.
Over the mists of the years that have flown
Sounds that sweet voice in its tenderest tone.

Memories humble and lowly the theme,
Only the glimpse of a long ago dream,
Tenderly tuned by simplicity's art—
These are the poems and songs of the heart.

—Jesse P. Tompkins.

Every Year.

The spring has less of brightness
Every year,
And the snow a ghastlier whiteness
Every year,
Nor do summer flowers quicken
Nor autumn fruitage thicken
As they once did, for they sicken
Every year.

It is growing darker, colder,
Every year
As the heart and soul grow older
Every year.
I care not now for dancing
Or for eyes with passion glancing.
Love is less and less entrancing
Every year.
Of the charms of friendship ended
Every year,
Of the ties that still might bind me
Until time to death resigned me
My infirmities remind me
Every year.

Ah, how sad to look before us
Every year,
While the cloud grows darker o'er us
Every year;
When we see the blossoms faded
That to bloom we might have aided
And immortal garlands braided
Every year.

To the past go more dead faces
Every year,
As the loved leave vacant places
Every year.
Everywhere the sad eyes meet us,
In the evening's dusk they greet us,
And to come to them entreat us
Every year.

"You are growing old," they tell us,
"Every year.
"You are more alone," they tell us,
"Every year.
You can win no new affection,
You have only recollection,
Deep sorrow and dejection,
Every year."

Yes, the shores of life are shifting
Every year,
And we are seaward drifting
Every year.
Old places, changing, fret us,
The living more forget us,
There are fewer to regret us
Every year.

But the truer life draws nigher
Every year,
And its morning star climbs higher
Every year.
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burdens lighter,
And the dawn immortal brighter
Every year.

—Albert Pike.

The Cry of Loneliness.

Not unto every heart is God's good gift
Of simple tenderness allowed. We meet
With love in many fashions when we lift
First to our lips life's waters bitter sweet.
Love comes upon us with resistless power
Of curbless passion and with headstrong will;
It plays around like April's breeze and shower
Or calmly flows, a rapid stream, and still;
It comes with blessedness unto the heart
That welcomes it aright, or—bitter fate—
It wrings the bosom with so fierce a smart
That love, we cry, is cruelest than hate.
And then, ah, me, when love has ceased to bless,
Our broken hearts cry out for tenderness!

We long for tenderness like that which hung
About us, lying on our mother's breast—
A selfish feeling, that no pen or tongue
Can praise aright, since silence sings it best;
A love as far removed from passion's heat
As from the chilliness of its dying fire;
A love to lean on when the failing feet
Begin to totter and the eyes to tire.
In youth's brief heyday hottest love we see—
The reddest rose we grasp, but when it dies
God grant later blossoms, violets meet,
May spring for us beneath life's autumn skies!
God grant that some loving one be near to bless
Our weary way with simple tenderness!

—All the Year Round.

Song of a Model Man.

No word of blame e'er passed his lips,
No taunt he ever uttered,
No sneering gibes nor unkind quips,
No imprecations muttered.

He never swore in all his life,
Howe'er his hopes were broken;
He never growled about his wife,
But left his thoughts unspoken.

His tongue ne'er caused a mortal pang;
He used no word he shouldn't.
No ribald songs he ever sang,
For he was dumb and couldn't.

—Elliott Flower.

THE GOVERNMENT LOAN

Bankers Ready To Give Gold for Bonds.

President Cleveland Assured That the New Issue Will Be Taken Care Of—He Will Not Wait for Congress To Act—Fifty Millions at Least Will Be Issued.

Washington, Nov. 13.—In spite of denials from the treasury department, it may be assumed as true that a bond issue is contemplated to take place almost immediately. It is understood that Mr. Carlisle was informed of Mr. Cleveland's desires in the matter for the first time Saturday night, and that now it is a settled thing that the issue is to be made without awaiting authorization from congress. Mr. Cleveland is probably satisfied that should he await for authority from congress he would wait to no purpose, and he would rather act in the case during their absence than when a resolution of condemnation might be passed simultaneously with the issue.

The issue of bonds to make up the deficit in the gold reserve in the treasury has been discounted, and Wall street, which means the financial center of the country, is awaiting the announcement which is expected at any time.

What the amount of the issue will be is problematical and will not be known until the formal announcement and call for subscriptions are made known officially, but a well known bank president, who is in the confidence of the administration, said that it would be at least $50,000,000. Whether it would be in excess of that amount he would not say.

New York, Nov. 13.—Five presidents of national banks who are regarded as the leaders of the bank presidents in New York city, met at the office of Henry W. Cannon, president of the Chase National bank, late yesterday. They were Mr. Cannon, Presidents Nash of the Corn Exchange National, Tappen of the Gallatin National, Simmons of the Fourth National, and Williams of the Chemical National bank. These gentlemen had attended a meeting of the building committee of the Clearing House association, and gathered in the offices of the Chase National bank to discuss the impending government loan. The consensus of opinion was that the bankers of New York would give up large amounts of gold for the purchase of the new issue of government bonds. It is expected that investors will subscribe largely for the new bonds and the banks will furnish to depositors freely the gold to take the bonds. This decision is of importance, as the banks represented at this informal conference, with the Union Trust and United States and Central Trust companies, hold the bulk of the gold in New York. Presidents King, Stewart and Olcott, of the trust companies mentioned, have already extended to the administration their assurances that the new issue will be taken care of. When the February issue was made depositors had difficulty in obtaining gold from banks, and many only secured legal tenders, which were presented at the sub-treasury to obtain the gold. The government thus failed to secure over $38,000,000 gold for the $58,000,000 netted by the sale of $50,000,000 bonds.

The decision of the bankers to give up their gold freely will consequently net a larger amount of gold to the government as the result of the forthcoming $50,000,000 issue, estimated at over $50,000,000.

It is understood in New York that the new issue will be announced within forty-eight hours, if the circulars and subscriptions blanks can be prepared in that time.

THE COOK GANG PLUNDERING.

Holding Up Farmers and Stealing Horses.

Muskogee, I. T., Nov. 13.—The Cook gang held up farmers and stole horses and saddles six miles from here early in the morning. They are headed toward Fort Gibson and a posse started out last night. Seven of the gang went to the farmhouse of James Dinkens, near Perry and demanded food, which was refused. The outlaws then bound Dinkens, his wife and daughter and plundered the house. They were not released until neighbors arrived in the evening. Elmer Lucas, a member of the gang under arrest at Fort Smith, Ark., made a full confession Saturday of his connections with Bill Cook. Lulu Cook, who was arrested last week at Tahlequah is at liberty here on bond. She has written a long statement to the public, charging that marshals harassed her brothers Bill and Jim until they were forced into outlawry.

Exorbitant Rates.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The new freight rate for eastbound shipments of grain went into effect yesterday. All shipments of grain under this rule will cost twenty-five cents a hundred pounds. This rate is regarded by shippers as exorbitant and there is a feeling that it will not be enforced. Eastbound grain shipments have not been heavy of late and this rate they say would almost entirely stop business.

Long Distance Horse Race.

Paris, Nov. 13.—The famous mares, Merveilleuse, Pompone and Gazelle, completed yesterday a race from Paris to Havre and back. The distance of 264 miles was covered by Pompone, who won, in 53 hours and 45 minutes. Despite the rains and heavy roads Pompone was comparatively fresh when she finished.

Chicago Policemen Suspended.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—The superintendent of police last night suspended seven police board on the charge of neglect of duty on election day. They are accused specifically of allowing citizens to be assaulted and driven from the polls in various parts of the city.

Dr Best, the old professor and king of the medical school was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced slight young student who stood before him. The young man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before, he had graduated at the top of the class and as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellow professors as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr Best was a New York physician of wide reputation and had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges both because it was his own college and because the field work upon his lectures covered, gave him almost the only vacation that he could Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 5, 1894.

JAMES T. MAC MURRAY, City Clerk.

An ordinance to lay out and open Stelle avenue and a portion of Madison avenue.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That the street known as Stelle avenue, as already laid out, opened and dedicated to the public, and a portion of Madison avenue hereinafter described, as already laid out, opened and dedicated to the public, and shown on maps entitled respectively: "Application map to lay out and open Stelle avenue from the easterly side of Plainfield avenue to the easterly side of Madison avenue, of the city of Plainfield, New Jersey, October, 1894. DEBS SUSTAINED.

Labor Commission Condemns the Railroad Managers' Association

Cincinnati, Nov. 13.—The United States government report on the great railway strike in connection with the Pullman trouble has been made public.

The troubles of the Illinois Central and the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific companies were the ones investigated. According to the testimony the railroads lost in property destroyed, hire of United Steates deputy marshals and other incidental expenses at least $685,308. The loss of earnings of these roads is estimated at $4,672,916. Some 3,100 employes at Pullman lost in wages as estimated at least $350,000. About 100,000 employes upon the twenty-four roads centering at Chicago all of which were more or less involved in the strike, lost in wages as estimated at least $1,389,143. Many of these employes are still adrift and losing wages.

The commission says of the Pullman Palace Car company:

For the year ending July 1, 1893, the dividends were $2,520,000 and the wages $7,223,719.51. For the year ending July 1, 1894, the dividends were $2,780,000 and the wages $2,471,701.89.

As the result of the Pullman system and its growth when the depression of 1893 came morally calling for mutual concessions as to wages, rents, etc., we find on the one side a very wealthy and unyielding corporation, and upon the other a multitude of employes of comparatively excellent character and skill but without local attachments or any interested responsibility in the town, its business, tenements or surroundings.

The conditions created at Pullman enabled the management at all times to assert with great vigor its assumed right to fix wages and rents absolutely and to repress the sort of independence which leads to labor organizations and their attempts at mediation, arbitration, strikes, etc.

In speaking of the general managers' association of railway companies the commission says:

The association is an illustration of the persistent and shrewdly devised plans of corporations to over-reach their limitations and to usurp indirectly powers and rights not contemplated in their charters and not obtainable from the people or their legislatures.

It further says that the legalizing of this "pooling" would result in an aggregation of power and capital dangerous to the people and their liberties as well as to employes and their rights. The question would then certainly arise as to which should control, the government or the railroads, and the end would inevitably be government ownership. Unless ready for that result and all that it implies the government must restrain corporations within the law and prevent them ffom forming unlawful and dangerous combinations. At least, so long as railroads are thus permitted to combine to fix wages and for their joint protection, it would be rank injustice to deny the right of all labor upon all railroads to unite for similar purposes.

THE SERVICES AT MOSCOW.

Alexander III.'s Remains Removed St. Petersburg.

Moscow, Nov. 13.—The members of the court, noblemen, conspicuous citizens, delegates and crowds of all other classes assembled at the Kremlin at to attend the ceremony called sortie. The chief subject of interest was the address of Czar Nicholas to his subjects. Reporters were excluded.

The czar, leading his mother, passed along the line of noblemen and grandees to the dais, from which he spoke. It is said that he expressed in firm tones the grief he felt in revisiting Moscow under such sad conditions. His father had entrusted to him, he said, a message of thanks to the people of Moscow for their loyalty to him. For himself, it would be his aim to walk in his father's steps. The czar then conducted his mother to the Cathedral of the Archangel Michael, where the imperial and royal princes had assembled for service. After the prayers the signal of three guns announced the time of the departure for the railway station. The procession left the cathedral in a dull rain. The thick layer of sand on the new laid pavement had been churned into mud. The silence was broken with cheers when the czar passed.

During the procession a runaway horse dashed among the image-bearers, seriously injuring one of them.

Assemblymen Entitled to Seats.

Albany, Nov. 13.—Deputy Attorney General Parsons says that the 128 members elected to the legislature are entitled to their seats. The new constitution has nothing to do with their election, as it does not go into effect until January 1. The 150 members to be elected under the new constitution cannot be elected until November, 1895, the constitution not calling for any special election and the presumption being that members of the legislature cannot be elected under a constitution not in effect.

St. Petersburg Crowded.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 13.—Although the czar's funeral is a week off the hotels are crowded and strangers are coming to the city by scores with every train. Nearly a thousand wreaths and crosses have been received from princes and members of their courts, and fully a thousand more are expected to arrive with the body. The work of draping the city is being pushed rapidly to completion. As all the decorations are made under the management of the police, they are inartistic and monotonous.

Gen. Booth in Cleveland.

Cleveland, Nov. 13.—General Booth, of the Salvation army, was warmly received by local Salvationists and other Christian workers on his arrival in the city. After an informal reception at the depot he was driven to the home of Judge and Mrs. Conway W. Noble, whose guest he will be until to-morrow. The local ministers gave the general a reception yesterday afternoon.

Accepts Weston's Challenge.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Henry Schmehl, the Chicago pedestrian, has accepted Edward Payson Weston's terms for a six days walking match, to take place at Rochester, N. Y., or Newark, N. J., providing that Weston will make the stake $1,000 instead of $500. Schmehl is willing to walk in Chicago for $500 but will not go east for less than $1,000.

SHOT THE BURGLAR.

Rev. Mr. Seckerson Wounded a Robber Who Got in His Room.

Rev. Frederick A. Seckerson, assistant pastor of the Clinton Avenue Congregational Church, in Brooklyn, had an encounter with a burglar in his room, on the first floor of the three-story brown stone house at 376 Greene avenue this morning. Mr. Seckerson received a cut on the right arm two inches long, and the burglar was shot somewhere about the body. The latter made his escape, leaving behind him a trail of blood leading half way out into the rear yard, which faces on Lexington avenue.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Joseph Sandford and bride are home from Old Point Comfort.

Mrs. W. N. Tier has returned from a two-weeks visit at Nyack.

Mrs. Lewis Huff of Jersey City has been visiting her son, S. Ira Huff of West Front street.

The wedding of A. G. Slevin and Miss Dumont of Dunellen takes place in St Mary's Church Saturday morning at 11.

Mrs A D VanSciver of Syracuse is visiting her mother, Mrs. Ann Walker, who is ill at her home on East Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Siebrecht of New Rochelle have been visiting Mrs. Siebrecht's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Titsworth of Madison avenue.

Mrs. Maxson Dunham, who was brutally beaten by a negro, continues cheerful in spite of her suffering, and is somewhat improved.

Miss Annie Speer of Washingtonville was happily surprised last evening by about 30 of her friends, who enjoyed a most delightful visit.

Mrs. Asa Vail has returned to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank White of Brooklyn, after a visit with her grandson, E Vail of Elmwood place.

Mrs. Parmenta and Miss Mary Schenck of Summit, accompanied by their sister, Mrs. Ely of Afton, enjoyed a delightful drive to Plainfield yesterday. They spent the day with friends and old acquaintances, and a very pleasant time was experienced by all. Their return home was made by moonlight.

County Clerk Oliver was out for a short time Sunday, the first since his recent attack of illness, and yesterday was at his office preparing for the reception of his successor, Mr. Howard. Mr. Oliver is improving, but he is not well. He received a sincere welcome from office attaches and others who found him at his desk.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wakefield of 33 Park place have again been sadly afflicted in the loss of their youngest daughter, Frances, in her second year. She died last evening of diphtheria, this being the second death in the family in one week. The other sick child is progressing favorably under Dr. Adams's care. Every parent feels deeply with Mr. and Mrs. Wakefield in their sorrow.

Mad Dog.

THE TALK OF GOTHAM

FACTS AND FANCIES DISCUSSED IN THE NATION'S CHIEF CITY.

The Vanderbilts Again. Mrs. William K. to Have a Divorce and $3,000,000. Something About John C. Eno. Marquis de Crosic in Hard Luck.

There is an old saying about going away from home to hear the news, and as the world is looking after the news and gossip that interest New York, it is not especially remarkable to find the latest alleged developments in the Cornelius Vanderbilt case in a Pittsburg paper, the Chronicle-Telegraph.

In this it is said that within a short time the final financial arrangements are believed to have been made between Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, and suit for divorce will be begun under the laws of Rhode Island.

The sum offered by Mr. Vanderbilt was computed after long and careful consideration by the family lawyers. It is understood to be $3,000,000. As a wife of a multi-millionaire Mrs. Vanderbilt has naturally a right to a very large sum as dower.

She will take the sum mentioned in place of alimony and of her right of dower.

The splendid establishment known as "Marble House," on Bellevue avenue, Newport, was a gift to her in former years from Mr. Vanderbilt, and this represents nearly, if not quite, $2,000,000. The dwelling cost about $1,000,000, and the interior is fitted with the most expensive furniture, hangings and decorations. There has also been a vast outlay of money on the grounds.

Upon her return from Europe a few weeks ago Mrs. Vanderbilt went to Newport, where she secluded herself in the marble palace, only driving out daily for an hour or two behind a pair of spirited black horses.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, it is understood, will have the legal custody of her children, but it is believed that the two eldest, who are almost grown up, will be allowed to make their choice and live with their father or his family if they wish to. Not for years has a domestic infelicity agitated New York society as greatly as that of the Vanderbilts. Only the Coleman Drayton case can be compared with it for interest that was of a different character.

If John C. Eno is forced to leave New York again by the rehabilitation of the indictments against him, it is quite probable that his term of imprisonment would seem no more of a punishment to him than a compulsory residence in Canada or elsewhere. When he came back from Montreal, after his long exile, he literally lived on Broadway for three days, and he has been walking up and down that thoroughfare ever since. His stamping ground was the Hoffman House, and he vibrated between there and the Gilsey about sixteen hours out of the twenty-four. Since his return he has increased in weight and cheerfulness. Very many New Yorkers are familiar with his face and figure, though they may not be able to place him. He invariably wears a sack coat, which fits him rather snugly, and a low-crown derby hat. He has a small mustache, a ruddy color, and the look of a typical Broadway habitue.

The Marquis de Crosic, otherwise known as Richard de Logerot, is a rather pitiable illustration of the effect which the hard times have had upon men of the most placid and prosperous looking exterior. When he first came to New York he was a spruce, well-groomed and rather dandified looking man, and he soon gained an extraordinary reputation because of the number of hours he spent at the table in Delmonico's. His wife was a comely woman of rather plump build, and both of them lived very much in the public eye. They regularly engaged seats in the front row of the orchestra for every first night performance at the leading theatres, occupied a table near a particular window at Delmonico's, drove at stated hours in a victoria in the Park, and were on view at the opera, and, indeed, every other public event of importance. They usually went to breakfast at 10 o'clock, and remained at the table until nearly 12. A place was always reserved for them at the luncheon hour, and they entered Delmonico's promptly at 2 o'clock, and remained until nearly 4. Then they drove out, returning for a long dinner, and were almost invariably the last persons to leave the restaurant after midnight. The quiet and equable persistency with which they ate finally attracted the attention of people about town, and then, as they began to increase in girth as the years rolled by, they became a source of comment. When the Marquis de Crosic finally decided to open a hotel of his own, his absence from his accustomed place at Delmonico's created endless remark. By that time both the Marquis and his wife had become so stout as to be notable even in a crowd of overfed people. The increased weight of the Marquis has in the main disappeared under the stress of financial troubles, and he is once more down to something like the average weight of a reasonably stout man. He is a singularly amiable and good-natured individual, and the misfortunes which have overtaken him aroused a good deal of sympathy.

Miss Alida Chanler, the last young woman to be reported (and, apparently, without any truth in the rumor) engaged to George Vanderbilt, belongs to the Chanler family, who are prominent, not only because of their social position and wealth, but on account of their strong individuality. Miss Chanler is a sister-in-law of Amelia Rives, her oldest brother being Armstrong Chanler. She is a tall, handsome brunette, who is fond of all sorts of sport, and a girl who will, undoubtedly, make a brilliant match, even though she may not marry that most prominent of bachelors, Mr. George Vanderbilt.

Johanna, the chimpanzee who was the late lamented Chiko's neighbor in his winter quarters at the Arsenal in Central Park last winter, has returned to us again, and is on exhibition in her old cage on the second floor. She came in from the winter quarters of Barnum & Bailey's circus at Bridgeport, and will remain at the Arsenal until the circus starts out on its travels again next April. Now that Chiko is dead, Johanna is said to be the largest chimpanzee in captivity.

Drink and Longevity.

The British Medical Association has been investigating the question of longevity in connection with the use of alcoholic beverages. The terms used in the reports are rather elastic, but the figures are instructive.

Deaths to the number of 4,234, taken at random, show the average age of temperate drinkers to be 68 years; careless drinkers, 59 years; free drinkers, 57 years; intemperate drinkers, 53 years; total abstainers, 51 years. The analysis in the case of those who reach the age of over 80 shows that 15 per cent. were total abstainers, 10 per cent. heavy drinkers, and 75 per cent. moderate drinkers. Of those who lived over 90 years, 15 per cent. were total abstainers, 9 per cent. were hard and 75 per cent moderate drinkers.

REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:
I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.
I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:
For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.
So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.
I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

TWO GREAT SHIPS.

THE ST. LOUIS AND ST. PAUL WILL HAVE MANY IMPROVEMENTS.

They Have Remarkably Safe Water-tight Compartments, and are Ingeniously Equipped for Avoiding Delay in Entering Port.

The two new passenger steamships, the St. Louis and the St. Paul that the Cramps are building for the American Line, and to carry the American flag, will have many improvements and important safeguard against accidents.

It is well known that the principal source of danger to metal ships in the event of collision is that, as usually compartmented, they may be struck at the fastening edge of a bulkhead, and the two compartments adjacent to the bulkhead be thus at the same time completely flooded. Many a ship has been divided by bulkheads in such a way that if one compartment were flooded the ship would be perfectly sea worthy, but in case the ship should be struck on a bulkhead dividing two compartments both would be flooded, and she would invariably sink.

In the case of the St. Louis and her twin, the St. Paul, the new American line ships, however, the divisions in such that the ship would remain perfectly seaworthy with any two, or even three compartments flooded. This unbroken subdivision of the ships has an incidential advantage also in making them fireproof, as fire would be confined to one compartment.

In order to reduce the risks of accidents resulting from the breaking down of machinery, the new American vessels are fitted with two sets of engines, each set driving a separate screw. The engines are in two separate compartments, divided by a watertight bulkhead, and the boilers are in separate compartments, completely cut off from each other, so that these vessels might be in collision by being struck on the bulkhead, and could have a breakdown in their machinery such as may occur in any ordinary ship, and still be navigable and thoroughly safe and seaworthy.

They are also very much better able to avoid collision by having two sets of machinery, one of which could be readily reversed while the other was going ahead thus turning the vessel very quickly.

One point of great importance has received more attention in the American liners than it has in many of the other fast Atlantic steamers. It is not an uncommon thing for some of the fastest vessels to make a quick passage across the Atlantic, and then to have to wait for high tide for several hours outside the harbor bar, either at New York or Liverpool. In order to avoid such a necessity, the St. Louis and the St. Paul have been designed for a light draught. Proper immersion for their screws will be obtained by the use of water ballast in the double bottoms, which have been fitted throughout their length. On the passage over and before reaching the bar this water ballast will be pumped out and the vessel's draught greatly lessened. They are also a double precaution against injury by grounding. It is anticipated that these vessels will never have to wait outside the bar at New York.

Steam will be generated for the propelling machinery of these ships by forced draught, whereby together with the new and bold application of quadruple expansion to such colossal engines, the space and weight occupied by the machinery have been considerably reduced.

The displacement at twenty-six feet draught will be nearly 16,000 tons of salt water.

The motive power of these steamers consists of two quadruple expansion, vertical, six cylinder engines on four cranks, driving twin screws, with a working pressure of 200 pounds of steam, supplied by ten boilers. It is calculated that the engines will develop about 20,000 collective horse power. No prediction as to speed can be made, but the contract between the United States Post Office Department and the International Navagation Company requires that the ships shall be capable in ordinary weather of a sea speed of twenty knots.

The True Greatness of Phillip Brooks.

Two or three anecdotes of the late Phillips Brooks, told in the Golden Rule, are so characteristic of his nobility that we cannot help giving them space.

He was accustomed, as we all know, to preach to tremendous audiences wherever he went. But he never seemed to imagine that the crowds came to hear him. On one occasion he said to a brother clergyman for whom he frequently preached, and where every inch was taken whenever he came, "Grey what a splendid congregation you have!" He was a true pastor: for he visited poor and rich alike.

Two young men who had attended his church for a while suddenly stopped going. They roomed in rather a poor section of Boston, at the top of a high building. One day, answering a knock at their door, they were greeted by Phillips Brooks, who said: "Well, boys, you did not expect to see me here, did you?" They went to Trinity Church regularly after that.

The following incident is really touching. A poor, sick woman whom he visited was told by the physician that she must go out and get the air. She declared she could not, for there was no one with whom to leave her children. Still, the doctor impressed upon her the importance of fresh air. She confided her troubles to Phillips Brooks. A day or two later the physician dropped in to see how she was, and found the late Bishop caring for the poor children, while the mother took her airing. It was such deeds as these that made him the great man he was.

Finest in the World.

The frame that encloses the "Virgin and Child," at the Milan Cathedral, is said to be the finest in the world. Some idea of its value may be gained when it is stated that the frame is eight feet long and six feet wide, formed of hammered gold, with an inner molding of lapis-lazuli. At the corners are hearts designed in large pearls and precious stones. This picture frame is probably worth upwards of $100,000.

Mongolians Are Not Chinese.

The Pekin news that "the Emperor's palace is guarded by Mongolians, the Chinese being no longer trusted," shows that in China the term Mongol means more than it does under the nearly universally accepted classification of Blumenbach. Very likely the John Chinaman you see here and there in a laundry or on the street doesn't consider himself a Mongolian at all, unless he happens to have actually come from Mongolia.

A STORY OF OLD LACE.

Queen Victoria Gave a Prize for a Flounce Now in an Ink Store.

Here's a curious bit of history that I ran across during the week. In 1851 Queen Victoria offered a handsome prize for the best piece of Irish point lace to be exhibited in the First World's Fair. Some patient Irish girl's fingers caught the fog that lies above the bogs of Ireland in the morning and wove it with marvellous intricacy into a beautiful flounce about four yards long and a yard wide. It was a wonder of film. People held their breath when they looked at it for fear it would dissolve. It was a vapory story of harps and heather and thistles melting into each other; a cobwebby illusion, so artfully and cunningly devised that it looked like a smoke poem. It won the prize, and Senator John Minor Botts, of Virginia, then travelling in Europe with a big bank account, saw it at the World's Fair surrounded by a crowd of wonder-struck people, and bought it. He gave 800 guineas for it and it floated of triumphantly, like all the best and some of the worst Irish things do, to America. It was munificently presented to Julia Dean, the distinguished actress, then about to become the bride of the son of Senator Robert Y. Hayne, of South Carolina, a friend and colleague of Botts.

Perhaps there are men and women in New York now who recall the nights on Broadway when Julia Dean wore that skirt over a dark-blue ground in "The Hunchback," and can tell you how many lorgnettes were levelled at it, and how poverty-struck the stage has been in laces since. It was known the world over like a picture or an epic as the finest web of Cross McCarrick point ever stitched. Well, it suddenly disappeared. I suppose the Irish people made up their minds that the American sun had melted it. It is a good many years since then. But the other day, as I was going down Beekman street, our old friend Walter Cooper, the song-writer, called me into the dingy commercial den of John G. Lightbody & Co., makers of printing ink, and unlocking the big safe, took out a clumsily wrapped parcel that looked like a long-shoreman's lunch, and opening it, spread the ecume de mer on a desk—and there was the Cross McCarrick film that the Queen had felt of and Julia Dean in her triumphs had drawn round her stately figure.

I believe one of Julia Dean Hayne's latest acts was to marry a cooper in California. When she died this flounce was in an old trunk among other personal effects, and so by a common fate it passed from garret to garret and was finally pulled out by our friend Walter, who carried it up to McCreery's lace man to know what it was worth, and the first thing the lace man said to him was: "See here, where did you get that? I've seen it before. It's worth more than twenty times its weight in rubies."

Then explanations and a family consultation as to whether it should go into the Metropolitan Museum or be put up at auction, with reserved seats for actresses. And pending decision it is stuffed in a pigeon-hole down in Beekman street.—Nym Crinkle in World.

A Great Mining Yarn.

Four miners arrived in Tacoma from Alaska last week, bringing each $100,000 in gold dust, which they said was the result of two seasons' work in the Yukon country. They said that all the old-timers, who have been long on the ground and have mastered its peculiarities, have struck it rich during the last season. There is good evidence of this in the fact that a steamer called at Tacoma a few days ago, en route for San Francisco, from Alaska, having aboard about $200,000 in gold dust, which her officers said was a usual load this season. Some big nuggets, averaging twenty to thirty ounces, have been found. But the mining is exceedingly difficult. About 800 miners will winter in the Yukon district this year. The influx of miners has been so great that there is likely to be a great scarcity of provisions before spring. A big rush to the region is looked for next year, because the placers have panned out so well.

An Odd Strike.

There was an odd thing in strikes in Owensburg, Ky., not long ago, when the employees of a bank quit work and left the institution without any one to carry on business for a time. The directors, in an attempt to cut down expenses, reduced the salary of the cashier by $200, and that of the bookkeeper by $100, and discharged the assistant bookkeeper. The cashier and bookkeeper promptly went on strike, and the bank opened up next morning with no one behind the counters. The directors were hastily convened, an immediate restoration of old rates was ordered, and the strikers resumed work.

Hog Island Was Once Cheap.

Hog Island, on the Virginia coast, where Mr. Cleveland took a somewhat celebrated outing, was once bought for $3,000 by a New Yorker who expected to send the cedar timber of the island to New York for use in shipbuilding, but found the venture unprofitable because of the cost of transportation. The timber in question was laid bare by the encroachment of the sea upon the sand dunes that had buried old wood lands. The wood thus resurrected was far more valuable than growing timber.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1. Our price 45c and 90c.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

Westfield's Warm Meeting.

At the Westfield Town Committee meeting last night the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company was represented by Mr. Bethel of Philadelphia, who in replying to the objection of a taxpayer that the trolley cars would frighten horses, remarked that two weeks ago he had been driving in the suburbs of Philadelphia with a young horse which went along slowly while passing the cars.

A voice from the rear of the hall—"That must have been a Philadelphia horse."

Again when Mr. Bethel stated that the Millstone streets were no wider than Mountain avenue and two tracks were laid there, Mr. Barton in stentorian voice cried "you are a liar and I can prove it". After this outburst Mr. Bethel admitted that he had never been in Millstone.

Mr. Gardner tried to throw oil upon the troubled waters but Mr. Bethel would not subside until President Wells announced that the whole matter was adjourned for one week and the committee proceeded with other business.

Funeral of Peter Vandeventer.

Funeral services were held this afternoon at 2:30 over the remains of Peter Vandeventer at the home of his parents, Mr and Mrs. Wm. Vandeventer, at the house 336 East Fifth street.

The attendance was very large and there were many beautiful floral offerings. Rev. Cornelius Schenck read from the Scriptures and spoke of the young man's death briefly and tenderly.

The interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

A Good Indication.

Medical practitioners of prominence are prescribing for the cure of diseases springing from derangement of the digestive organs, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. This professional endorsement is justified by the fact that no other preparation has been found so efficacious in that class of disorders, even in the most advanced and severe cases. It has cured gravel in the kidneys, stone in the bladder and infflamation of the kidneys, where all other medicine failed. It can be purchased of any druggist. A book is wrapped about each bottle, explaining its use in the different diseases.

A Youthful Alexander.

A friend of mine has a little boy who has just reached that age where he is interesting. The other afternoon he was found sitting on the steps of the veranda looking very much downcast and his mother asked him what the trouble was.

"We'll have to move away from here," he said.

"Why?" asked his mother.

"Oh, I've done up every kid in the block and their ain't any more fun here."—Buffalo News.

SLEEPY MAN.

When the Sleepy Man comes with dust in his eyes,
Oh, weary, my dearie, so weary!
He shuts up the earth, and he opens the skies,
So hushaby, weary, my dearie!

He smiles through his fingers and shuts up the sun,
Oh, weary, my dearie, so weary!
The stars that he loves he lets out one by one,
So hushaby, weary, my dearie!

He comes from the castles of Drowsyboytown,
Oh, weary, my dearie, so weary!
At the touch of his hand the tired eyelids fall down,
So hushaby, weary, my dearie!

He comes with a murmur of dream in his wings,
Oh, weary, my dearie, so weary!
And whispers of mermaids and wonderful things,
So hushaby, weary, my dearie!

Then the top is a burden, the bugle a bane,
Oh, weary, my dearie, so weary!
When one would be faring down Dreamaway lane,
So hushaby, weary, my dearie!

When one would be wending in Lullaby Wherry,
Oh, weary, my dearie, so weary!
To Sleepy Man's castle by Comforting ferry,
So hushaby, weary, my dearie!

SHE'S A GREAT SHIP

Thousands at the Christening of the St. Louis.

Mrs. Cleveland Stood Sponsor for the Vessel—A Distinguished Party from Washington Accompanied the President and His Wife to the Quaker City.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—The magnificent steamship St. Louis of the American line was successfully launched at Cramps' ship yard; the affair was witnessed by fully 50,000 people. Mrs. Cleveland, wife of the president, broke the traditional bottle of champagne on the bow of the noble ship as it glided down the ways, at the same time uttering these words: "I christen thee St. Louis." In this instance, and for the first time since the ceremony was observed at Cramps' ship yard, the champagne was of American manufacture. All preparations for the launch had been carefully made, and although the ship is 120 feet longer than any that has ever been launched at the yard, the difficult feat of getting the vessel from the ways into the water was accomplished without a hitch.

Mrs. Cleveland was accompanied by her husband and a distinguished party. The special train from Washington reached the ship yard at noon. The party was made up as follows: Secretary Herbert and Mrs. Micou, Attorney General Olney, Secretary Morton, Mrs. Gresham, Mrs. Lamont, Secretary and Mrs. Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. Thurber, Hon. T. F Bayard and Mrs Bayard, Assistant Secretary Hamlin, Admiral and Miss Walker, Commodore Melville, Commodore and Mrs. Chadwick, Captain and Mrs. Ewell, Commodore Dewey, General Dumont, Lieutenant and Mrs. Reamey, Lieutenant and Mrs. Veeder, Mrs. John A. Rayburn, General and Mrs. Frank Armstrong, Miss Armstrong, Miss Kate Field and Geo. W. Boyd.

The steamer St. Louis, and her sister ship, the St. Paul, are the largest vessels that have ever been built in this country. The determination of the International Navigation company to build the vessels, was in pursuance of the company's promise to construct two steamships in this country of equal tonnage to its steamships Paris and New York, if congress would pass a bill admitting the two latter vessels to American registry. Congress passed the bill and it became a law in 1892. Soon afterward the Internationl Navigation company placed an order with the William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Building company to construct two steamships to meet the bill's provisions.

A description of one vessel is a description of both, as they are identical in every particular. The dimensions of the St. Louis are: 554 feet 2 inches over all, 63 feet extreme breadth and 26 feet draught. The gross tonnage is 10,770 tons, and when loaded to the draught line the steamship's displacement will be 16,000 tons.

The cargo capacity is 1,820 tons on a normal mean draught of about 26 feet with a full coal supply, but the total hold capacity when loaded to the maximum draught of about 28 feet will be a little more than 3,200 tons. The motive power will be supplied by two quadruple, vertical six-cylinder engines on four cranks, driving twin screws with a working pressure of 200 pounds of steam, supplied by ten boilers.

In order to reduce greatly the risk of accidents resulting from the breaking down of machinery, the St. Louis is fitted with two sets of engines, each set driving a separate screw. The engines are in two separate compartments, sub-divided by a water tight bulkhead, and the boilers are in separate compartments, completely cut off from each other, so that these vessels might be in collision by being struck on the bulkhead and could have a break-down in their machinery, such as may occur in any ordinary ship, and still be navigable and thoroughly safe and seaworthy.

The material used in the construction of the St. Louis is open hearth steel of the best quality, and the record of its inspection show an average considerably above Lloyd's standard. The steering apparatus for the St. Louis is of the screw gear type, with steam and hand steering engine and the rudder is of the single plate type.

The St. Louis has five decks and when finished will be a floating palace. The cabins, saloon, smooking room, library, etc., will be of the most luxurious character and everything that the most exacting ocean traveler could desire will be at his command.

Four dynamos will supply the electricity to light the vessel, and powerful fans will force the foul air out of the ship and the pure air in.

The St. Louis will have accommoda- second cabin passengers and 900 steer- second cabin passengers and 900 steerage passengers. The crew, including stewards, etc., will number 400, making a total of 1,840 people that the ship will carry. The vessel has two smoke stacks and two steel masts. The masts are intended to be used as derricks and for signalling purposes, and not to carry sail.

One point of great importance has received more attention than it has in any of the other fast Atlantic steamers. It is not an uncommon thing for some of the fastest vessels to make a quick passage across the Atlantic and then to have to wait for high tide for several hours outside the harbor bar either in New York or Liverpool. in order to avoid such a necessity the St. Louis and the St. Paul have been designed for a light draught. Proper immersion for their screws will be obtained by the use of water ballast in the double bottoms, which have been fitted throughout their length. On the passage over and before reaching the bar this water ballast will be pumped out and the vessel's draught greatly lessened.

These double bottoms are built upon a new principle, specially designed by their constructors, and are believed to be stronger and lighter than anything of the kind that has preceded them. They are also a double precaution against injury by grounding.

It is anticipated that these vessels will never have to wait outside the bar at New York.

AN EXPRESS TRAIN HELD UP.

But the Robbers Failed To Secure More Than $400.

Monett, Mo., Nov. 13.—Train No. 1 on the St Louis and San Francisco railway was held up at half past eight o'clock last night at a small station named Verona, five miles east of this city, by two masked men. The affair did not occupy over twenty minutes. The amount secured by the robbers was not over $400. The bandits boarded the train as it stopped at Verona and as the engineer pulled the throttle to start the train he was confronted with two Winchesters and given orders to go ahead until he was told to bring the train to a stop. Half a mile out the train was stopped and the engineer compelled to get down from the cab and walk back to the express car. Then he was told to order the express man, Dolph Chapman, to open the door. Chapman did as requested, recognizing Engineer Stephenson's voice. The robbers immediately covered the express messenger with their guns and compelled him to give them the packages that were in sight. Engineer Stephenson was then marched back to his engine and ordered to pull out. The robbers departed in a northerly direction. A posse of citizens is pursuing them.

SCHAEFER DEFEATS IVES.

The First Game in the Tournament Won by 32 Points.

New York, Nov. 13.—The billiard match between Jacob Schaeffer and Frank Ives was begun last night at the Madison Square Garden concert hall. The men are to play the 14-inch balk line game, anchor shot barred, for six nights, 600 points each night. Schaefer won last night's game after seventeen innings play by a score of 600 to 568. In the sixteenth inning the score stood Schaefer 471, Ives 568. Schaefer then went in and scored 129 points, running out the game. Schaefer's average, 35 5-17; Ives, for sixteen innings, 35 1-2. High runs, Schaefer, 129; Ives, 153.

Senators Returning to the Capital.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Senators are beginning to return to the city. Prominent among those now in Washington are Senators Gorman, Camden, Ransom and Harris. The first three named were in conference for a long time yesterday, Mr. Ransom going to the senate chamber as soon as he reached the city. Mr. Gorman, when asked about the conference, said that it was an impromptu gathering, it being the first time they had met since their departure from town to engage in the work of the campaign He denied that there was any political significance in the conference. None of these senators would discuss the subject of the organization of the next senate.

Rev. Homer Wheaton Killed.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Rev. Homer Wheaton, aged 89 years, was struck by an engine on the Newburgh, Dutchess & Connecticut railroad while attempting to cross the track at Franklin avenue, Millbrook, yesterday. He was thrown some distance and struck on his head. He was picked up unconscious and died shortly afterwards. Mr. Wheaton was the father of the late Judge Charles Wheaton of this city. He was formerly an Episcopal minister, but was converted to Catholicism, and through his influence his son's wife was also converted to the same faith. He has no living children, but a number of grandchildren survive him.

Juka Tried To Kill Himself.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 13.—Juka, the attempted wife murderer, was captured by detectives at a mining town called Treskow. He showed fight and was taken by force from among fifteen of his countrymen. On his arrival at Hazleton he was committed to the city prison for a hearing. Early yesterday morning Juka attempted to hang himself in his cell but was cut down by a policeman who opportunely entered the cell. The prisoner was brought here last night and committed to the county prison.

Ironworkers' Wages Raised.

Pittsburg, Nov. 13—The puddlers employed in the Wayne Iron works of Brown Sons & Co., of this city, have been notified that beginning next Monday the rate for puddling would be advanced ten per cent. They are now paying $4 per ton, the highest rate in the district, and with the advance will pay $4.40 The advance was voluntary and in fulfilment of the firm's promise made last spring when the reduction in puddling took place.

To Relieve Importers.

Washington, Nov. 13.—The treasury department holds that under the requirements of section five of the new tariff law in regard to marking and stamping packages, such marking and stamping applies only to packages containing articles of foreign manufacture and not to packages containing crude articles. This decision is intended to relieve importers from the annoying interpretation that has hitherto prevailed.

Died at the Age of 102.

Kingston, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Mary Ann Westrip, is dead here, aged 102. She had seldom been sick a day during her life and a week ago walked to St. Joseph's church and back, a distance of two miles. She was born in county Tipperary, Ireland, and had been the mother of fourteen children, two of whom are now alive, William Westrip, aged 65 years, of New York city, and Mrs. Catherine Barrett, of Troy, N. Y.

Worden Has Confessed.

Woodland, Cal., Nov. 13.—The pronouncing of the death sentence on S. D. Worden, who was convicted last week of murder in connection with the wreck of the military train near Sacramento last July, was postponed until Friday next. Worden has confessed and says he will soon tell the whole story. The trial of Melvin Hatch, another of the accused strikers, commenced yesterday afternoon.

Geographical Congress.

Washington, Nov. 13.—James R. Roosevelt, charge d'affaires of the United States at London, has transmitted to the department of state a request from the secretaries of the sixth International Geographical congress to be held at London in August next for the appointment of appropriate delegates to represent the United States in the various departments of the congress.

LIFE WAS A BURDEN.

A Pain-Racked Sufferer Tells an Interesting Story—How He Was Tortured for Years and Finally Cured by Munyon's Remedy.

Charles Wark of 14 N. Twenty-fourth st., Philadelphia, has been a constant sufferer from rheumatism for years. He was cured by the use of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. This is his story:

"I was afflicted with rheumatism in the high shoulder and suffered the most excruciating agony. Sharp shooting pains darted through it so intense I could not sleep night Even the weight of the bedclothes was more than I could bear; neither could I lie on the right side or my back. Life became a perfect burden to me. I could not raise my hand to my head, and when I attempted to put on my coat or any article of dress, the torture was enough to drive me wild. Many remedies were suggested and tried, but none did me the slightest good, and I began to despair of ever being able to obtain relief. Some time ago, however, I procured a bottle of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. It afforded me relief after the first few doses, and by the time the little 25 cent bottle was gone I was entirely free from pain. I have had no return of my old enemy, and I feel satisfied I am permanently cured. It seems so wonderful I can hardly realize it, and can only show my appreciation of the merits of the Cure by recommending it to other sufferers."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoepathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggist, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

WILL NOT ACT HASTILY

China and Japan Considering Cleveland's Offer.

Replies Expected from Both Countries To-morrow—China Will Probably Consult with England Before Reaching a Conclusion in the Matter.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Nothing official had been received at the state department form either China or Japan. The Japanese ministry, it is well known, are considering President Cleveland's proposition but it is a matter of too great import to be settled hastily. The emperor of Japan, whose headquarters are at Hiroshima, will be consulted and these various consultations require time. It is believed, however, that definite replies will be received from both countries by tomorrow. So far as China is concerned, it was not expected that her reply would be formally given until she had consulted with Great Britain. That she is anxious to bring to a close a war so destructive to her interests is well known, and it is this that has led the Cleveland administration to believe that she will accept any honorable terms made by Japan. It is said, however, by those who are in position to reflect the views of the Chinese minister, that China will not dare to determine the matter absolutely until after Great Britain shall have been heard from. And it is not believed that Great Britain will be willing that the United States alone shall gain the prestige which will naturally belong to this country from bringing the war to a close. Great Britain is more anxious than this country that hostilities should cease, but she wishes to have a voice in effecting this result. China, it is thought, will not for this reason offend Great Britain by rashly accepting the proposition of the United States until she first learns the temper of the British mind. Another stumbling block will be the amount of the indemnity. Japan will doubtless hold out for $100,000,000 while China will regard not more than half that amount as the proper figure. Aside from the very natural desire of China to reduce the indemnity as much as possible, it will be a matter of great embarrassment in her present impoverished condition to raise so large a sum as that which Japan will exact. It can only be done by increasing her duty on foreign importations which is now about 5 per cent., and which in view of her treaty obligations will not be easy. Great Britain, who is the largest exporter of manufactured products to China, would be the first to protest against this increase in customs duties, and this is another consideration which will cause China not to act precipitately but to await Great Britain's pleasure.

London, Nov. 13.—The Standard's correspondent in Berlin says: "The Chinese minister has arrived from St. Petersburg for the purpose of informing the German government of the war situation in connection with the proposed intervention. He is instructed to declare that China is willing to make certain sacrifices for an honorable peace. In the event of failure, she will continue the war, whatever the result, even if the emperor be compelled to withdraw to the interior of the empire. The Chinese board of foreign affairs has prepared to submit to the powers the whole correspondence between China and Japan concerning Korea."

ANTI-PARNELLITES MEET.

Deprecate Newspaper Discussions of Party Differences.

Dublin, Nov. 13.—The anti-Parnellites met here with their leader, Justin McCarthy, in the chair. They declared that the acceptance of Mr. Gladstone's and Lord Tweedmouth's celebrated checks was justified, as these contributions to the Irish cause were made spontaneously. The begging circular, the meeting resolved, was not a party matter as the party was not responsible for it. The circular had been sent out, the resolution added, through the blunder of a clerk. The meeting deprecated newspaper discussions of party differences as calculated to injure the Irish cause. Before the debate concerning the checks was closed, a resolution protesting against the acceptance of them was proposed and rejected. The meeting declared that it was the liberal party's paramount duty to secure the autonomy of Ireland and to observe faithfully its pledges in this respect. Such observance would be the sole guarantee of the continuation of the alliance between the Irish and liberals.

The American Released.

Yokohama, Nov. 13—It is reported that John Wilde, an American, alias "Howie," and Cameron, a Scotchman, alias "Browne," who were arrested at Kobe on board the French steamship Sydney, from Marseilles for Yokohama, charged with conspiring to destroy the Chinese fleet by the use of torpedoes, have been released from custody after taking oaths not to resort to any action tending to assist China during the war. The Chinaman, C. F. Moore, recently translator for the Chinese legation at Washington, who was arrested with Wilde and Cameron, has been sent to Hiroshima.

Nuns May Teach.

Pittsburg, Nov. 13—Justice Dean of the state supreme court handed down an opinion in the case of John Hysong, et al., vs. the school district of Gallitzinborough, an appeal from Judge Barker of the court below, who refused an injunction to prevent nuns from teaching in the public schools dressed in the garb of the order. Justice Dean affirms Judge Barker's decision.

Muskrats Undermine a Building.

Elkhart, Ind., Nov. 13.—The Elkhardt Knitting mills, employing over 100 hands was completely demolished yesterday by burrowing muskrats undermining the building. The extensive machinery and thousands of pairs of hoisery were hurled into the St. Joseph river by the caving in of the earth. Only a portion of the building remains. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

ARE THEY TRUE?

Are Advertisements Strictly True?

A TALK ON THEIR HONESTY AND ACTUAL VALUE.

Especially Those of Proprietary Medicines.

ARE THE TESTIMONIALS USED IN THEM GENUINE?

Should People Believe in Advertised Medicines?

How much confidence should the public place in advertisements of medicines? Every human being is interested in this great question because it deeply concerns us all. In these times of hard work and over-exertion when almost everybody need medicine of some kind, it is absolutely necessary that people know what to do for their tired nerves, weak bodies and diseased organs.

Our daily papers are constantly advertising medicines, and giving testimonials of persons who have been cured by their use. The questions arise, are these testimonials genuine? Are they exact and truthful statements made by people who have really been cured by the medicine advertised? There is not the slightest doubt that the majority of advertised medicines are just what they are represented to be, and that the testimonials are perfectly reliable, being accurate statements of persons cured. From our experience, such statements are true and state only what are facts. We know positively that all the vast numbers of testimonials of cure published in regard to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy are true, and that people can and should be guided by them, for these testimonials prove that the cures were made by this wonderful medicine, and that this remedy will cure others who take it.

Newspaper men themselves are often cured, and often give testimonials, and no newspaper man would allow unreliable or false testimonials to be published in his paper. Thomas A. Lindsay is one of the most popular newspaper men in the country, and is connected with Albany's (N. Y) leading morning paper, The Morning Express. He makes the following interesting statement:

"For many years I have been subject to severe spells of headache and nervousness, at times almost enough to drive a man to insanity from pain, loss of sleep, etc.

"Medicines, narcotics, patent and prescribed, did not give relief, and the ailment increased continually. Having read in the Albany Morning Express, at different times, the advertisements of Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I concluded to try this remedy, and after the use of six or seven bottles, found not only relief, but a radical cure.

"The headaches are a thing of the past, while the terrible nervous spells have gradually become less and less, until now I have little or none of them left, and my sleep is natural and refreshing.

"I do not hesitate in saying that this remarkable change is entirely due to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I heartily recommend it for ailments like my own, no matter what the cause of them."

Dr. Greene, the discoverer of this great remedy, has long been the most successful specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his enormous practice and wide experience. Everybody knows that when he makes a statement it can be depended upon, and when a testimonial of cure by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is published, our readers can be certain that every word of it is true. The persons giving the testimonials can always be seen or written to. These proofs, together with the fact that this medicine cures, are the cause of its enormous sale. People know it always does just what he says it will, and they have found it to be even a more wonderful medicine than was claimed for it.

He has had many imitators, but no one has ever been able to discover a medicine so wonderful in its curing and strengthening powers as Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City, the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that he can be consulted by anyone, at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this best of all remedies.

Mr. Reed Off on "Facts."

Chicago is indulging in a prolonged guffaw because Mr. Reed, when speaking there, asserted that "after 6,000 years of Christian civilization this people are sitting in sackcloth and ashes." Even Chicago knows that Christian civilization did not get its start as long ago as 6,000 years. Mr. Reed is quite as accurate in his Christian facts as in his tariff facts.—Exchange.

RESCUED BY PILOTS

Terrible Experience of the Schooner Rich's Crew.

Drifting at the Mercy of the Waves Six Days, Expecting Every Minute To Go to the Bottom—The Mate's Brave Wife, Newly Wedded, Does Heroic Service for the Men.

Tompkinsville, S. I., Nov. 13.—On Sunday night pilot boat 14 of the Sandy Hook fleet put into Tompkinsville, Staten island, with a number of people aboard who had just been saved from being swallowed up in the ocean. They had been rescued by the pilots and none too soon for within an hour and a half after the crew was taken off, their vessel went down. The tale of suffering told by the survivors was a terrible one. Their appearance bore out their story. Their hands were swoolen and bleeding, and they could hardly stand even after they had been cared for at Tompkinsville.

The wreck was the schooner Kate E. Rich. She sailed from Philadelphia, coal laden, on the sailor's fatal day, Friday, Nov. 2. She had a cargo of coal consigned to Providence, R. I. Captain John G. James commanded. John Crossman, a young man, was mate. The crew consisted of four men and the cook. In addition to these there was the young wife of the mate. She had but recently married Crossman. The voyage was the first one she ever made. She said yesterday she would never venture out again and did not want her husband to.

When off Barnegat the wind was blowing almost directly from the west and as it was fine and steady with no promise of changing, Captain James changed his course and headed to sea to make the trip by the outside course. It was a week ago last Saturday afternoon that he made this fatal move. All went well until Sunday afternoon, when, just before sundown, the wind died out and for a few hours there was a calm. A couple of hours after everything had been made snug a gust of wind came from the eastward. The forestay was set, but it was not drawn tight before it was whipped away. The mainsail, with two reefs taken, was then set. The schooner answered at once, but ten minutes after the sail was set it was in ribbons. The wind was by this time whistling at a terrible rate which sent the little schooner over on her beams. Sail after sail was set, but nothing would hold, and at last there was nothing to do but let the schooner drift at the mercy of the waves. Of course she went at once into the trough of the sea, with every wave washing over her.

Every man was on her deck. The mate's wife was thrown from her bunk in the first part of the blow and her head was cut. There was no time to attend to her wound as the peril of all was too great. The lashing the vessel received started the cargo and this, shifting to and fro, opened the seams of the schooner. All hands were called to the pumps, and for five days the plungers were going constantly. The men were lashed to their places, and what little sleep they got was caught while standing there. The mate's wife worked hard through all. The decks were soon awash, and the cabin flooded, but the food and coffee were kept dry, the young woman journeying back and forth between galley and the men at the pumps keeping them alive with hot drink. All were constantly in water. Driven by the wind and current the schooner traveled eighty miles out to sea, and was close to the Gulf Stream when the wind shifted and set in landward. With the remnants of the sails, jib and foretop sails were rigged, and the crew worked the schooner within sixteen miles of Fire island. On Saturday afternoon the high tower of the light was seen. The cabin was then filled with water and only the top of the deckhouse was above water. By dint of bailing the galley was kept free. Captain and crew stuck to their posts at the pumps, working desperately. All were ready to give up and would have done so had they not been in the track of ocean steamers.

Six days were spent by the crew in this condition. During that time a number of steamers passed them. The flyers paid no attention to the signals displayed. The crew had hoisted the American flag upside down and, although several of the steamers must have seen them they kept right on without even slacking up.

Saturday afternoon the schooner began to settle perceptibly. Some air which had been confined in the hold began to work out and all hope was lost. At four o'clock the sails of the pilot boat William No. 14 were seen. The signals were again used and this time with success. Within half an hour the pilot boat was alongside. The pilots saw the peril of the boat, and although they risked their own boat, let out the reefs in her sails, and in this state bore down on the Rich. It took the hardy pilots a very short time to transfer the crew of the Rich from one craft to the other.

The pilot boat then put about for the harbor. Twenty minutes after the last person was taken from her the Rich went down.

The pilot boat came to Tompkinsville where the rescued were landed on Sunday night. They were treated by physicians and yesterday started for Philadelphia.

When rescued their legs were swoolen to almost double their natural size and their hands were ready to burst with blood. Their conditions were fairly good when they started for home.

The Clevelands in Washington.

Washington, Nov. 13.—The special train bearing the presidential party from the christening of the monster steamer St. Louis at Philadelphia, reached here at 7:05 last evening, ten minutes late. Nearly all of the ladies of the party carried immense bunches of flowers as souvenirs of the trip, which was declared to be one of the very pleasantest affairs of the kind.

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

THE winter of 189— was memorable on account of many things; but to me it was chiefly remarkable for having given me my young bride. We were spending our honeymoon in the lotus-eating land, and had taken up our quarters at that admirable hostelery known as "Mena house," which stands at the foot of the plateau where the great pyramids of Gizeh are so majestically enthroned. It was, in truth a halcyon time, to be marked in our memories with the whitest of stones.

One slight drawback there was certainly, but it was a mere crumple in our rose leaf. The Bedouins would never leave us alone. Wherever we went they insisted on accompanying us; it was impossible to get rid of them, but they were withal so polite and good tempered that we could not find it in our hearts to be angry. The only way to avoid the pests was to carry out our wanderings by moonlight. The Arabs believe firmly that "El-Ahram" are haunted, and will not on any account venture near the ruins after nightfall. In this way we had the whole place to ourselves but that, for us, was ample society. We revelled in our freedom, and soon became thoroughly acquainted with the entire plateau from the sphinx on the south to the dilapidated temple on the northern verge.

One lovely night, before the moon was quite full, my wife proposed a visit to the interior of the great pyramid; and having procured candles we clambered up the well-worn track leading to the entrance, and speedily made our way down the sloping shaft to the central chamber. Outside the air was slightly chilly, and the warmth of the great tomb was very agreeable, in in spite of the closeness of the air. Sitting ourselves down on the edge of the lidless sarcophagus, we began one of those conversations so dear to young lovers, during which the hours glide away like minutes, or rather when all sense of time is lost.

IN THE SECRET CHAMBER.

Our candles were burning brightly and steadily beside us, when suddenly—without the slightest warning—a gust of wind descended from above, and in the twinkling of an eye we were in darkness. The expected transition was startling to a degree. My wife clung to me convulsively, trembling in every limb, and I freely confess I too was not free from that sign of discomposure. Hurriedly I examined all my pockets, one after the other, in a vain search for my matchbox. It was not to be found! I must have dropped it somewhere en route.

This was terrible; and I was still carefully examining every receptacle I possessed, when a dull, grinding noise made itself audible through the obscurity. There is something dreadful in a noise that one cannot account for, no matter when or where one hears it. Out in the open a mysterious sound is bad enough, but situated as we were, inside a narrow, confined space amidst total darkness, it was simply appalling!

Shrinking toward each other we listened intently, not knowing what to do, for the noise, however caused, seemed to come from a direction between where we were and the door of the chamber. At last it ceased, and although half dead with a mixture of awe and terror we were obliged to muster up enough courage to try to find our way out. Gradually we crept along hand in hand, feeling the smooth surface of the wall with our disengaged hands as we went. The chamber is not spacious, but our progress was necessarily very slow, and after what appeared to be an interminable time, I actually stumbled up aganst an obstacle.

What could it be? Stooping, I tried to make out by sense of touch what it was that impeded our progress. A very slight investigation satisfied me. There could be no doubt that this barrier in our way was the sarcophagus. We must have made the entire circuit of the chamber without finding the door!

Concluding we had missed the entrance through some stupid mistake or other we set out afresh, tracing with the utmost care every inch of the polished wall. Again the distance seemed interminable, and again we accomplished the round of the accursed place, and found ourselves back at the original starting point.

It was a most astounding thing. Either the door had vanished or we were losing our senses. The silence now was terrible and the darkness was truly Egyptian—it could be felt! The heavy, close air was so thick and clammy that we could hardly breathe; our hearts were beating at railway speed and the perspiration dripped from every pore. The circumstances were, in sooth, as desperate as they were inexplicable, but since no good could come of sitting still we arose once more and recommenced our search for the vanished opening.

'Twas all in vain! The granite was as smooth and unbroken as though it had been fashioned out of one enormous block. Not a fissure or crack could be found large enough to admit even the point of a knife. Whether we tried from right to left or from left to right the result was still the same; we invariably found ourselves back at the horrible sarcophagus.

At this juncture, while we were resting in a half-dazed state against the border of the fatal sarcophagus, gradually a faint, weird light became apparent above our heads. By degrees the light grew stronger, till finally the whole chamber was filled with a pale green luminousness whereby we were enabled to distinguish each other's features.

Lost in astonishment, we gazed around us and at each other, too deeply amazed for speech; and, as we found out afterwards, uncertain whether we were asleep or awake. The reason we had been unable to find the entrance was plain. The cyclopean mass of stone forming the lintel of the doorway had descended bodily, thus completely blocking up the passage, which it fitted with mathematical accuracy. It was from the gap thereby created on a higher level that the light was shining, the lower edge of the new aperture being about eight or nine feet above the floor of the chamber.

The opening disclosed in this wonderful manner was the commencement of a tunnel, or shaft, extending at an acute angle upwards into the body of the pyramid. It was rectangular in form, and in other respects bore a general resemblance to the passage by which we had entered, save that it seemed to be loftier.

The question now was—should we attempt to escape along this new road; or should we wait where we were, and trust to the return of the lintel to its proper place?

The light now began to fade away in the same gradual manner it had arisen, and it became painfully evident that we should be again plunged in darkness. Any fate would be preferable to the frightful sensation of being hermetically shut in amidst an intense and stifling blackness to which the darkest night outside would be the bright clearness of noon.

Taking our courage in both hands we resolved to make an attempt to escape. I seized hold of Annette round the waist, and swung her form up until she was able to scramble on to the ledge of the opening. With her assistance I had then no difficulty in climbing up myself, and as we were both pretty active we contrived to establish ourselves in the mouth of the gallery down which the pale green light was now but faintly streaming.

The sloping floor was so smooth and steep that we were obliged to crawl on our hands and knees in order to make any progress. In this way we clambered along for fully fifty yards, with much labor and weariness; slipping back every now and again, and more than once narrywly escaping a glissade into the hateful chamber. It was a fearful task! but at length we reached the top, and found that the gallery debouched at a spacious hall where everything was brilliantly illuminated in a most peculiar manner by means of appliances which for want of a better term must be called reflectors.

The whole of the upper part, or ceiling, of this marvelous room presented a most extraordinary appearance, being honeycombed—so to speak—by a vast array of hollow cones, each cone ending in a small aperture, or skylight, through which the beams of the moon, or the rays of the stars, were shining with a hundredfold their normal power. The apices of these cones must have consisted of some magnifying material, and the sides were lined with a kind of material that multiplied to an enormous extent their power of transmitting light. The entire series was so skillfully arranged that the combined pencils impinged on one spot, where there was a most singular and complicated apparatus for their reception.

In front of the mouth of the gallery stood a manifold frame, almost completely filling the opening, which, however, was scooped out on one side, thus enabling us, breathless as we were from our climb, to creep through. This frame was in truth an extraordinary structure. It was fitted with an infinite multitude of lenses and other transparent appliances, the like of which I had never seen before. I very much regret that I cannot give a better and more detailed description of this piece of work, which to my mind affords conclusive proof that the ancient Egyptians were the possessors of a long since vanished lore. The reader will shortly be able to see why it is that any account of these marvels is so vague.

Whilst I was in the act of making my way past this frame the never-to-be-forgotten grinding sound again met my ears, coming from below in the direction of the chamber we had just quitted. I at once turned and looked down, but could see nothing. The track we so painfully had traversed was now as dark as Erebus. It was manifest that our retreat was cut off; the ponderous lintel had risen to its original position.

Spelling Kitten.

A dear little girl,
With her brain in a whirl,
Was asked the word "kitten" to spell.
"K-double i-t-
T-e-n," said she,
And thought she had done very well;
"Has kitten two t's?"
And the teacher's surprise
With mirth and patience was bent.
"My kitten has two,"
Said Majory Lou,
And she looked as she felt—quite content.

VANISHED VERDURE.

The melancholy days are here,
The saddest Plainfield knows,

We weep, and gasp, and choke:
The Summer glory of our trees

UNANIMITY IS GOOD SENSE.

The Mayor and Rapid Transit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—

There is a great deal of good sense, it seems to me, in your proposition to give Mayor Gilbert another term. An unanimous expression of the people of Plainfield would greatly strengthen the mayor when dealing with hard-headed traction companies.

Now that the sewers have become a mere matter of detail, the chief problem that confronts us, you may be sure, relates to rapid transit to and from our single steam road. The coming year is to be in this section a street-car building year; and if the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company is permitted to occupy some of the best streets of Plainfield without obligating itself to so build the lines we need east and northeast of the Central railroad, this century will pass, —probably, the present generation—before such extensions are made. For no company can afford to build and operate the two lines—the one to the Short Hills or Netherwood, the other to the new athletic grounds and Hillside Cemetery—as an independent system. The Dunellen and Scotch Plains extensions will necessarily form a part of the main line of the big traction company.

If Mayor Gilbert can complete the sewers and at the same time secure rapid transit where it is greatly needed, he will certainly earn, and as certainly receive, all the rest of his useful life the gratitude of the people of this town.

But he cannot do this unless Those Who Ride will display less selfishness to the square inch. Nor can he do this if the conditions and obligations put forward by the Street Committee, outrun the reasonable possibilities of a given case.

Notes of the Nimrods.

The season for shooting rabbits and quail opened Monday. In consequence the paper train, which arrives here at 5:45 a. m. from New York, was crowded to its utmost capacity with gunners and their dogs. A large delegation of the local sportsmen who were in waiting managed to squeeze on board. All were bent on having a good time, and everyone was merry.

One nimble Nimrod caused a hearty laugh as he hurried to the cars, dragging his hound by his handkerchief with one hand, his gun under his arm, a 3-gallon demijohn in the other hand, and the neck of a black bottle projecting out of his pocket. It was learned that he carried the glassware for the purpose of bringing home some water from a mineral spring.

Game of all kinds is very scarce, and the subject of stopping all shooting for 3 years is under discussion.

SCHOOL BOARD METHODS

Much Fault Found by Plainfield Taxpayers.

DISAPPROVAL OF SECRET SESSIONS.

Feeling Among Citizens that the Trustees Are Too shy of Public Inspection and Too Autocratic Over the People Who Made Them Chosen Servants—Growth of the Desire for a Change, and Rare Chance Now to Make It.

Leading citizens of Plainfield have heartily thanked The Daily Press for so early in the campaign acquainting them with the news of the School Board project discussed in these columns last week. While they were surprised to learn that an issue they thought settled was to be revived, they were glad to be made cognizant of the state of affairs, and grateful to The Daily Press for its outspoken courage and its faithfulness to the people.

As matters stand, the Republicans of Plainfield find themselves in a peculiar position. They have through the canvass made by party leaders in the town expressed unanimous desire not only for the reelection of Mayor Gilbert but also for a return to Council of Mr. See in the First ward, Mr. Ginna in the Second, and Mr. Fisk in the Third.

The continuance of these men in office is considered desirable because they have been and are foremost in fostering the progressive improvements to be advanced during the coming year; and the Democrats have shown no disposition to disturb the extension of the present municipal administration.

But the School Board candidacy appears as a disadvantage to this harmonious condition. If the retiring members of the Board are to be renominated they must be on the same ticket with Mr. Gilbert, and Mr. Gilbert's friends might be led into voting the whole ticket under the impression that the School Board candidates stood on his platform. His platform is the popular one, and represents the policy established in the passage of the act removing from the School Board the power to make expenditures of public funds without restriction. It would chagrin the voters to find that in electing Mr. Gilbert and his ticket they had restored to School Board membership trustees who would seek to overthrow the enactment of the last Legislalature and renew their efforts to speed their pet project of a high school mansion on the Wadsworth property.

No attempt has been made to deny that restoration of their old power is sought by the Board. On the contrary, there is every evidence that restoration is exactly what they seek, and every evidence that they cling tenaciously to the plan of building a costly collegiate institution which the public does not feel the immediate need of and will not favor till it feels it can afford the luxury.

The Board has placed classes in the Wadsworth building under the plea that the existing schools were overcrowded. It has had published articles tending to convince the people that the establishment of a school there was not the anticipated offense to the neighborhood. It has sought and obtained legal opinion that the School Board law is unconstitutional. And it is prepared, if the people by their votes at the December election continue it in power, to attack the act, wipe it out if possible, and proceed with its pet plans in defiance of popular will.

The matter of obtaining legal opinion in the case, as a groundwork for fighting the act, is one of those things which the Board seemed to consider wise to arrange in executive session. The secret meetings of which The Press and the people have so much complained continue to be a feature of existing School Board methods, and the remarkable lack of subserviency to popular will is by no means lessened.

Public sentiment has long existed against these sub-rosa and autocratic transactions of the Board, and that sentiment has grown amazingly. The voters who elect the trustees, and the taxpayers whose funds the trustees expend in such large amount, feel that there is nothing to be lost, no disadvantage to develop against proper management of the schools, in maintaining open confidence with the people; and they feel that they have a just grievance against the trustees for their long-established practice of exclusiveness. The people's argument is that the School Board is meant to run a free public institution of education, not a secret-service bureau whose dictates the public must blindly obey.

Plainfield taxpayers will welcome the day when they feel as free to attend all sessions of the Board as they are to meet with the Common Council in all its doings.

Plainfield taxpayers will gladly support and elect such candidates as will pledge themselves to abide by the policy established in the enactment of the School Board law.

With the rare occasion which now presents itself of electing two new members, Now is the chance for the people to effect the change they have sought.

It is to be a change of methods, certainly; of men, if need be.

THOMAS A THIEF.

HE WAS A STRANGER TO MRS. FLACK, AND HE TOOK HER IN.

Made a Good Impression as the New Boarder, and a Bad Impression When He Went Away.

A stranger came to board at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Flack, 39 Somerset street, Monday afternoon. Yesterday afternoon he went away with stolen clothing and an unpaid board bill.

He was a nice-looking man with rather a forward way about him. His eyes were blue and his face was shaved smooth. His height was about six feet and he was of medium build. He gave Mrs. Flack a small card with the name "John L. Thomas" written on it in professional script.

The new boarder behaved himself until yesterday noon when he went upstairs and broke open a closet. He stole George Hughes's second-best suit and put it beneath his own clothes. Then he went out and was last seen at 2 in the afternoon walking up Park avenue. Mr. Hughes missed his clothes last night and the matter was reported to Chief Marshal Pangborn. Mrs. Flack thinks that nothing else was stolen.

Thomas explained that he had been sent to the place by The Courier and that he was employed by that paper. He was a printer, he said, and his fingers showed that his hands had been caught and mangled in machinery. On one finger he had a gold ring which he said had been made from a coin. This he was unable to remove as the knuckle had grown too large.

Unfortunately his valise had been delayed, but he awaited its arrival every day. Mrs. Flack gave him a room for which he was to pay a dollar a day, as he wished to room along. Then Thomas obtained obtained a key as he said his work on The Courier would keep him out late every night.

In the pockets of the suit that Thomas took were a small amount of change, a Salvation Army badge and an Army book and certificate that Mr. Hughes had. So Thomas is now prepared to intrude into Salvation Army circles as a sneak thief while passing for a Plainfield soldier.

OUR LOCAL MILITARY.

Third Regiment Cadet Corps Prepared for Winter Work.

Plainfield's military company, the Third Regiment Cadet Corps, has reorganized for Winter work and will soon commence drilling. Three years ago the company was organized under the name of the Leal Cadets, composed mostly of boys from Leal's School. The organization grew and prospered under the efficient command of Captain Edwards, until at the beginning of last year it was thought best to change the name to its present one, and step out from a school company to an independent organization.

Last year was the most prosperous in the life of the cadet corps. Bloomfield and Westfield were visited and entertained with an exhibition of military manœuvres, and during last Summer the idea of a Summer camp was thought of and carried out to the complete satisfaction of all who were present. This year there are many new plans for the benefit and enjoyment of the cadets, and there is no doubt but that Plainfield will be prouder than ever of her soldier boys long before the hot July days are here again. There are a few vacant places in the ranks this year which will be filled at once. Applications may be handed to any of the following committee: Willis West, 120 Crescent avenue; Geo. Bull, 226 East Ninth street; Llewellyn Bull, 226 East Ninth street; Volney Green, 228 East Fifth street. Those wishing to become members should apply at once, as the ranks will soon be full.

New Letter Boxes.

Postmaster Hetfield, assisted by Letter-Carrier Demarest, yesterday placed letter boxes throughout Netherwood. The locations are as follows: Corner of Belvidere and Woodland avenues, corner of Berkley and Belvidere avenues, Belvidere avenue in front of Hotel Netherwood, South avenue opposite Powers's coal yard, Netherwood station, Johnston avenue and Front street. There has also been placed a much-needed box at the corner of Front street and Sandford avenue.

Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. Day at the Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

Dr. Lewis announces that next Sabbath, Nov. 17, he will preach a sermon touching Y. M. C. A. work for the last fifty years. He will also present the claims of young women in Plainfield and elsewhere for similar educational and reformatory work. Representatives of all the organizations among women for the good of young women and girls are specially invited. Service 10:30 a. m.

Sharp Shooting.

G. Sutterlin and son of Greenbrook road went gunning yesterday at New Market, and succeeded in killing two rabbits, one squirrel, one opossum and a racoon.

A JUNIOR SONG.

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVE SMYTH WRITES AND DEDICATES IT.

Somerset Council Has a Joyous Public Installation—Speeches Against Dunn and Geissenhainer.

Red Men's Hall was full of Juniors and their friends and relatives last night, when the public installation exercises of Somerset Council, No. 104, J. O. U. A. M., were held with patriotic ceremonies. The visitors were well repaid for their attendance.

District Deputy James Anderson of North Plainfield conducted the important business of the evening, the placing of the officers. Those he installed were:

Junior Past Councilor—Jesse Schull.
Councilor—Frank Kesselring.
Vice-Councilor—Dr. George Bedford.
Recording-Secretary—James D. Anderson.
Assistant - Recording - Secretary — H. S. Thomas.
Financial-Secretary—George Allen.
Treasurer—Theodore Philipott.
Conductor—John Hartpence.
Warden—William Scribner.
Outside Sentinel—J. F. Kettenring.
Inside Sentinel—William Hartpence.
Trustee—Herbert Templin.

After the ceremonies came a brief programme: Miss Dunham gave an excellent piano solo. Miss Kitchen recited "Drifting Out to Sea" in a thrilling manner. Rev. J. W. Richardson followed with an address on the duties of patriotic Americans. He said among other things that he was a Democrat but he gloried in the fact that John T. Dunn had been defeated. Judging from the way people had voted they were all on the right side. There was room in America for only one flag and that the Stars and Stripes.

D. M. Gardner, the Somerset Street baker, made a decided hit with his ocarina and xylophone solos.

The recitation, "With Her Face Against the Pane", was then rendered with well expressed emotion by Miss Laura Bennett of New Brunswick, who responded to several encores. George Day of Dunellen amused the audience next with his character songs. He was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Day.

National Representative W. J. Smyth of Long Branch finished the programme with a ringing speech on the objects of the order and the application of its principles. He rejoiced especially over the downfall of Congressman Geissenhainer, who, he said, had done nothing while in office except draw his salary, vote and act on committees and besides this lack of labor he had opposed the Stone bill.

At the conclusion of his remarks the representative dedicated the following song to Somerset Council:

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing.
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrim's pride,
From every mountainside
Let Freedom ring.

The Junior Order of American Mechanics here,
To you we pray.
To save us from the Pope,
We look to you and hope
Our wishes, we do pray,
Will be fulfilled.

Over every school-house here,
We'll teach our children dear,
Our flag to fly.
Virtue and Liberty,
Our motto shall ever be,
We'll stand by it or die,
Our order, dear.

To you, dear Somerset Council
Of brothers true,
We look to thee.
Plainfield, we honor thee
For teaching religious liberty,
And until Juddgment Day
Our flag will fly.

Ice-cream and cake were served after this closing speech, and then with social conversation the evening of pleasure ended.

The Philharmonics.

The subscriptions for the concerts by the celebrated New York Philharmonic Club have come in very freely. The first concert will be given in the Casino Nov. 24, at which time Miss Lillian Blauvelt will be the vocal soloist. The soloists for the two remaining concerts will be Miss Clara C. Henley, Miss Tirzah Hamlen, Anton Schott and Conrad Behrens and instrumental solos by members of the Club; also concerted pieces. Tickets for the series may now be procured in limited number at Reynolds's Pharmacy or of H. O. Newman the manager. Price three dollars. Single admission tickets will not be sold.

Depending on the Moon.

The man in the moon has been lighting Stone street for the past few nights, and not the electric light company. The usual complaint is that the lamps are broken by boys, but it is not so in this case, say the neighbors.

Steadily Improving.

Chief Grant visited Maxson Dunham's farm yesterday afternoon and found that Mrs. Dunham was improving rapidly from the effects of the brutal assault Saturday night.

Electric Light Awheel.

W. A. McClurg, of the electric-light works, carries an incandescent with a 2-pound dynamo attachment on his bicycle.

SOCIALISTS NOMINATE.

They Ring in Their Bell in the Local Campaign.

COUNCILMAN MILLINGTON SCORED.

Candidates Named for Mayor and Ward Councilmen—Platform Adopted Advocating Municipal Ownership of Corporate Enterprises—Michael Watson Declines to Run for School Trustee.

In pursuance of a call by the Socialistic Labor party, about 20 met in the vacant rooms at Grant avenue and South Second street last evening for the purpose of placing in the field a ticket for the forthcoming municipal election. John James called the meeting to order, and was made chairman. He stated the object of the meeting, which, he said, was the placing of a pure Socialistic party ticket in the field.

James Bell was secretary, and read the platform and principles of the party. They were adopted as read:

MUNICIPAL PLATFORM OF THE SOCI LIST LABOR PARTY OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

1. Municipal self government. Faithful public service alone to determine the tenure of office rather than party service or subserviency to political bosses. All boards and directors of departments to be elected by a direct vote of the people, and all public officers to be subject to recall by a vote of their constituencies; the people to have the right to propose laws and vote upon all measures of importance, according to the Initiative and Referendum principle.

2. Gratuitous instruction in all educational institutions, text books and stationery in all branches of learning to be supplied to all pupils free of charge; whenever necessary, meals and clothing to be furnished, in order to make education free and accessible to the children of all the people.

3. Municipal ownership of all local street railways, electric power and light plants, gas and water works, and all industries requiring municipal franchises; but no employe shall be preferred or discharged for political reasons.

4. Abolition of the contract system on all public works and the employment of the idle by the municipal authorities, the necessary tax levy and ways and means therefor to be immediately undertaken upon the demand of a public meeting of the citizens who declare that such employment is necessary.

5. Reduction of the hours of labor of city employes to eight hours per day, thus placing them on equality with the employes of the U. S. Government.

Nominations were made as follows:

Mayor—James Bell.
Councilman, 1st ward—Otto J. Peeler.
" 2d " —Adolph Lewald.
" 3d " —Clause Wallander.
" 4th " —Frank Cullen.

For school trustee Arthur Scott and Michael Watson were nominated, but both declined and the office was left vacant, as was also that of justice of the peace.

Mr. Bell stated that it was useless to make any further nominations, adding that the election would show the local strength of the party.

Following the nominations, speeches were made by James Bell and others. Mr. Bell said in part:

"The idea of Socialism is to keep the municipal duties in the hands of the citizens; not go to Trenton and legislate in the interest of a few. Put competent men in office, said he, and the children of the very poorest will be clothed and educated and eventually make good citizens. Good education, he contended, is a good thing, but he discouraged going into extremes in anything. Water works, street railway and other municipal improvements should be in the hands of and controlled by the people; not by monopolists. The speaker alluded to the eight-hours-a-day system, and asserted that a workman would do as much work in eight hours as he would in ten. In concluding he asked every one to contribute liberally to charity.

The chairman spoke of Councilman Millington, who, he said was elected in the interest of the Republican party, but who had never yet entered a protest in favor of the working people. Our party, he continued, is the only one that breasted the storm of the last election, and with competent speakers and means to get them here, we'd hustle 'em for mayor yet.

Cheers were given for the candidates, and the gathering broke up.

Palmer Cox's Latest.

Nos. 1 and 2 of "Queer People" are both in stock at The Daily Press office this week. No coupons are required—merely a dime to secure a copy. Dealers are unable to procure "Queer People" for sale, and The Daily Press affords an inexpensive and convenient medium for obtaining this wonderful work. Besides the local rush to the office The Press is receiving orders by mail from various distant points. This proves not only that The Press is read worldwide, but also that the people of the nation have their eyes on Plainfield as a headquarters for good things.

A Good Work Completed.

Street Commissioner Stout has been putting back in place the cross walks on Duer street which were taken up when macadamizing began. The roadbed has settled well and is a creditable piece of work.

"MAD DOG" CAPTURED.

HE'S A DOUBLE TO MR. MCQUAIDE'S NOTORIOUS ANIMAL.

After Causing Much Excitement Among People on the Streets, He Is Chained by the Police.

A "mad-dog" scare on West Front and West Second streets this morning brought out the fact that J. P. McQuaide's child-biting dog has a double. A dog was caught and chained up, the police supposing it was the West Seventh street animal. Later they found Mr. McQuaide's dog tied in the barn.

It was about 9 this morning when a large white and yellow St. Bernard appeared near the Babcock Building and began to snap at people. He tore a woman's wrap, scared some children, made men stop and begin scientific discussions on the prevention of cure of hydrophobia, and then crossed over to West Second street.

Here he found more people to annoy. Finally he chased a woman into Stephen Staats's house, and when she slammed the door and ran to the window to look out at him, he curled up on the stoop in front of the door, waiting for her to come out.

Sergeant Kiely saw him and summoned Jim Babbitt. The versatile colored man tied a short rope to the St. Bernard's collar and escorted him to the East Front street pool room. The City of Plainfield bought a heavy chain and the dog was secured to a post in the back-yard.

Everybody thought the McQuaide terror had been captured until it was learned that the original biter was tied up at home. The dogs looked almost exactly alike except the second had a cheap strap about his neck while the Seventh street animal had a heavy costly collar studded with brass and adorned with a name-plate.

The name-plated dog was the one that bit Georgie Voehl so badly Monday afternoon. The second dog is thought to have been the one that wandered about North Plainfield last week. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh advised Chief Grant not to kill the captured dog.

In His New Home.

Alfred Norbury, now in charge of the Manayunk District, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, writes from his new field stating that he has made his home in Roxborough, which he describes as similar to the Seventh, Eighth and Ninth street section of Plainfield. He says he has a very fine office, and an agreeable staff of agents under him. He gave a dinner to his staff, Saturday night, and to the superintendents of adjoining districts. Among them were Superintendents Booth, Roebuck, and his predecessor, Superintendent Smithies, who has taken charge of the Morrisania District. There were some very eloquent speeches, and everybody seemed to enjoy the evening greatly.

Piano Bargains.

Vanderbeek & Sattels desire to say that they have just received a fine lot of new pianos of different makes which they will sell at prices never before offered. Among them are those wonderful Behr Brothers pianos, also Behning & Sons. The represent also the Knabe, Hazelton, Chickering and many others. They offer an excellent Chickering Grand at $125, a great bargain. Call soon at 221 Park avenue.

To Elect Tomorrow.

The Women's Temperance Aid Society will hold a special business meeting at 3 tomorrow afternoon in Reform Hall, to elect officers for the ensuing year and to transact other important business. All friends and members are urgently requested to be present.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

MONEY VS. LOVE.

There were three Miss Gillets, spinsters, who lived with their uncle, a bachelor, in the old stone house at Atwater, and in pointing them out to strangers the Atwaterites were accustomed to remark upon the fact that it was love of money with them, and that a Miss Gillet who married would cease to be her uncle's heiress.

They were pretty girls—tall, slender, red-cheeked and blue eyed—girls to be loved and married by nature; but there was Uncle Gillet's money. So they grew up and grew older, still single.

It was a well understood matter in the village, as well as in the family, that, marrying, a Miss Gillet lost her inheritance. Dr. Rush had heard it, and believed it to be true, when Uncle Gillet, having a touch of rheumatism, sent for him.

He had always thought the three slender girls the prettiest things he had ever seen, but when he stood face to face with Dolly, he fell in love with her. He looked after her as she went out of the room, and Uncle Gillet looked at him sharply.

"My niece is a pretty girl," he said. "I see you think so. She's a sensible girl, too. They are all sensible girls; they prefer a single life and independence to the miseries of marriage."

"By your advice, I believe," said the doctor.

"It's a miserable muddle altogether, this marriage," said Uncle Gillet: "don't talk about it any more."

Dr. Rush did not, at that time, but at dusk next evening, Dolly, crossing the bridge just out of Atwater, paused to look down into the water, and then and there some one came behind her and said:

"Miss Gillet."

She turned with a start. It was Dr. Rush.

"I have just left the good uncle; he is better. He will be well in a day or two. He has a strong constitution, and is a man to live to be a hundred years old."

"Then I shall be able to walk out occasionally now."

"But you'll take a walk over the bridge to-morrow?" said the doctor.

"Well, perhaps so," said Dolly.

And so she did. She took a great many; and at last one day Dr. Rush was allowed to slip a ring upon her finger, and to kiss her lips.

"I shan't have a penny," said Dolly. "You are sure you don't mind?"

"All the pennies we want I can earn myself," said the doctor. "And you must marry me in a month.

Dolly promised.

Georgina and Milly sat at work together that evening, while Uncle Gillet read.

Dolly was not sewing. She held the work, it is true, but her hand never moved toward the needle. She did not hear a word that was said; but when there came a pause she dropped the muslin and started to her feet.

"If you please, uncle," she said, "there is something I must tell. I can't keep it secret any longer. I am going to marry Dr. Rush."

Georgina and Millicent screamed in chorus.

"You are, eh?" said Uncle Gillet.

"Yes, sir," said Dolly.

"And he knows my opinions?"

"Of course," said Dolly. "He knows that except the two or three hundred dollars I have for clothes I will never have a penny."

"Then make fools of yourselves if you like," said Uncle Gillet.

"You'll come to the wedding, won't you?" asked Dolly.

"No; but I will let your sisters go," said Uncle Gillet. "I never go to weddings or executions."

Uncle Gillet never made them a present, but he came to dine sometimes and always kissed the last baby.

Oliver Robb had been dismissed long before by Gergina. She had told him plainly, she could not sacrifice mammon to love. And Millicent had had another meeting with Rufus King in the orchard.

"It's the last time, Milly," Rufus had said. "I can't go on offering myself forever, but I love you better than my life, and always shall."

"I like you, Rufus" said Milly, "and it seems hard; but uncle will not relent."

So they parted. And now Georgina was 40, and Milly 38, and Dolly 35.

Dr. Rush trudged over the low country in all weathers, and at all hours; and so one night some ruffian, who did not know how empty his wallet was, attacked him in a lonely place, and left him for dead.

A farmer going home early carried him home in his wagon and he was cared for as well as might; but a broken leg and dislocated shoulder are no light matters and Dolly hardly knew what to do or where to turn.

She was only sure of thing, her love for Richard, which grew greater with every trial. For the sake of this she put her pride down, and leaving the servant with her husband one day, trudged ovdr to her uncle's house.

She paused within sight of the house, hardly daring to get on, and, as she did so, the door opened and a servant came out, who stopped for a moment and reentered, and, as she closed the door, a black streamer flaunted in the air. There was crape on the door.

Faint with terror, Dolly hurried on. In the hall her sisters, who had seen her coming, hastened to meet her. Uncle Gillet was dead. He had expired suddenly at the dinner table, and the ladies were overcome with grief and excitement.

Dolly went into the still room and wept over the quiet figure lying there; and went home again with her dole of wine and jelly, and a few dollars.

"You've paid dearly for yielding to me, Dolly," said the suffering man, as she ministered to him. "Don't you wish you were still Miss Gillet and an heiress?"

But Dolly said "No" from her heart.

She went to the funeral, Georgina sending her the black dress. And as she sat in the parlor afterward, awaiting the reading of the will, her thoughts wandered back into the past, and the monotonous rendering of the saids and aforesaids made no impression upon her until her own name caught her ear. Then she looked up. Millicent and Georgina were both staring hard at her.

"What is it?" she asked. "I did not hear."

Millicent had covered her face with her kerchief and was crying. Georgina had flushed red as a peony.

"It means that we have been slaves all these years for nothing," she said. "You are the heiress."

Georgina lives with her still, but Millicent does not. Rufus King heard of what had happened and came back to Atwater. He had a bald head, and her pink cheeks were gone, but they both remembered the apple orchard, and so there was another wedding.—Boston Globe.

THE OUT TO DINNER MAN.

He Knows Why He is Invited and Thinks He Pays His Way.

"No," said the slightly cynical bachelor, "it's not because I am tremendously popular that I get invitations, and I don't consider it such an honor to be invited to dine somewhere every night in the week, with half a dozen or so invitations a week to spare. Why in the world do you suppose they invite me? Well, I'm a good deal like fellow who is taken on a ship and made to work his passage. He pays for his voyage with work. I work my passage at the dinners. Oh, yes I do. There's no use in being vain about these things. You see, I'm not married, and there's always some young woman, or old woman, for that matter, who has to be taken care of. Now, a married man is at a discount at a dinner. Of course, he takes a woman out to dinner, but some man has to be provided for his wife.

"I'm just useful at a dinner, and that's why I get invited. I'm not good-looking and I never said a bright thing in my life, but I can talk a streak of nonsense that is necessary to keep a dinner going. I'm good-natured and amiable. I like everybody, and so I get along comfortably with my neighbors. In a mild sort of a way, I suppose, I am amusing. And then I'm a good laugher. I laugh at all the good things that are said, and at many of them that are not so good. I get in my own little jokes when the time comes, and so we row along through the dinner, I working my passage and my hostess smiling approval on me.

"Oh, no; it's not a bit damaging to my vanity. I simply know it's so and accept it cheerfully. I can't dance for shucks, so I'm of no earthly use at a dance. If I were a good dancer I'd probably come in for all that too. My strong point is a dinner. Having a lot of pretty women around the table and listening to them and talking to them is lots more fun than sitting alone in a club, with only a ghost-like lot of waiters to amuse you. 'Tis a perfectly fair bargain. I talk and am sweet-tempered for my ferriage, and I get on the ferry a good dinner and enjoyable surroundings. That's all there is to it, and as for the honor of the thing and all that, there's no more honor in my being invited to dine out every evening than there would be in going out to fiddle for a party at a regular price. The other man gets his five or ten dollars, or whatever the price is, and fiddles."

THE JAPANESE DANCING GIRLS.

They are Pretty, and at Dinners They are Decorous.

In a chapter of a volume on Japan Lafcadio Hearn discusses with exceeding delicacy and grace a questionable feature of Japanese civilization. We refer to the so-called geisha or dancing girls, who, at banquets, dance and sing, pour the wine, and in all ways attractive, yet decorous, minister to the entertainment of the guests. They do not appear, it seems, until several dishes have been emptied, and several cups of sake have been absorbed. Then all at once, with a little burst of laughter, a number of young girls enter, make the customary prostration of greeting, glide into the open space between the ranks of the guests, and begin to serve the wine with a grace and dexterity of which no common maid is capable. They are pretty; they are clad in very costly robes of silk; they are girdled like queens; and the beautifully dressed hair of each is decked with fresh flowers, with wonderful combs and pins, and with curious ornaments of gold.

They greet the stranger as if they had always known him; they jest, laugh, and utter funny little cries. Some form an orchestra; others, singly or in pairs, perform the dance. It may be swift and merry, consisting wholly of graceful posturing, but more frequently it is rather like acting than like what we call dancing—acting accompanied with extraordinary waving of sleeves and fans, and with a play of eyes and features, sweet, subtle, subdued, wholly Oriental. There are more voluptuous dances known to the geisha, but, upon ordinary occasions, and before refined audiences, they portray, for the most part, beautiful Japanese traditions, at intervals singing ancient Chinese choruses which express a natural emotion with a few exquisite words.

It is further to be noted that, notwithstanding all the apparent comradeship which is soon established between guest and geisha, a certain rigid decorum is invariably preserved at a Japanese banquet. However flushed with wine a native guest may become, you will never see him attempt to caress a girl; he never forgets that she appears at the festivities only as a human flower, to be looked at, not to be touched. The familiarity which foreign tourists in Japan frequently permit themselves with geishas, or with waiter girls, though endured with smiling faces, is really much disliked, and considered by native observers as evidence of extreme vulgarity.—N. Y. Sun.

Tit for Tat.

Bishop Vincent used to tell a story about his son, now grown to useful manhood, to whom he was accustomed on leaving home, to say, "Remember whose boy you are," and who on one occasion anticipated the conventional injunction by saying: "Good-by, papa; remember whose father you are."

The Shopper—I'd like to buy that lovely lamp-shade, but I can't afford to pay ten dollars for it.

The Salesman—Well; madam, I'll make the price nine dollars and ninety-nine cents.

The Shopper—Oh, how good of you! I'll take it.—Chicago Record.

GEMS IN VERSE.

To Young Men.

Be firm! One constant element in luck
Is genuine, solid, old Teutonic pluck.
See yon tall shaft. It felt the earthquake's thrill,
Clung to its base and greets the sunrise still.

Stick to your aim. The mongrel's hold will slip,
But only crowbars loose the bulldog's grip.
Small as he looks, the jaw that never yields
Drags down the bellowing monarch of the fields.

Yet in opinions look not always back.
The wake is nothing—mind the coming track.
Leave what you've done for what you have to do.
Don't be "consistent," but be simply true.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Our Country.

On primal rocks she wrote her name;
The towns were reared on holy graves;
The golden seed that bore her came
Swift winged with prayer o'er ocean waves.

The forest bowed his solemn crest
And open flung his sylvan doors;
Fresh rivers led the appointed guests
To clasp the wide embracing shores

Till, fold by fold, the broidered land,
To swell her virgin vestments, grew,
While sages, strong in heart and hand,
Her virtues' fiery girdle drew.

O exile of the wrath of kings!
O pilgrim ark of liberty,
The refuge of divinest things!
Their record must abide in thee.

First in the glories of thy front
Let the crown jewel, truth, be found.
Thy right hand fling with generous wont
Love's happy chain to farthest bound.

Let justice, with the faultless scales,
Hold fast the worship of thy sons;
Thy commerce spread her shining sails
Where no dark tide of rapine runs.

So link thy ways to those of God,
So follow firm the heavenly laws,
That stars may greet the warrior browed
And storm sped angels hail thy cause.

O land—the measure of our prayers,
Hope of the world in grief and wrong—
On thine the blessing of the year,
The gift of faith, the crown of song.
—Julia Ward Howe.

Patience.

Work on, O weary one! Though thou hast toiled
For many a day,
In patience labor on, doing thy best
Along life's way.
Hope on, O burdened one, though sad and lone
May be thy way,
For through the night of gloom thy path may lie
Ere dawns the day.

Trust on, O doubting one! Though fear and gloom
Are all around thee,
The light of life and truth doth shine for thee
If thou wilt see.

Pray on, O troubled one! Though dark the clouds
Hang over thee,
Beyond the clouds the light doth brightly shine
Couldst thou but see.
—Buffalo Express.

"So Happy and So Pore."

Pap's got his patent right, and rich as all creation,
But where's the peace and comfort that we all had before?
Let's go a-visitin back to Griggsby station—
Back where we used to be so happy and so pore!

The likes of us a-livin here! It's just a mortal pity
To see us in this great big house, with carpets on the stairs,
And the pump right in the kitchen, and the city, city, city,
And nothing but the city, all around us everywheres!

Climb clean above the roof and look from the steeple,
And never see a robin nor a beech or ellum tree,
And right here, in earshot of at least a thousan people,
And none that neighbors with us or we want to go and see!
Let's go a-visitin back to Griggsby station—
Back where the latchstring's a-hangin from the door,

Of the loves and sorrows blended
Every year,
And every neighbor round the place is dear as a relation—
Back where we used to be so happy and so pore!

I want to see the Wiggenses—the whole kit and bilin
A-drivin up from Shallow Ford to stay the Sunday through,
And I want to see 'em hitchin at their son-in-law's and pilin
Out there at Lizy Ellen's jest like they used to do!

I want to see the piece quilts that Jones girl is makin,
And I want to pester Laury 'bout their freckled hired hand,
And joke about the widower she come purt' nigh a-takin
Till her pap got his pension 'lowed in time to save his land.

Let's go a-visitin back to Griggsby station—
Back where's nothin aggergatin any more.
She's away safe in the wood around the old location—
Back where we used to be so happy and so pore!

I want to see Merindy, and help her with her sewin,
And hear her talk so lovin of her man that's dead and gone,
And stand up with Emanuel, to show me how he's growin,
And smile as I have saw her 'fore she put her mournin on.

And I want to see the Samples on the old lower eighty,
Where John, our oldest boy, he was took and buried—for His own sake and Katy's—and I want to cry with Katy
As she reads all his letters over, writ from the war.

What's in all this grand life and high situation,
And nary pink nor hollyhawk bloomin at the door?
Let's go a-visitin back to Griggsby station—
Back where we used to be so happy and so pore.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Nothing New.

Nothing new under the sun!
Mornings and midnights one by one
Joining the hosts that have gone before.
Yet mornings and midnights evermore
Carry their record of joys and ills!
Nothing new, nothing new!
Everything "old as the hills."

Nothing new in the world of toil!
Sowing the seed and plowing the soil,
Gathering the fruit and reaping the grain,
Over and over and over again,
Plowing and sowing, my friend, today;
Nothing new, nothing new!
Sowing and reaping for aye!

All there is of pathos and humor in the lives of the country folk of New England has been delightfully portrayed in her writings. It is difficult to believe that any reader will not at least be interested by a perusal of the story we shall present. Here is a bit of her manuscript.

In a Country Practice

I

Dr Best, the old professor and king of the medical school was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced slight young student who stood before him. The younger man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before, he had graduated at the top of the class and as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellows as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr Best was a New York physician of wide reputation and had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges both because it was his own college and because the few weeks during his lectures covered, gave him almost the only vacation that he could.

WHITCOMB RILEY.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE HOOSIER POET.

A Clever Bit of Poetical Counterfeiting Gave Him a Reputation. It Deceived the Wisest Critics, who Thought Poe Wrote It. "Leonainie."

James Whitcomb Riley's fame as a poet and humorist is so firmly established that the publication of one of his volumes is recognized, both in England and America, as a literary event of prime importance.

In an estimate of writers recently given, that Nestor in literature, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, classed Mr. Riley as a later Hosea Bigelow, quite as original and more versatile, and owned to "a good deal of enthusiasm for this later production of Indiana soil; this delineator of lowly humanity who sings with so much fervor, pathos, humor and grace," welcoming him warmly as a poet and genius who gets down into the heart of man in a most telling way.

Many great authors have, at some period in their career, feigned the literary style of other writers and issued their productions anonymously. Thomas Chatterton in 1777 published certain poems which he affirmed were written in the fifteenth century by Thomas Rowley, a monk. Ireland in 1796 published "Miscellaneous Papers and Instruments" under the hand and seal of William Shakespeare. He produced manuscripts which he pretended were original. On April 2, 1796, the play of "Vortigern and Rowena," "from the pen of Shakespeare," was announced for representation, and drew a crowded house.

James Macpherson attributed to Ossian the authorship of the epics "Fingal and Temora," issued in 1762 and 176. The authorship was vehemently questioned by authors like Dr. Johnson and David Hume. Sir Walter Scott was so doubtful of the reception of Waverley that not only the first edition, but subsequent editions to the amount of between 11,000 and 12,000 copies, appeared without the name of the author.

It happened in 1823 that no Waverley novel was in readiness for the Leipsic fair. A cry arose among the German booksellers—"Forge one!" The thing was done. A German of ultra dullness produced a novel entitled "Walladmor." The book appeared in German as a translation from the original English, and in this character was dispersed over Germany and across the sea to London.

James Whitcomb Riley, early in his career, met with the experience common to young authors, particularly writers of verse. Believing that his productions would have been well received had they been written by an author already famous, he decided to test his belief by producing a poem in imitation of Edgar A. Poe, and publish it as a newly discovered manuscript of that author. The result was "Leonainie," written upon the fly leaf of a worn copy of Ainsworth's Latin dictionary.

This poem was first printed in the Kokomo (Ind.) Dispatch by arrangement with the proprietor, Mr. J. O. Henderson, now Auditor of the State of Indiana, who had full knowledge of the facts connected with this literary hoax. It was extensively copied, and so clever was the imitation that American and English reviewers and even an eminent authority like Edmund Clarence Stedman pronounced it genuine, and when the name of the real author was disclosed Mr. Stedman still maintained that the poem was unquestionably written by Poe.

This poem was James Whitcomb Riley's bow to the world of letters. His work had merit which the world was willing to concede. The following is the poem in full as it appears in "Armazindy," his latest book. The author has never permitted it to be printed in his other volumes:

LEONAINIE.

Leonainie—Angels named her;
  And they took the light
Of the laughing stars and framed her
  In a smile of white;
    And they made her hair of gloomy
    Midnight, and her eyes of bloomy
    Moonshine, and they brought her to me
  In the solemn night—

In a solemn night of summer
  When my heart of gloom
Blossomed up to greet the comer
  Like a rose in bloom;
    All forebodings that distressed me
    I forgot as Joy caressed me—
    (Lying Joy! that caught and pressed me
  In the arms of doom!)

Only spake the little lisper
  In the angel tongue.
Yet I, listening, heard her whisper—
  "Songs are only sung
    Here below that they may grieve you—
    Tales but told you to deceive you—
    So must Leonainie leave you
  While her love is young."

Then God smiled and it was morning
  Matchless and supreme;
Heaven's glory seemed adorning
  Earth with its esteem;
    Every heart but mine seemed gifted
    With the voice of prayer, and lifted
    Where my Leonainie drifted
  From me like a dream.

Lady Burdette Coutts on Liberty.

Lady Burdett Coutts, whose whole life has been spent in doing good to the poor, recently received a remonstrance from the secretary of a house painters' society against the painting of the Brookfield stables by the stablemen. In reply, after pointing out that the stables belonged to her husband and that the matter did not concern her, she declares the interference to be "monstrous and oppressive. It would deprive every working man and woman of the right to work out their own advancement by their own energy, and it would rob them of what the good old radical principles in which I was brought up taught me to cherish through life—that birthright of personal liberty under the law inherent in every Englishman."

A Fine Occupation for Boys.

A well-known London journalist, realizing the fact that the ordinary professions in England are overcrowded, is having his oldest boy educated to be a cook. The boy was trained by a famous chef at Brussels, afterward studied under the chef of the Grand Hotel, Paris, and later served for three years to M. Charpentier, in London. People who sneer at cooks should remember that your swell club or hotel chef draws from $2,500 to $7,500 a year, and keeps his carriage.

THE WEATHER.

For New Jersey, Clearing this Evening; Fair on Thursday; Slightly Cooler, Winds Becoming Northwesterly.

If you as an observant and thoughtful citizen have anything to say on the School Board matter, The Press will gladly give space to it—no matter what your views. The Press has its opinions, and knows the opinion of a majority of the people, but it nevertheless welcomes fair discussion of both sides. What you have to say, send to The Press; and it will receive respectful and honorable treatment. If you publish it over your own name, it will be the braver and more effective.

The Daily Press is the organ of no faction, the tool of no clique: therefore it is the only paper in Plainfield which has had the freedom of conscience to tell the truth about the School Board matter and to serve the people the good turn of pointing out the danger in the way. There is a satisfaction in wearing no man's collar; and The Press is proud to be the trusted newspaper of an appreciative public. The Press is for the people; the people are for The Press; and altogether it makes a very happy family.

What is pleasanter for one than to realize that his work is bringing wholesome delight to the young? Palmer Cox has done much in the work of providing clean entertainment for the nation's growing generation, and The Daily Press is glad to be the agency for spreading his good work. Plainfield people are getting thoroughly acquainted with his "Queer People" through the Press distribution explained on Page 3 of this issue, and the sale of the Palmer Cox books is becoming phenomenal.

In its issue of Wednesday, April 25, 1894, The Daily Press urged those Plainfielders who were so earnestly engaged in social-purity work elsewhere to turn their attention to the shameful state of street morals in Plainfield. The Press has had this matter deeply at heart, and yet could not accomplish good by publication of offensive particulars. It was therefore glad to record, as it did exclusively in its issue of yesterday, that the Plainfield Ministers Association have taken hold of the subject and are investigating it in detail. The need for local reform in this matter is burning, and the combined intellect and practical common-sense of the Plainfield clergymen will surely devise some means for betterment of existing conditions now that they have actively entered on the warfare.

All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

THAT JAP SMILE.

THE PERPETUAL SMILE OF THE JAPANESE DISCUSSED.

It is the Result of Long Cultivated Etiquette, Assisted by a Naturally Happy Disposition. The Japanese Can Smile at Every Ill.

Mr. Lafcadio Hearn, in a book on Japan, tells his readers that just before his trip to the interior of Yokohama a friend said to him: "Since you are going to study Japanese life, perhaps you will be able to find out something for me. I can't understand the Japanese smile."

Neither at that time could the author; but it seems that ultimately the meaning of this ubiquitous and mysterious phenomenon was revealed to him.

A Japanese can smile in the teeth of death, and he usually does. But he then smiles for the same reason that he smiles at other times. There is neither defiance nor hypocrisy in his smile; nor is it to be confounded with the smile of sickly resignation which we are apt to associate with weakness of character. It is an elaborate and long-cultivated etiquette. It is also a silent language. But any effort to interpret it according to Western notions of physiognomical expression would be no more successful than an attempt to interpret Chinese ideograms by their real or fancied resemblance to shapes of familiar things.

To comprehend the Japanese smile one must be able to enter a little into the ancient, natural and popular life of the country. Mr. Hearn found that from the modernized life of the upper classes nothing was to be learned. It is to the still fluid, mobile, natural existence of the common people that one must look for the meaning of some apparent feeling in the race and emotional expression in the far East. With those gentle, kindly, sweet-hearted folk, who smile at life, love and death alike, it is possible to enjoy community of interest in simple, natural things; and by familiarity and sympathy one can learn why they smile.

It is the conviction of the author, who believes in the transmission of acquired characters, that the Japanese child is born with this happy tendency, which is fostered through all the period of home education. But it is cultivated with the same exquisiteness that is shown in the cultivation of the natural tendencies of a garden plant. The smile is taught, like the bow; like the prostration; like the little sibilant, sucking in of the breath which follows as a token of pleasure the salutation to a superior; like all the elaborate and beautiful etiquette of the old-time courtesy.

But the smile is to be used upon all pleasant occasions when speaking to a superior, or to an equal, and even upon occasions which are not pleasant; it is a part of deportment. The most agreeable face is the smiling face, and to present always the most bright and agreeable face possible to parents, relatives, teachers, friends and well wishers, is a rule of life. It is furthermore a rule of life to turn constantly to the outer world a mien of happiness, to convey to others as far as possible a pleasant impression. Even if the heart is breaking, it is a social duty to smile. On the other hand, to look serious or unhappy is rude, because this may cause anxiety or pain to those who love us; it is likewise foolish, since it may excite unkindly curiosity on the part of those who love us not.

Cultivated from childhood as a beauty, the smile soon becomes instinctive. In the mind of the poorest peasant lives the conviction that to exhibit the expression of one's personal sorrow or pain or anger is rarely useful and always unkind. Hence, although natural grief must have in Japan, as elsewhere, its natural issue, an uncontrollable burst of tears in the presence of superiors or guests is an impoliteness. And the first words of even the most unlettered countrywoman, after the nerves have given way in such a circumstance, are invariably, "Pardon my selfishness, and that I have been so rude." According to Mr. Hearn, moreover, the reasons for the smile are not only moral; they are, to some extent æsthetic: they partly represent the same idea of temperateness or moderation which regulated the expression of suffering in Greek art. But they are much more moral than æsthetic.

ABOUT NOTABLE PEOPLE.

Breezy Personals Dealing With Well-Known Men and Women.

Admiral To, the Japanese hero of the day, who is known among the devoted sailors as "the lean admiral," on account of his extreme thinness, has a daughter who is one of Japan's very few blonde beauties.

Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, a brother of the late Alexander III, is the most elaborately tattooed prince in Europe. A huge Japanese dragon extends almost from wrist to shoulder of his right arm.

Miss Eleanor Hewitt, the eldest unmarried daughter of Abram S. Hewitt of New York, has for several years been roadmaster at Ringwood, where the country home of the family is situated.

The author of the well-known song, "The Sweet By and By," which has been sung in almost every language on earth, is a physician at Pueblo, and his name is S. Filmore Bennett.

Miss Ella Knowles, who came very nearly being elected State's Attorney of Montana, has just been paid a fee of $10,000 for effecting a settlement in a lawsuit involving large mining interests. This is probably the highest fee ever paid to a woman lawyer.

Jean de Reszke, the great tenor has won the Czar's prize of ten thousand roubles for the best stud farm in Poland. He is an enthusiastic breeder of race horses, and has forty-five, mostly from English stock, in his stable near Warsaw.

A reproduction in a lasting material of the brain of the late Professor von Helmholtz has been made by Dr. Berliner, of Berlin. The physicians who examined the brain considered it one of the most remarkable they had ever seen or heard of.

Virtues Revealed by Well-blacked Shoes

"It is quite true," said Mr. Gratebar, "that blacking a pair of shoes with holes in them will not cover up the holes, but it will indicate a proper regard for neatness and order, and self-respect. There are few better personal credentials than shoes well blacked, even if they have holes in them. No doubt many a man has taken his first steps to success, and long ones too, perhaps, in just such shoes. Keep 'em blackened; and that advice applies to whole shoes as well, and don't forget the heels. Thoroughness is a trait everybody admires."

"JUST MY LUCK!"

And now the Nimrod, fresh and gay,
Burns powder by the pound;
He hounds the rabbit all the day,
And kills—his rabbit hound.

And when he sees the bunny run,
And sees the doggie lie,
He blames it all upon the gun
And hides it on the sly.

And then this yarn is well rehearsed:
"Bruno was chawed by bear;
In spite the fact my gun it burst,
Missed Bruin by a hare!"

His Death a Shining Example.

At the funeral services over the remains of Peter Vandeventer yesterday afternoon the pall-bearers were Clarence Titsworth, E. M. Tomlinson, Harry Bowers and Clifford Miller. In his discourse Rev. Cornelius Schenck referred very feelingly to the young man's conversion Friday night and his death the Sunday morning following. The casket was strewn with roses and chrysanthemums.

REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill

DRAMA AND OPERA.

AMONG THE PLAYERS AND SINGERS THAT PLEASE NEW YORK.

Lillian Russell's Ambition to Sing in Grand Opera. Madame Nordica's Rise and Lilli Lehman's Decline. Other Matters of Interest.

Lillian Russell, who began the season in the Queen of Brilliants under Mr. Abbey's management is said to be looking earnestly toward the Metropolitan Opera House while she is attending to her duties at Abbey's. The golden diva is learning Italian as fast as a Tuscan professor can teach her and she means to cross Broadway before long. She is filled with ambition to take a musical fall out of the great composers, and she considers Jacobowski but a stepping stone to Wagner and Verdi. The signs of the times are in her favor. Abbey & Grau are at present in high opinion of native talent. In their present troupe of prima donnas they have no less than five American singers of distinction. Mmes. Eames, Nordica, Sanderson, De Lussan and Hill. The Queen of Brilliants believes in even numbers, and holds that the Metropolitan would enjoy better luck if it secured six native singers by adding the name of Russell to its list of prima donnas. With this laudable object in view Lillian Russell intends to gain so much applause during her season at Abbey's that the sound of our enthusiasm will be heard on the other side of Broadway. The lovely diva has now a chance to make known her aspirations to grand opera. She argues very cogently that Zelie de Lussan was not so great during the Boston Ideal period of her career as Lillian is at present.

Madame Lillian Nordica has that blessing to all, and especial blessing to a great singer, a good constitution. At the beginning of the season last year, Mme. Nordica was engaged only for occasional performances. Abbey & Grau had every reason to believe that the public would be satisfied with Calve, Melba, Eames and Arnoldson, and made no especial announcement of Lillian Nordica's engagement. But they reckoned without our climate and the Maine widow's excellent constitution. The grip seized the prima donne, one by one, and in almost in every instance Mme. Nordica's prompt readiness for service prevented disappointment to the audience. Assisted by good health, good humor and indefatigable courage, Nordica was always prepared to go on the stage at any moment and in almost any role. In this way the excellence of her performance was impressed on the public and management, and on one occasion, having sung the part of Elsa, her abilities in German music were so much praised that Mme. Cosima Wagner engaged her for the leading role in the revival of "Lohengrin" at Bayreuth. Being thus carried indirectly by the epidemic of influenza to Germany, Mme. Nordica has improved her opportunity so well that she is now engaged to be married and is making enough money to start housekeeping on. This year Abbey & Grau give her $50,000 for the season, which is the salary that Mme. Melba, the greatest of modern sopranos, received last winter, and at the rate of $400 a performance more than will be paid to Emma Eames this season. But before her triumphant return to America, Lillian Nordica is busy on a little enterprise of her own. Encouraged by the success of her engagement at Bayreuth, she immediately organized a German opera company and began her season with "Lohengrin" in Frankfort-on-the-Main. She doubled the price of admission, yet the opera house was sold out long before the opening night, and the audience and critics went wild with delight over the faultless Elsa of our plucky prima donna who will not be an unworthy rival this season of the great Melba and the gifted Eames.

There is a well-grounded belief that such dramatic artists as "Spike" Hennessy, the bank burglar; "Steve" Brodie, the bridge jumper, and Peter Jackson, the pugilist, are considerably annoyed by the incursion into their ranks of "Tom" Gould, the famouse dive keeper. It has not yet occurred to anybody to get Madeline Pollard's views upon the question, but it is certain that the feeling in theatrical circles just now is that the stage is not secure from attacks from any quarter. Mr. Gould as an actor, will be a refreshing novelty. He has not Brodie's dialect, but he has a walk, which for pure and unadulterated Bowery toughness is practically unrivaled in upper New York. It was a bitter blow to the few old-time sporting men to learn that Mr. Gould had so far forgotten his former eminence as to sign a contract to appear before the footlights. Gentlemen of the stamp of "Billy" Borst, "Dick" Darling and "Joe" Coburn never looked upon the stage with any degree of enthusiasm. They would occasionally punch an actor's head and throw him out in the middle of the street or pound him into insensibility with the aid of seven or eight toughs; but these were civilities which they ordinarily extended to any of the visitors to their dives who refused to give up the money they had in their pockets upon the demand of the waiters. The most celebrated anecdote told about "Tom" Gould and the most truthful one, by the way, shows him to be a man of unquestioned courage and a remarkable specimen of a barroom fighter. If the manager who has engaged Mr. Gould can succeed in bringing out these qualities, the public may be diverted, but it is certain that the theatrical profession is not enthusiastic over this latest accension to its ranks.

The great Lilli Lehmann will sing in opera no more. The greatest Elsa and Elizabeth that music lovers ever heard will never charm them again, her voice has dwindled to a tiny thread, sweet it is true, but only a shadow of its former self. Those who heard Malibran, Jenny Lind, Grisi, Sontag, and their successors in their prime have embalmed in their memories mental souvenirs which perhaps they had hoped at the time, if they happened to give the matter thought, would permanently exist—that these singers would ever sing as they had sung. But time has rudely dispelled such illusions, and now we have to add to the category of those who have risen and reached their zenith and then gradually have fallen from public view the name of Lilli Lehmann, who in the prime of her power, was accorded almost the unanimous verdict of even the most exacting critics that she was during the years from 1885 to 1892 not only one of the very best and most artistic of prima donnas who ever appeared on the operatic stage in New York, but also, which is much to say, one of the best actresses.

ONE DRUGGIST RESPONDS.

He Is Willing to Do with His Clerks on Sunday as the Public Directs.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Acknowledging the remarks of Rev. C. E. Herring regarding drug clerk privileges, we feel that we are the public servants, and I have arranged my hours to accommodate the general public. My store is open Sundays for the sale of medicines and compounding of prescriptions only. My clerks, who work every other Sunday, have an afternoon and evening off in compensation for the Sunday hours. However, if it can be so arranged to permit them to attend church, I will do all in my power to bring about such results.

L. W. RANDOLPH.

Watching Tramps and Negroes.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: Replying to an article which appeared in another yesterday with the above title, we condemn the brutal assault upon Mr. and Mrs. Dunham, in the highest degree, and we feel that justice should deal with the assailants untempered by mercy. All negroes are not classified with tramps. We do n't believe the better class of white people in this city think so, else they would not leave open their houses or trust them in the offices during their absence. Is it true that the evils of the South are germinating in the minds of our Northern friends?

A COLORED GENTLEMAN OF PLAINFIELD.

REACHES ALL BECAUSE IT IS FREE.

Do you want to be strong and healthy? Well, here is the best opportunity you ever had. A system of free letter correspondence has been established by Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. You don't need to leave your homes to make a long journey or pay any doctor's fee, and both of these considerations have prevented thousands from getting well. But just write him a letter stating how you feel, and he will answer it, giving a complete description of your case and telling you just what to do to get well.

He gives most careful attention to every letter, and with his vast experience makes you see at a glance exactly what ails you. And for all this he makes no charge. He makes a specialty of treating patients through letter correspondence, and is making wonderful cures. He is the discoverer of that world-renowned medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which is curing more people than any other medicine ever made. The most sensible thing you can do is to write him at once and there is not much doubt but that it will result in your being cured. Remember it costs you nothing to find out all about your case.

St. Petersburg's Populace Receives the Dead.

Alexander III.'s Remains in a Golden Coffin Placed in a Hearse With a Silver and Gold Body, Amid Solemn Band Music and the Chanting of Priests and Singers.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 14.—Ghe preparations for the reception of the body of Alexander III. in this city were hardly equal to those in Moscow and in consequence of a thaw followed by fog and a heavy snowfall the procession had to march through deep slush and mud. The hotels were crowded to their full capacity with visitors from all parts of Russia and the continent, and windows along the route of the procession had been readily rented days ago at 100 roubles. The people were very quiet and in every way gave evidence of their appreciation of the solemnity of the occasion.

Preceding the ceremony of removing the body from the Nicholas station to the fortress three guns were fired. After the third gun the church bells were tolled and throughout the day minute guns were fired. When the funeral train arrived at the Nicholas station the weather was dull and damp and chilly and the streets were very muddy. The station was crowded with the nobility of Russia and representatives from every other European country and the long platform in front of the station was covered with black cloth.

The hearse with a silver and gold body, a golden canopy surmounted by a crown and topped and edged with three white feathers, stood ready to receive the remains of the dead emperor and around it was ranged the guard of honor, all representatives of the navy.

In addition to these there were a large number of clergymen, choristers and others awaiting the arrival of the train and beyond the limits prescribed by the police and military was an immense crowd of people.

Amid the solemn music of the band and the chanting of priests and singers the long funeral train drawn by two engines with wide, flaring smokestacks, and wood piled high upon their tenders, slowly stole into the station until the mortuary car was opposite the steps leading to the hearse, when it came to a full stop. With sandles and incense the priests in a group lining the steps, the metropolitan of St. Petersburg and the higher clergy at the top near-by, bowed a salute, the roll of the drums of the grenadiers mingled with the chanting showing the harmony of the tributes of the church and army to their former head. A boy choir began a chorus in which the men joined and the volume of vocal music swelled high upon the frosty air. The roofs of the houses were crowded with people as the procession moved at 10:30 o'clock. The coffin, which was golden, was covered with a golden pall lined with heavy ermine with heavy tassels at the corners. This was folded half way back.

The Prince of Wales walked with the Czar Nicholas, each wearing a uniform similar to the one he wore in Moscow only more elaborate. This characterization is true of the whole procession. It was conducted upon the same plan as that in Moscow only more elaborately. There were more horses caparisoned with flowing black and emblazoned with the arms of the various provinces, more regiments, etc., but except that the procession and ceremonies were on a larger scale everything was the same as last Sunday.

The procession was livided into thirteen sections, each headed by a master of ceremonies wearing a black and white scarf. The sections represented various degrees of mourning.

In the last section was the hearse drawn by eight horses, generals holding the tassels. On both sides of the hearse were sixty pages—thirty on each side—with lighted torches. Immediately after the hearse came the Czar Nicholas II. wearing a general's uniform with the imperial household, the Prince of Wales, the King of Greece, the Russian grand dukes, and their aides and a company of grenadiers. Following these came the czarina, Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt, the Grand Duchess Xenia, the Grand Duchess Olga and a large number of equerries, companies and regiments.

The floor of the Cathedral of St. Isaac's was covered with black cloth, the edifice, built of massive stone and full of dignity, was in sharp contrast to the gem-like Cathedral of St. Michael the Archangel in Moscow.

When the procession arrived at the cathedral the coffin was at once placed on the catafalque in the centre of the cathedral, and a requiem service followed, lasting an hour. The body was then exposed to public view, and immediately long lines of people anxious to see the dead czar's face began passing through the cathedral. The lying in state will continue until the day of the funeral. Constant masses will be celebrated.

President Cleveland and the United States were represented in the ceremonies by Minister Breckinridge and the entire staff of the United States legation, and by Lieut. Rodgers, naval attache at Paris. The American colony has sent seventy wreaths to be placed on the czar's coffin.

London, Nov. 14.—The wreath sent to St. Petersburg by Queen Victoria is heart shaped, five feet high, and bears the inscription: "Temoignage d' amitie et d' estime de son affectionee soeur et parente."

Berlin, Nov. 14.—King Christian of Denmark, accompanied by Prince Waldemar, arrived here last evening, en route to St. Petersburg. They were met at the station by Emperor William and the Duke of Coburg. After taking tea at the palace they proceeded on their journey, accompanied by the Duke of Coburg. The emperor bade them farewell at the station.

Ambassador Bayard Sails

DEATH FROM THE SPARK.

Does the Present System of Electrocution Produce It?

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Dr. P. J. Gibbons, of this city, sent the following letter to Gov. Flower:

"To His Excellency, Roswell P. Flower, Governor of the State of New York.

"Sir—Being anxious to get a treatment for persons that have accidentally come in contact with electric wires, and as I am convinced that electrocution as practiced and used at the state prison at Auburn and other prisons in this state does not produce death, and that the death of those convicted of capital offenses, and electrocuted is produced from causes other than electricity, I hereby make application for leave to attempt to resuscitate to life Charles F. Wilson, now sentenced to death by electrocution in Auburn state prison, said attempt to be made as soon as he shall have been pronounced dead by the attending physicians. I also respectfully request that said attempt and experiment be made in the presence of a committee of physiologists and electricians to be selected by six of the leading medical colleges in the United States, and that Prof. Austin Flint, M. D., physiologist of New York city, be named as one of said committee. Respectfully,

PETER J. GIBBONS, M. D.

It is the general opinion here that no state officer has power under the law to grant Dr. Gibbons' request.

The electrocution law, which is chapter 490 of the laws of 1888 says: "The punishment of death must, in every case, be inflicted by causing to pass through the body of the convict a current of electricity of sufficient intensity to cause death and the application of such current must be continued until such convict is dead."

"Immediately after the execution a post mortem examination of the body of the convict shall be made by the physicians present.

"After such examination the body, unless claimed by some relative or relatives of the person so executed shall be buried in the grave-yard attached to the prison with a sufficient quantity of quick lime to consume such body without delay."

FRANCE'S MADAGASCAR POLICY

The Government Urged To Display Energy and Decision.

Paris, Nov. 14.—The government's Madagascar policy was first brought up in the chamber by Baron d'Anglas, who, in an interpellation, urged the government to display all the energy and decision that the situation demanded. M. Hanotaux referred to the treaty of 1885. During the nine years since then the Hovas had, he said, violated and ignored that treaty. The patience of the French resident in Madagascar had been severely tried. Practically there had been no security to foreigners in Madagascar. It therefore became necessary to assert the rights of France, and, with that object, M. Le Myre de Vilers, had been sent on a mission to the Hova government. His conciliatory offers had been rejected by the Hovas. The French government now felt obliged to ask the chamber to sanction a credit for such a force as would suffice to secure the undoubted rights of France in Madagascar. The government desired to strike a decisive blow without further loss of time in order to recover the position due France under a treaty approved by the European powers. The public galleries were crowded with people anxious to hear the debate. Among the occupants of the diplomatic gallery was Mr. Eustis, the United States ambassador.

MEXICO PREPARING TO FIGHT.

In Case of a War with Guatemala She Will Be Ready.

City of Mexico, Nov. 14.—Notwithstanding the press denials of the likelihood of war with Guatemala, the Mexican government is taking every possible precaution to meet the situation in the event of diplomacy failing to effect a settlement. The nineteenth battalion sailed from Vera Cruz on Sunday for the border, and the fourth artillery and other troops are preparing to follow. The government ammunition factory has just turned 80,000 cartridges over to the army. Intense animation prevails in all branches of the war department. Mexicans on the border look forward with delight to a rupture with Guatemala.

Traces of the Falcon.

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—Capt. Jones of the British steamship Azov, which arriver here yesterday from Rouen, believes that he discovered a trace of the missing steamship Falcon, which has never been seen since she left this port for St. John's, N. F., on Oct. 3. When in latitude 39.40, longitude 71.18, the Azov discovered a boat about eighteen feet long and of the kind usually carried by whalers like the Falcon. There was no name on it, but Capt. Jones and his crew felt convinced that the boat came from the Falcon, all the more so as it lay directly in the course of vessels proceeding from the Delaware capes to S. John's.

Berlin Cabinet Crisis.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—The emperor has summoned Count Von Hatzfeldt, German ambassador at London, to an audience at Pottsdam. Count Von Hatzfeldt is at present enjoying a holiday at Weisbaden. The object of the emperor is to consult with the ambassador in regard to the ministerial crisis, and it is possible that the count may succeed Baron Marschall Von Bieberstein as minister of foreign affairs, the latter in turn succeeding Dr. Von Boetticher as imperial minister of the interior.

Rev. Eugene Smith Insane.

Kingston, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The Rev. Eugene Smith, of New York, and for the past three years in charge of the parish of the Church of the presentation at Port Ewen, was taken to Mount Hope hospital, Baltimore, Md., his mind being affected. His brain became wrecked as the result of a severe attack of intermittent fever about a year ago, and his condition has steadily grown worse. His brother, the Rev. Thomas Smith, of Sing Sing, has been acting priest at Port Ewen for several weeks.

The Cotton Crop.

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 14.—The estimates of the cotton crop made on the exchange here vary from nine to ten million bales. It is fully expected that Charleston's receipts this year will be fully 400,000 bales of which 188,782 bales have bee so far received.

FIVE PER CENT. BONDS

Secretary Carlisle Asks for Proposals.

The Issue Will Not Exceed $50,000,000—Bidders Whose Proposals Are Accepted Will Have To Pay in Gold—The Denominations of the Bonds Will Be $50 and Upward.

Washington, Nov. 14.—After several days of denial of the well-authenticated statement that President Cleveland had determined to order another issue of $50,000,000 of 5 per cent. bonds, under the provisions of the resumption act, in order to replenish the gold reserve of the treasury so as to redeem legal tenders and treasury notes issued to buy silver under the Sherman act, Secretary Carlisle sent out a circular yesterday inviting bids for fifty millions of 5 per cent. bonds, redeemable in coin at the pleasure of the government after ten years.

The price is given as the lowest at which bids will be accepted, but the secretary of the treasury reserves the right to reject all bids.

The bonds are payable under the law in coin, but they must be paid for in gold coin or gold certificates.

Secretary Carlisle issued the following circular at 3:15 yesterday afternoon:

"Circular inviting proposals for 5 per cent. bonds.

"Treasury Department,
Washington, Nov. 13.

"By virtue of the authority contained in the act of congress entitled 'An act to provide for the resumption of specie payments,' approved Jan. 14, 1855, the secretary of the treasury hereby gives public notice that sealed proposals will be received at the treasury department, office of the secretary, until 12 o'clock noon, on Nov. 24, 1894, for United States 5 per cent. bonds, in either registered or coupon form, dated Feb. 1, 1894, redeemable in coin at the pleasure of the government after ten years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest, payable quarterly, in coin, at the rate of 5 per centum per annum.

"Bidders whose proposals are accepted will be required to pay 20 per cent. in gold coin, or gold certificates, upon the amounts of their bids, and to pay in like coin or certificates an additional 20 per cent. at the expiration of each ten days thereafter, until the whole is paid; but they may, at their option, pay the entire amount of their bids when notified of acceptance, or at any time when an instalment is payable.

"The first payment, however, of not less than 20 per cent., must be made when the bidder receives notice of the acceptance of his proposal.

"The denominations of the bonds will be $50 and upward, and bidders will, in their proposals, state the denominations desired, whether registered or coupon, the price which the bidder proposes to pay, the place where it is desired that the bonds shall be delivered, and the office, whether that of the treasurer of the United States or an assistant treasurer of the United States, where it will be most convenient for the bidder to deposit the amounts of his payments.

"The bonds will be dated Feb. 1, 1894, in order to make the proposed issue uniform as to date with the existing issue; but interest thereon will begin Nov. 1, 1894, and bidders will be required to pay accrued interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the face value of their bonds from Nov. 1 to the date or dates of payments. The total issue of bonds in pursuance of this notice will not exceed the sum of $50,000,000.

"The secretary of the treasury hereby expressly reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

"All proposals should be addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C., and should be distinctly marked 'Proposals for the purchase of 5 per cent. bonds.'

"Blank forms for proposals may be had on application to the secretary of the treasury. J. G. CARLISLE,

"Secretary of the Treasury."

Secretary Carlisle said to-day that he had nothing to add to his official circular on the subject.

Anglesea Fishermen All Saved.

Cape May, N. J., Nov. 14.—A telegram was received here from Savannah, Ga., announcing the safe arrival there aboard a vessel of the six Anglesea fishermen who were supposed to have perished in a storm on Nov. 5, while out at sea in their boats fishing. On Nov. 5, sixteen fishermen put out in their boats from Anglesea and they were all caught in the storm and their boats scattered. Within a day or two ten of the men had been landed at different ports by vessels that had picked them up but hope for the remaining six had about been abandoned. The news of their rescue and safe arrival at Savannah has caused great rejoicing.

The Corespondent Is in Prison.

New York, Nov. 14.—Douglass J. Neame has begun an action in the English courts against his wife, Mrs. Lelia Olyve Neame. Two officers of the high court of judicature brought over the summons and a copy of the complaint from London. Frank Ellison, now in Sing Sing for five years for assaulting William Henriques, Mrs. Neames' father, is named as co-respondent. Mrs. Neame will defend the the suit, and has already consulted with her consul on the matter.

Threatened To Lynch the Boys.

Larned, Kas., Nov. 14.—Before Judge Vandivert Harvey and Arnold, the 18 year old boys who murdered Mayor Marsh of Kinsley, pleaded guilty of first degree murder. They were sentenced to imprisonment in the state penitentiary until such time as the governor shall decide that they shall be hanged. A crowd of people threatened to lynch the boys but they were safely removed to Leavenworth.

Ex-Comptroller Wemple's Firm Fails

Fultonville, N. Y., Nov. 14.—William B. Wemple's Sons, foundrymen, of this place, have made an assignment to John H. Morrison. The business was established more than forty years ago. The assets and liabilities are unknown. Ex-Comptroller Edward Wemple is a member of the firm. There are preferred creditors to the amount of $6,500.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE.

A Suffering Woman Testifies.

Mrs. Henrietta Burton, of Janvier, N. J., writes: For a long time I suffered from a disordered stomach. My appetite was gone and what little I ate distressed me terribly. My health failed rapidly. I became very weak and feared I should never be well. After reading your "Guide to Health," I was encouraged to try Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. Its action was so prompt that I soon felt like a new woman, and am now completely cured."

MUNYON'S STOMACH AND DYSPEPSIA CURE cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

JAPAN REMAINS SILENT

The Prospects for Mediation Not Bright.

She Looks With Suspicion at the Chinese Motives in Inaugurating the Negotiations—China Must Modify Her Expectations and Make Them Definite.

London, Nov. 14.—It is stated here upon good authority that the European powers are not disposed to take any action in regard to the war between China and Japan as long as the government of the United States is offering mediation.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The prospects for United States mediation between China and Japan look less bright today. Seven days have passed since Secretary Gresham cabled Minister Dun at Tokio offering the good offices of President Cleveland as mediator in case Japan joined China in requesting it, and as yet Japan has not accepted. This leads to the conclusion that the Japanese government looks with suspicion at the Chinese motives in inaugurating the negotiations, and at China's intimations that she will expect Great Britain, the recognized friend of China, to co-operate with the United States in the settlement. Moreover, it is gradually becoming apparent that in the event of mediation China would expect Japan to stop her victorious march through China, which has already resulted in the capture of many Chinese towns and the overrunning of northeastern China, and to actually lay down her arms, withdraw her troops to Japan, restore China her captured towns and establish a status exactly as it was when the war began.

The belief is growing that the delay of the Japanese government is due largely to these considerations, and that no acceptance of American mediation is likely until China modifies her expectations and makes them so definite as to be beyond future doubt or diplomatic misconstruction.

Japan has been visited by another disastrous earthquake. Sakata, a town on the northwest coast, suffered most severely. The seismic force was exercised chiefly in a vertical direction and its effects were therefore exceptionally disastrous. Houses tumbled down before their inmates could escape. The ground, fissured in many places, poured out muddy water which converted the streets into rivers and the horror of calamity was accentuated by a conflagration that broke out at thirteen points simultaneously and destroyed 2,500 houses in two hours. Two houses were actually swallowed and one wealthy merchant had forty-eight warehouses burned. In one dwelling a family of seven persons were crushed to death; in another nine met a similar fate. A group of terrified citizens who had taken refuge at the base of a colossal bronze vase standing in front of the town hospital were killed by the fall of the vase. Altogether 300 people were killed and wounded in Sakata and the surrounding districts, while the number of houses destroyed by fire was over 500 and an equal number were shaken down.

Tien-Tsin, Nov. 14.—Li Hung Chang's son has left Tien-Tsin, taking with him his valuables. Col. von Hanneken lately submitted, at the foreign board's request, a scheme of military reorganization. The emperor and the Manchu statesmen approved the scheme, but the stratagem of certain wealthy Taotais frustrated it. There is much popular discontent over the imbecility of the government.

THE STORM IN EUROPE.

Enormous Damage Done in France and England.

London, Nov. 14.—The gale along the English channel was the most violent experienced this year. The channel steamers report having had fearful passages. The Victoria was unable to make Dover and returned to Calais. The steamer La Flandre was badly damaged and many of her sailors were disabled. The barkentine Elizabeth Jane, loaded with grain, was found derelict and towed to Dover. Nothing has been heard of her crew. The warships anchored at St. Malo, France, were in serious danger and put out to sea flying distress signals. Cherbourg and other ports are crowded with damaged craft.

The steamer Preussen was torn from her moorings at Hamburg and damaged many other vessels with which she collided, although she sustained no damage herself.

The storm was very violent in Paris. Much damage was done to chimneys, roofs and windows. Three persons were killed by falling chimneys and several more were injured. The velocity of the wind, as recorded on the Eiffel tower, was 82 miles an hour. Deaths and injuries due to the storm are reported from Nantes, Rouen and other towns in France.

Telegraph and telephone lines were blown down in France, Belgium and Germany.

The loss of property and livestock by the floods in Devon, Cornwall, Dorset, Somerset and elsewhere in England is enormous.

Forest Fires in Arkansas.

Beebe, Ark., Nov. 14.—The forest fires are approaching dangerously near this place. The city was enveloped in smoke last night and this morning it hangs like a pall. Many hunting parties were camped in the woods, and it is feared several bodies will be found. There has been no rain here for several months, and as the St. Francis basin is dry, lumbermen are apprehensive of serious loss. Farmers are out fighting the fire, but it spreads so rapidly that little or no headway against it can be made. The situation at Neelyville is alarming and farmers are fighting day and night to save their homes and buildings.

Would Not Proclaim Martial Law.

London, Nov. 14.—The Central News correspondent in St. Petersburg says: "It is stated that after the death of Alexander III., M. Dournovo, minister of the interior, fearing disturbances, advised the Czar Nicholas to proclaim martial law in the capital, and that Nicholas rejected the advice. It is therefore expected that M. Dournovo will resign after the funeral."

GEN. CLAY MARRIED.

The Bride Is Uneducated and Unprepossessing.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 14.—Gen. Cassius M. Clay was married to 15-year-old Dora Richardson yesterday morning, Squire S. M. Douglass officiating. Only the farm hands and relatives of the girl were present. Gen. Clay's children did all they could to prevent their aged father from marrying Miss Richardson, but he paid no attention to their entreaties.

The general said in regard to his marriage: "I have been in trouble for three months. They have tried to prevent me from marrying anybody ever since I got a divorce from my first wife. It is all on account of property. It is entailed to my children and, of course, if I should become the father of any more children it would naturally lessen the value of the interests of the others. I love her better than I ever loved any woman. I first became interested in her when her mother and two little children were on a high bridge of the Cincinnati Southern railroad and a train came along. The mother told the children to run. One of them was Dora and she got off the bridge just in time to escape the locomotive. Her mother was killed. As soon as the train swept by Dora rushed back to her mother's side. I call that heroism of the brightest type and I admire heroism. They have tried in every way to poison her mind against me, but notwithstanding their pleading and threats, she was firm in carrying out the plan she had agreed on."

The bride is not prepossessing but well developed for her age and below the medium height. Her education has been sadly neglected and the neighbors say she can scarcely read and write.

Miss Laura Clay, president of the Kentucky Equal Rights association, who resides in this city was seen but declined to say anything regarding the marriage of her father except to exclaim: "It is too awful to mention."

THE GREAT CHURCH CONGRESS.

Sixteenth Annual Session Opened at Boston.

Boston, Nov. 14.—With all the pomp and with the full beauty of the church liturgy, the sixteenth annual session of the great church congress of America was formally opened in Trinity Episcopal church yesterday. It was a most impressive gathering, composed of bishops, priests and earnest attentive churchmen and women from all parts of the country representing every class and every creed.

A large surpliced choir, made up of the best choristers in Boston, was under the direction of George Osgood, while the grand organ was in charge of Organist Parker of Trinity. In the processional, Bishop Lawrence was accompanied by Right Rev. David Sessums, D. D., bishop of the southern see of Louisiana, and Right Rev. Nelson S. Rulison, assistant bishop of central Pennsylvania. Bishop Rulison conducted the services and at the close of a finely rendered musical prelude, he delivered a strong address on Christian duty.

MUST STAND TRIAL.

The Court Upholds the Senate in the Sugar Contempt Case.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Judge Cole in the United States district court of the District of Columbia overruled the demurrer in the case of John W. Macartney of Washington and E. R. Chapman of New York, brokers, who refused to answer certain questions before the senate sugar investigating committee, and holds the defendants for trial. This was in the nature of a test case and the decision means that Havemeyer, Searles and Seymour, who were recently indicted, and the newspaper men, Edwards and Schriver, who were first indicted, will have to stand trial.

Pigeon Shooting Matches.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—A pigeon shooting match was arranged between Capt. J. L. Brewer of New York, who claims the title of champion wing shot of the world, and J. A. R. Elliott of Kansas City, champion of America. The match will be at 200 birds each for $500 a side and will be shot at Burnside, Nov. 17. Dr. Carver challenged Elliott to shoot at 100 birds a day for 100 consecutive days, Sundays excepted for $250 a side each day, money to be posted twenty-four hours in advance and forfeited on failure to carry out the terms of the agreement. Elliott declined.

The Diphtheria Cure.

New York, Nov. 14.—Dr. Paul Gibier, director of Pasteur institute, Ninety-seventh street and Central park west, and editor of the New York Theraupeutic Review, announces that the first shipment of anti-toxine serum for the cure of diphtheria, manufactured in this country, was sent from the institute last night to the board of health in New Orleans, where diphtheria has been raging for nearly a month. The second shipment will be made to Toronto, Ont., to-morrow.

Strikers Blacklisted.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 14.—The result of the hatters' strike, it is said, shuts out 1,000 men whom the factory proprietors have blacklisted. Many of these men are in destitute circumstances and cannot be relieved by the Hatters' union because the funds of the union are exhausted. Friends of the distressed families are collecting money from the charitably disposed. The men lost $100,000 in wages during the six weeks of voluntary idleness.

Excited Irish Parliamentarians.

Dublin, Nov. 14.—The meeting of the Irish parliamentary party, held here under the presidency of Justin McCarthy, it is learned, was very exciting. The Dublin Herald says: "A most fiery and eruptive scene followed, with epithet after epithet showered at the heads of the rival combatants. One section favored a forward policy, while Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon and their entourage did not want to do anything to embarrass the government."

Large Fire at Caledonia, N. Y.

Caledonia, N. Y., Nov. 14—About one-half the business portion of this place was destroyed by fire during the early morning. The fire started in Davis & Bundy's grocery store and spread rapidly. Efforts of the firemen were unavailing, and five stores, including the handsome town hall and three residences were burned. Loss about $50,000. Three firemen were hurt, but not seriously.

Says the Labor Commission's Report Is Fair.

The Railway Age Claims That It Shows Ignorance as to the True State of Affairs in the Town of Pullman—Misstates and Overlooks Other Facts.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 14.—President Debs, of the American Railway union, is much pleased with the report of the commission appointed to investigate the strike. He says that it is in accord with the testimony and that the finding is one of not guilty of the charges against A. R. U. officers now pending in the United States courts. He approves the recommendation for a strike commission and believes such a commission would carry public opinion with it in its reports to an extent that would enforce its recommendations though it would have no legal authority to compel either the railroad company or the employes to abide by them. As to the effect of the report on the American Railway union, he said that there would be a rapid growth in the membership. This would be especially true in the east where until recently no effort had been made in that respect. He has been summoned to appear in the United States court at Chicago next Friday, but he does not know whether it is to hear Judge Woods' decision in the contempt case or to appear in the conspiracy cases.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—The editor of the Railway Age gave out for publication an open letter addressed to the members of the strike commission whose report on the cause and conditions of the American Railway union strike last summer was given out yesterday. The letter is a criticism of the report to "correct any oversight or misstatements of facts."

Quoting the paragraph in the commission's report which says that it should be noted that until the railroads set the example a general union of railroad employes was never attempted, the editors of the Age say: "This statement is wholly false. The history of railway labor organizations of the last twenty years is largely made up of what your report says was never attempted. Again and again has allied labor on several roads been called on to enforce the demand of one class of labor against one company. The ignorance of this fact and the further fact that it was the repeated experience of it which at length drove the railways to unite also in self defense is to any one at all familiar with the history of labor almost incomprehensible."

The statement of the commission that "the cut in wages during this period averaged about 25 per cent." is pronounced untrue. The average reduction in wages for all shop employes was 19 per cent. says the letter.

The editors say the Pullman Standard contract placed in evidence which shows a return of two cents a mile was misinterpreted by the commission as there are exceptions to this rate of payment.

On the question of high rents at Pullman it is denied that the company aims to secure 5 per cent. on the investment and that ever since the houses were built in 1881 the income has not exceeded 4 1-2 per cent.

The commission's assertions that no violence or destruction of property by strikers or sympathizers took place at Pullman and that until July 3, no extraordinary protection was had from the police or military against even anticipated disorders are contradicted. The omission in the report of the fact that 221 guards of the Pullman company were in service before the end of June is commented on and the assertion is made that when the military were put in the field, they were used at Pullman longer than anywhere else.

The letter closes as follows: "These errors of fact in your report range all the way from the inaccurate quotation of comparatively trivial figures to false generalizations as to the whole scope and essence of the trouble. There are many minor points in your report of which criticism and correction would be easy. It would be equally easy to pillory the cheap levity with which you treat the educational institutions and the "aesthetic and sanitary features" of Pullman. But these things—errors of taste or fallacies in theory—will be apparent enough to the general readers and will receive their proper treatment from the frank critic of the daily press.

Thurman's 81st Birthday.

Columbus, O., Nov. 14.—Yesterday was the 81st birthday of Allan G. Thurman, and it was observed by the club bearing his name, which called upon him in a body. Judge Thurman made a speech eulogizing the party and its principles, declaring that in spite of recent reverses, it would ultimately triumph, and urged his hearers to continue in their devotion to democracy. He made no reference to party leaders or pending issues, his speech being largely anecdotal and reminiscent. The judge is in good health barring his rheumatism, from which he is a constant sufferer.

Ives Leads Schaefer.

New York, Nov. 14.—The billiard match between Schaefer and Ives was continued last night and resulted in the score of 832 to 1,200 in favor of Ives. The average of last night's play was Schaefer, 23 1-5, and Ives, 63 1-5, and the average of the match so far is Schaefer, 32, and Ives, 42 2-13. The largest runs were Schaefer, 124, and Ives, 223.

Played with Dynamite.

Reading, Pa., Nov. 14.—While three children of Aaron Dunkle of Longswamp, this county, were playing with a dynamite cartridge near a stove it exploded and all were badly injured. One of them, a boy, had a hand nearly blown off and the others were cut and burned about the bodies.

Congressman-elect Wright Dead.

Trenton, Ont., Nov. 14.—Hon. Myron B Wright, of Susquehanna, Pa., re-elected to congress from the 15th district of Pennsylvania, at the recent election, died here yesterday.

FOR MEN MUST WORK.

The Many Uncomplaining But Weary Toilers.

THEY GO WITHOUT REST TO MAKE SURE OF HAPPINESS FOR OTHERS.

Overwrought Nerves Work Half Fed and Cry Out With Pain.

For eight out of every ten who ever take a vacation, there remains behind some hard working, uncomplaining toiler who is only too happy if he can provide a rest and a change for those dear to him.

And it is lucky if in many cases this self-denial does not get to be regarded as a duty, and the thought of a rest for one's self a thing impossible.

The number of such overwrought men, who simply toil right on without so much as a two weeks' respite a year, is surprisingly large.

Grateful wives and children should see then, that these cheerful and unselfish fathers and brothers do not "work themselves to death." Signs of failing health and nervous weakness, that none so quickly detect as they, should be promptly and firmly combatted. A thorough feeding of worn out nervous tissues by Paine's celery compound soon does away with every form of nervous debility and exhaustion. This great nerve and brain invigorator, Paine's celery compound, supplies rich material for the repair of all the nerve tissues, it makes the thin, used-up blood again capable of feeding the system, and purifies it of all humors that work harm to the body.

There are countless men so absorbed in business that they disregard the indications of nervous weakness and think that their neuralgia, headaches and rheumatism are trifles. It is the duty of those members of the household who see this gradual decline from health to insist on a building up of the "run down" system and a strengthening of the nerves and brain by a vigorous tonic like Paine's celery compound.

In every city in this country there are homes that have escaped sickness and misfortune because some prudent member has known the value of Paine's celery compound for strengthening nerves and brain, purifying the blood and building up the vigor of the tired body. For overworked men, for nervous, "run down" women, in a bloodless condition, Paine's celery compound is the regular prescription of family practitioners all over the country. It has permanently freed thousands from neuralgia, rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney troubles and blood diseases by invigorating the body, purifying the blood and feeding the nerves. Nothing gives strength like Paine's celery compound.

Had we waited patiently in the chamber it would no doubt have been possible to make our way out in the usual manner, but it was too late to think of that now. There was no course open but to go on, so I said nothing about our terrible mistake to my wife, who had not noticed the noise, being in front and absorbed by the spectacle before her.

As regards the modus operandi of the wondrous mechanism by means of which the passage was opened and closed, I can only offer my opinion, arrived at after much subsequent reflection on the subject. In some incomprehensible way the moon's rays, intensified or otherwise affected by the lenses, are ably to act on some hidden machinery — probably hydraulic — to such an extent that the huge block of stone is wont to fall and rise periodically at certain seasons, dependent on the lunar phases. Of course this is mere surmise, but it seems to be the simplest way of accounting for the phenomena we witnessed. I am thoroughly convinced in my own mind that it was the lens-frame that governed the movement of the gigantic opercu-lum, and I deeply regret that while we were crawling up the gallery I did not observe the construction of the walls more attentively, especially at the lower end, and also along the whole extent.

THEIR EYES FIXED UPON US WITH A STERN, INQUIRING LOOK.

I said just now that my wife was entranced at the spectacle that met her view on emerging from behind the lens-frame. It was indeed no wonder that this should be so; and when I followed her, after a few moments, I too, was equally stricken with amazement. A vast, lofty hall, decorated in a style, and with a degree of richness surpassing anything either of us had ever seen, appeared before us; everything it contained being clearly visible in the brilliant yet soft toned light. It was octagonal in shape, with a curtained recess in one of the sides; the other seven being thickly covered with sculptured figures similar to the temple coverings of upper Egypt, save that the coloring was superb, and as bright as the day it was first laid on. Interspersed in all directions were glittering trophies composed apparently of jewels and precious stones, while in niches and on pedestals were statues exceeding life size, and either made of solid gold and silver, or else thickly covered with layers of the precious metals. To give an adequate idea of the majestic apartment, and all that it contained, would require a volume; it is impossible to do more than indicate in a fragmentary manner some few special points that a hurried examination enabled us to notice

Rising to our feet we gazed around in wonder, not unmixed with awe, and then slowly advanced in the direction of the recess, pausing at every stop to contemplate the astonishing objects that were to be seen on all sides. The hall seemed tenantless, but when we had crossed about one-third of the floor the curtains concealing the recess shook as though stirred by some unseen hand (or by a breeze) that was to lifelike that we both sank down on our knees, terrified at the imperial aspect of the mysterious monarch and his bride.

It was not for some considerable time that we mustered up enough courage to approach the dais, but seeing that the figures remained perfectly motionless we at length ventured to do so. On somewhat closer inspection it turned out that our involuntary homage to royalty had in reality been paid to the king of terrors. The two shapes on the couch were mummies, but the embalming process had been so perfectly and artistically carried out that even the lapse of centuries had not given rise to the slightest sign of decay. The glittering eyes that had caused us so much fear turned out to be simply a skillful combination of diamonds and crystal, fitted with minute springs that allowed of an infinitessimal amount of movement in the orbs under the influence of the faintest current of air. In this way the lifeless effect of perfect immobility was obviated, and it was only natural that at first we should have thought ourselves in the presence of living beings.

The left hand of the youthful bride of countless summers was hanging near the edge of the couch, and a ring which no doubt had slipped off one of her fingers, was lying on the floor at some distance from the dais. Happening to catch sight of this ancient gem close to my feet I half mechanically picked it up and it in my pocket. It was a scarab set in gold, and on the inner surface there was a very clearly cut cartouch.

Having by this time almost got over our supernatural alarm we were naturally anxious to examine the royal mummies more accurately, and for this purpose proceeded to ascend the two or three steps which, I should have said before, separated the recess from the remainder of the hall. These steps were wide and shallow, but otherwise is imperceptible. The drapery, which recalled Zanzibar matting as regards colors and texture, then became separated down the center, each half being drawn upwards as in a theater.

Inside the recess thus disclosed, and almost filling it, was a dais surmounted by a canopy, which shaded a magnificent couch constructed of polished granite, with elaborately sculptured sides, and spread over the surface of the couch were numerous cushions and variegated mats, somewhat resembling the curtains, but thicker in the woof. Reposing on this regal bier were two human forms, side by side, in a semi-recumbent attitude. Both were clad in sumptuous robes, and on the head of each was an elaborate structure, partly crown and partly tiara. The form on the right hand was that of an old man, with very prominent features and a small pointed beard almost snow-white in color, but his partner was a lovely female in the bloom of youth.

The eyes of the stately pair were wide open and seemed to be fixed on us with a stern, inquiring expression, while the flesh tints and general appearance were so absolutely not remarkable. Hand in hand we advanced, when all at once dais and canopy, marble couch and mummies seemed to fly up into the air, and before we could realize what had happened we found ourselves sliding down an inclined plane with frightful rapidity, and in darkness as complete as that we had experienced during our imprisonment in the chamber. The revolving stone on which we simultaneously stepped simply swung back into position, while with ever-increasing momentum we shot down, down, apparently into the very bowels of the earth.

How long the awful slide continued neither of us was ever able to say. The suddenness of the occurrence quite startled us out of our wits, though like drowning people we still retained our mutual clasp. At last the rate of progress began to slacken sensibly; had the initial velocity been maintained, we should inevitably have been dashed to pieces at the bottom. Fortunately, however, the speed became gradually less and less as the acuteness of the declivity diminished, till finally it dwindled down to not more than a few miles an hour. Then suddenly my foot struck against something which seemed to give way before the impact, and the next moment we were lying, comparatively uninjured, but absolutely breathless, on a heap of beautifully soft sand under the star-lit sky

As may be supposed, a long time elapsed before we came to ourselves after this last fearful experience. What we had gone through before was bad enough, but nothing could stand, or even approach, the awful sensation of falling through darkness, in momentary expectation of being destroyed in some terrible manner.

When we were once more sufficiently collected to look about us with something like composure I found that we had emerged in the temple of the Sphinx. It was almost inconceivable that we could have come all that distance underground, but the incontestable fact remained that we had done so. The great block of stone which yielded so readily to my foot had fallen back into its original position, and was indistinguishable from the rest. It was impossible, therefore, to tell which one it was, though I tried for some time to identify it.

Thus ended this most extraordinary adventure. Sometimes it seems to me like a dream, and the few people to whom we have related it have invariably been politely incredulous. The queen's ring however remains. It is unquestionably a genuine relic of the ancient times, and experts all unite in assigning to it an age that is almost fabulous.

THE END.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The regular weekly singing lesson under Principal Travell took place this morning. Most of the time was spent in practicing for the Thanksgiving Day exercises.

The Thanksgiving Day exercises will be held the Monday following Thanksgiving.

A number of the High School boys were present at the Crescent Rink last night when Mr. Page, physical instructor in the Orange Y. M. C. A., explained the game of basket ball. Two sides were selected and a practice game played. The game seemed to find favor with most of the boys and will probably become quite popular during the Winter It is planned to have a game between teams from the High School and Leal's School in connection with the Y. M. C. A. fair.

The High School eleven will play the North Plainfield School team this afternoon at 4 on the Willow avenue grounds. The North Plainfield boys will bring their best players and try hard to reverse the score of the last game. NINETY-FIVE Sad Plight of the Mundys.

Through Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh the case of George Mundy and wife of Westfield, who claim support from Plainfield, has been carried to Elizabeth on appeal from Judge Collins's Court. The matter will be decided in about a month.

In the meantime the Westfield overseer refuses to help them, as he fears that if the case goes against his town he will have to foot the bill. Overseer Vanderbeek tells him, however, that if Westfield is defeated the town will be responsible, and on the other hand if Plainfield wins the city will pay him for the month's support.

Sewer Progress.

Cook & Co. have three gangs of men at work on Putnam avenue, and the section will soon be finished if the weather proves favorable. The frost is light, and has not interfered with the digging.

Sewer-pipes have been piled on East Fifth street, ready for the excavation of the street.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1. Our price 45c and 90c.

STATE CHARITIES AID ASSOCIATION RECOMMEND REFORMS.

Plainfield Prominent in the Work, and Influential Plainfielders Named on the Board of Managers.

The State Charities Aid Association of New Jersey opened its ninth annual session in Newark yesterday morning. Dr. George S. Mott, of Flemington, presided, and Mrs. Williamson, of Elizabeth, the General Secretary, said in the report that the work of the organization had trebled in three years, and the opinion was expressed that county authorities should provide work for prisoners. Officers were elected as follows: President—Charlton T Lewis, of Morristown, Vice-President—Rev Albert Erdman, Morristown; Treasurer—Thomas M Gopsill, Jr., Jersey City; Secretary—Mrs B. Williamson, Elizabeth; Librarian—Mrs B Williamson, Elizabeth.

A report of the board to Gov. Werts set forth that the association desired to be known as the State Charities Aid and Prison Reform Association. Reference was made to the high salaries of county officials, and to the serious influence of politicians, chiefly in Hudson County. Probation for offenders is advocated and an intermediate prison recommended. It was said that there are 108 girls in the State Industrial School; that 32 were admitted last year, and 21 placed in good homes. No attempt at escape has been made in four years. Six male and six female trustees have managed the home for 23 years. A reformatory prison for women, like that at Shelburne, Mass., or at Indianapolis, with a ticket-of-leave system, was recommended.

The Board of Managers was chosen as follows: Charlton T Lewis, Morristown; Mrs Dexter Tiffany, Plainfield; Rev Dr George S Mott, Flemington; Mrs Archibald Alexander, Hoboken; Martin P Gray, Salem; J C Pumpelly, Morristown; Rev Dr Albert Erdman, Morristown; Mrs William M Hughes, Morristown; Rev D R Foster, Trenton; Major Z K Pangborn, Jersey City; Miss Sarah Riley, Bridgeton; Judge Abel I Smith, Jersey City; Thomas M Gopsill, Jr., Miss Ruth Marsh, East Orange; David P Hall, Plainfield; Dr J B Richmond, Newark; President Austin Scott, New Brunswick; J J Bergen, Somerville; Rev Mr Nourse, Elizabeth; Rev Dr F M McAllister, Elizabeth; H P Reynolds, Plainfield; Rev Dr Kingsley Twining, Morristown; F B Lee, Trenton; Dr Elias Marsh, Paterson; and Mrs B Williamson, Elizabeth.

Plainfield Good Land to Possess.

Directly under its standing text "The Lord thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it" The New Jersey Baptist Bulletin remarks, concerning the recent New Jersey Baptist Convention here:

"Plainfield, a city of about 13,000 inhabitants, is pre-eminently worthy of note for its beautiful homes, wide streets, and general air of comfort and good taste. The site is level, and all the modern city improvements—water, electric lights and electric cars—are enjoyed here. * * * *

"The morning trains brought the people in good numbers. Now was apparent the perfect efficiency of the Entertainment Committee, O. B. Leonard, generalissimo, and his lieutenants. We offer no criticisms on other like committees, but simply affirm that when the Plainfield Committee is beaten in the perfection of arrangement and comfort afforded, then the delegates will be better entertained than they deserve."

A Newspaper on His Hands.

The Central New Jersey Herald, which was sold to F. S. Lockwood, a New York newspaper man, over a month ago, reverted yesterday to its former owner, Wm. R. Wilson. Mr. Lockwood raised $800 among Democrats in Elizabeth to run the newspaper during the campaign. After this money was expended Mr. Lockwood concluded that his investment was not a paying venture, and he decided to give it up. There are rumors that ex-Alderman Egenolf may purchase The Herald and consolidated it with The Free Press.

The employes of The Herald, it is said, have not been paid in two weeks, and it is said about $600 is due them. Lockwood is out of town.

Fraternal Visit.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., received an invitation Tuesday evening from G. Van Houten Post No. 3, G. A. R. of Jersey City, inviting them to be present at a reception Monday evening, Nov. 26, in the Tabernacle, Jersey City. Commander-in-Chief Thomas G. Lawler of Illinois, and Staff and Department Commander John Shields of Flemington and staff will be their guests. A number from the Post will probably attend.

New Jersey Housewives

have a reputation for careful discrimination in the selection of food articles, and rarely leave this most important duty to others. One result of this appreciation of the best foods known is the varied but necessary stock of Hecker's Self-Raising Flour (7 kinds) and Cereals (9 kinds) generally to be found in well-stocked grocery stores.

HOAGLAND-M'KILLOP.

The Popular Young Man Wins a Charming Bride.

REV. C. E. HERRING OFFICIATES.

A Charming Home Wedding — A Chrysanthemum Symphony in Pink and White — Plainfield Station Shower of Rice Escaped — Guests Who Were There.

Miss Maggie Lang MacKillop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell MacKillop, was married to Alvin Elston Hoagland, one of Plainfield's most popular young business men, last evening. It was a very pretty pink and white chrysanthemum wedding.

Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church performed the ceremony at 6:30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. MacKillop, 13 Westervelt avenue. Only relatives and immediate friends were present. The house was beautifully decorated with pink and white chrysanthemums, massed in every advantageous place.

The bride wore a traveling gown of gray and carried a few pink roses. The ceremony was performed in the parlor beneath a floral horseshoe. The ceremony was a beautiful, impressive one, and as the minister finished, the guests hastened forward to present their hearty congratulations.

A wedding supper was served afterwards; with dancing and other amusements the evening passed away very pleasantly. The bride and groom left at 9, going to New York by way of Netherwood to escape the crowd that awaited them at the North Avenue station. After a wedding trip of a week they will return to take up their residence at the groom's home, 664 West Front street The bride has many useful and handsome presents.

Among the guests at the wedding were: Mr and Mrs Comiskey of Brooklyn; Mr and Mrs Abram Cadmus and Miss Cadmus, Mr and Mrs William Shotwell, Freeman Shotwell, Mrs Julius Williams, Mrs Dietrich, the Misses Dietrich, Mr and Mrs F W Bird, Mr and Mrs John Abbott, John and Will Abbott, the Misses Abbott, Miss Pansy Herring; Miss Gordon of New York; J Thompson of New York; Charles MacKillop of Brooklyn; Mr Galt of New York; Miss Walker of Brooklyn; Mrs Thorpe, Mr and Mrs Augustus Searing, and Frank Flannery.

EVER WORKING FOR HUMANITY.

National Commendation Bestowed on The Daily Press for Its Noble Part in Philanthropic Work.

A. V. Tait of Battle Creek, Mich., secretary of the International Religious Liberty Association, sends the following appreciative letter to The Daily Press:

You will please accept thanks for your excellent account of the liberation from prison of W. B. Capps, and the circumstances which brought it about. We are deeply grateful for the noble part The Daily Press has taken in this matter, not only because of the service rendered Mr. Capps, but also because it is an assurance that a sense of justice and a fellow-feeling for the oppressed yet dwell in many hearts. * * * We thank you again for the philanthropic work you have done in connection with the case of Mr. Capps, and trust you may ever be found upholding the rights of the down-trodden.

From Whisper to Thunder.

That wonderful music-maker, the Symphony, is to be exhibited at the Festival of Nations. Any music now written, no matter how difficult, is played by this instrument, with effects not attained by human fingers. A dozen hands, so to speak, touch the keys, producing marvelous results. The grandeur of a requiem, the vivacity of a minuet, or the rollicking barcaroll, are all rendered with equal ease. The Symphony is so arranged that the whisper of the breeze may be changed in a moment to the thunder of the elements. It is organ, orchestra, or choir, at command. No musical education is required to enable one to play a march, serenade, orchestra or polka. A child can render the most difficult selection to the delight of every hearer.

She Was Their Oldest Member.

Rev. F. E. Peterson, writing of the death of Mrs. Hannah Drake of Dunellen, widow of Andrew Drake, in her 89th year, says:

"Sister Drake was the oldest, continuous members of the Piscataway Seventh-Day Baptist Church, with which she united by baptism in 1825. She has been failing rapidly for the past year or two, and the end came peacefully. In her last hours she seemed to think that her 'Andrew' was coming to take her home, which it is our comfort to believe he has done—or at least that she is joined again to her loved ones, and found rest with her Lord. Three children, two sons and a daughter, remain. Services were held First-day afternoon in the church. John XII; 24."

Raffle for Poultry.

A raffle for a turkey and chicken takes place at J. Hipp's Manhattan Wine Rooms, Somerset street, next Saturday night. The highest throw gets the turkey, and the lowest the chicken.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The quarterly examinations still keep coming, and today we were again surprised with some. They occurred in the following classes: Senior English Literature, Senior Greek, Greek History, and English History.

The Senior class held another pronouncing match, only in addition to the pronunciation of the word it had to be put in a sentence. One side consisted of Miss Valentine Chandor, captain; Miss Helen A. Hazen, lieutenant; H. Oscar Nightingale, Miss Edith Darby, George A. Horne, John V. Beekman, Jr., Frederick Coriell and Miss Bertha Thorne; and the other side of Edward O Clark, captain; C. B. Morse, lieutenant; Miss Franc E. Bailey, Henry B. Drake, Thomas D. Blair, Edgar I. Serrell, Miss Laura L. Emmons, Miss Etta Raybert, and Miss Mabel Force.

Principal Travell acted as judge, while Elwood Sebring kept tally of the mistakes and had charge of the dictionary. After a very exciting match Principal Travell decided that it was a tie.

The High School football eleven contest played against the North Plainfield school eleven and defeated them by the score of 16 to 0.

The teams lined up as follows:

HIGH SCHOOL.		NORTH PLAINFIELD.
E. Sebring	right end	J. Lane
C. Bittenhouse	right tackle	W. Conover
E. Rapalje	right guard	W. Jeffry
J. H. Craig	centre guard	W. Loizeaux
R. A. McGee	left guard	R. Carroll
R. Douglas	left tackle	C. Dolliver
G. A. Horne	left end	C. Stout
F. W. Cornwell	quarter back	L. Hummer
H. Richardson	left half back	W. Buell
A. B. Crane	right half back	H. Moore
E. I. Serrell	full back	G. Cathcart

Referee—Charles B. Morse, P. H. S.
Umpire—Carl Walz, L. S.
Timers—Webster Littell, P. H. S., Clifford Braider, N. P. P. S.
Linesman—Thomas Smith.

The touchdowns for the High School were made by Serrell (2) and Richardson (1). Serrell kicked two goals. Cornwell and Serrell especially distinguished themselves for tackling and running, while all the High School boys played well. Cathcart and Carroll made the brilliant plays for North Plainfield. NINETY-FIVE.

THAT SCHOOL LAW.

This Public Safeguard, Approved by Plainfield People, Is What the Present School Board Seeks to Overthrow.

As a pertinent reminder of the facts in the case, the following is republished from The Daily Press of Monday, June 5, 1894:

Because there is still, among the uninformed, some misapprehension concerning the new Plainfield School Law, it is well to point out that the government of the Plainfield schools is in no way affected. The law merely provides

"That it shall not be lawful for the Board of Education to borrow money, issue bonds, or incur indebtedness in excess of five thousand dollars, for the purpose of purchasing lands or erecting any school buildings, without the incurrence and approval first obtained of the Common Council, Board of Aldermen, or other governing body, of said city."

The Plainfield School Board continues unmolested in its power to provide a first-class education to all Plainfield children, and can spend each year just as much money as it ever could in the matter of running expenses. The only restriction is against acquiring more real estate or running up bonded indebtedness. The school taxes continue in the exclusive control of the School Board, as heretofore. They name they amount, and the people pay it. The Council has no authority to revise their rate or check any item of expense in operating existing schools.

Let no one mistake this hereafter.

Valuable Dogs Poisoned.

F. A. Barnaby of Plainfield avenue has lost a valuable collie dog through some wretch's poisoning it. It is supposed, as the dog was an inoffensive and innocent creature, that the poison he took was intended for some other animal.

If there is one thing that lowers a person in the estimation of his fellow man, it is the act of sneakingly poisoning a dog. So contemptible is it considered, that even among the Indians the perpetrator is slain. Our laws are very severe for such deeds, and as several other valuable dogs have been poisoned during the past year it is to be hoped the miscreants may be caught and made an example of.

From the Sanscrit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Your first quotation anent The Baby was not quite accurate. It should read:

"On parents' knee a naked new born child,
Sitting thou wept while all around the [smiled—
So live, that sinking in thy last long sleep,
Thou then may'st smile while all around thee [weep."

The sentiment is not Sir William Jones's, the eminent eastern scholar. He only translated it from the Sanscrit, where in common with many of the prettiest thoughts known to us it lay for very many centuries before Sir William put it into English. HADDENHAM.

SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

PLAINFIELD PUPILS ACQUIT THEMSELVES WELL.

Young People Sing and Play Sweet Music to the Delight of an Admiring Audience.

The advanced pupils of the Plainfield School of Music gave the first invitation musicale of the season in the studio in the Babcock Building last evening. The room was filled with friends of the scholars and instructors and a general appreciation was shown of the work of Walter A. Hudson, P. Ludwig Conde and W. E. MacClymont, the musical instructors.

The new room presented an elegant appearance. About the piano were grouped beautiful palms and flowers. The programme published in The Daily Press of yesterday was well rendered, every number coming in for the heartiest applause.

Miss Lillian Nicholl's sonata from Beethoven with which the programme opened was an admirable selection, played with a skill that showed that Miss Nicholl was apt pupil of Mr. MacClymont. L. S. Bond's tenor solo, "O Fair, O Sweet and Holy", was a sweet, beautiful song. Charles Davis, a young violinist who is being instructed by Mr. Conde, played an excellent solo, "Sweet Hope". Mr. MacClymont accompanied him on the piano.

Miss Florence A. Stevens sang a soprano solo that showed development of a splendid voice. One of the best selections of the evening was the violin duet by Miss Violet Truell and Mr. Conde. Miss Truell is a graceful, skillful musician, and with her instructor made a very favorable impression. Miss Helen Lynch was next with a piano solo that was greatly applauded. Miss Stevens and Mr. Hudson delighted all by singing a duet, "Echoes". Mr. Bond sang again and then Miss Lynch and Mr. MacClymont finished the programme with an excellent duet on the piano.

The Best in New York.

"The Pacific Mail" is nearing the end of its run in New York at the Star Theatre, and on December 1 Mr. Crane and his company will pack up their belongings and go on the road. The play's measure of success has been so pronounced that the comedian is sorry that he cannot prolong his stay, for he feels that it would run the season out in the metropolis with much profit. On three occasions last week the play taxed the capacity of the theatre, which is something of which to boast, the house being one of the largest in New York and having a seating capacity of nearly two thousand. The secret of the play's success is said to lie in the fact that its story is perfectly clean and wholesome and that it is intensely funny. The public is always anxious to laugh and "The Pacific Mail" furnishes it with many opportunities.

Brotherhood Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of Holy Cross Brotherhood took place last evening at the rooms of the association, and the following officers were re-elected for the ensuing year:

President—Rev. T. Logan Murphy.
Vice-president—Harry Bartling.
Secretary—Clarence L. Murphy.
Treasurer—Charles C. Western.

The attendance was large, and much interest was manifested in the proceedings. Reports from the several officers and committees were read, which showed the Brotherhood to be in a prosperous condition, and doing excellent work in the parish in many ways. Plans for aggressive work during the ensuing year were presented and discussed which indicate that the Brotherhood means to be something more than a mere society with a name. After the election a pleasant hour was spent socially.

A Card to the Public.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—I am informed the neighbors are blaming me for renting the house 34 Manning avenue to the parties who so far forgot their obligations to their neighbors and the day as to become disorderly and offensive.

For this I am not responsible, the owner having rented it himself, although I am now the agent. W. E. MATTISON.

Stuffed.

Two rabbits were given to a Somerset street barber yesterday. He skinned them and then stuffed the skins and hung them from a rear window. A butcher came along in a few minutes, climbed a ladder, and grabbed what he thought to be two rabbits. He did not discover the joke that accompanied his joke until he had the stuffed skins in his shop.

Re-engaged by His First Patron.

The handsome sign "Oysters" in front of E. H. Clevely's, North avenue, was painted by David Kelly, whose first job in Plainfield, some years ago, was painting a similar sign for Mr. Clevely. Mr. Kelly's skill has steadily improved.

Joe Gives a Spread.

Joseph Brengle Miller, formerly of this city and now proprietor of the Elm House in Elizabeth, entertained prominent people of Union county at his hotel last evening. Several sportsmen and politicians from Plainfield were in attendance.

FRIENDS GET TOGETHER

Half-Yearly Meeting of the Hicksite Society.

PEACE STREET THE HEADQUARTERS

Satisfactory Reports of the Continuance of Societies in the Discipline of the Friends—Lunch Served in the Newly Finished Second Story.

The half-yearly meeting of the Hicksite Friends of Plainfield and Shrewsbury was held in the meeting-house on Watchung avenue this morning. The meetings are held alternately in Plainfield and in Shrewsbury. In connection with the regular business session are being held other interesting meetings.

The Select Committee, composed of the ministry and oversight, met yesterday afternoon at 3 and held an executive session. This morning the Friends met at 11 for worship. Addresses were made by Mrs. Frances Williams of Shrewsbury and Robert S. Haviland and Robert Barnes of Chappaque.

The business session of the meeting followed. The clerk for the occasion was Edward Borden of Eatontown. He was assisted by Miss Margaret Vail of Dunellen. The usual business was transacted. A committee reported that Hon. James A. Bradley had given the Friends use of the John G. Whittier memorial building for five years and that very successful meetings had been held there during the Summer season. Their work was approved.

The usual queries were read by Miss Vail and responded to through Mr. Borden. The meetings of Plainfield and Rahway and of Shrewsbury gave very encouraging answers as to their continuance in accordance with the discipline of the Friends. The congregation, after the meeting adjourned at 1, went to the newly-furnished second story of the building and partook of a lunch which had been prepared by several of the women.

Announcement was made that at 3 this afternoon the Friends would reassemble to hear and consider a paper on "Philanthropic Work and the Friends" by Mrs. Mariana W. Chapman of Brooklyn, superintendent of the prison reform philanthropic work of the Friends; and one by Mrs. Cornelia Gavett of Plainfield on temperance work in general.

This evening Miss Nettie Haviland of the Monday Afternoon Club will present a paper on "Indian Affairs"; and Mrs. Phœbe C. Wright will present a report on "Peace and Arbitration", being the subject of that department.

SUIT FOR A WELL.

Because He Had to Duplicate It, Paoli Asked Damages.

The civil suit of Lorenzo Paoli against Builder Edward Thorne of East Front street occupied the attention of a jury in Justice Mosher's Court to-day. The jurors were W. N. Morris, Robert Walker, David Barry, George Cook, Harry Connett, Noel Verrier, W. V. Miller, Robert Hodge, Benjamin Gilbride, George W Wood and Charles Howard.

The plaintiff's counsel was Walter L Hetfield, and the defendant's, W. R. Codington. The trouble between the litigants was discussed all the morning Thorne built a house for Paoli at Netherwood and among other things dug a well.

Paoli brought suit for $200 damages because, he claims, he had to build another well to take the place of Thorne's defective one. The new well cost $280, but Paoli was willing to settle matters for $200.

The case was summed up at noon and given to the jury.

A Citizens Ticket Desired.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: I have been very much interested in your discussion of the School Board question. Your fairness in opening the columns of The Press to friend and foe is most refreshing in these days of party organs. As it seems most likely that there will be no opposition to the renomination of Mayor Gilbert and the Republican councilmen whose terms of office expire this year, I think it would be in order if some of our leading taxpayers, irrespective of party, would issue a call for a citizens meeting to formulate a plan to meet the School Board issue as foreshadowed in your columns. Let us only elect two members to the Board of Education who will obey the law and not seek to overthrow it in violation of the wishes of the people! REPUBLICAN.

Church Election.

A church meeting was held in the German Reformed Church last evening. The reports of the officers showed the church to be in an excellent financial condition.

The following officers were elected:

Elders—Peter Doeringer, Valentine Utzinger.
Deacons—August Wolff for full term, and Wm. Mohwinkel and Philip Bach for unfinished terms.

Good Luck.

Charles Smith, John Haberle and Fred Sandford returned from a hunting trip last night with 38 rabbits, 15 quail, 8 woodcock and 2 partridges.

OUT OF BONDAGE.

THE "MAD" DOG BREAKS JAIL ON FRONT STREET.

After Much Excitement He Is Recaptured and Sent Into the Happy Hunting Grounds.

The alleged mad dog, captured a few days ago, and chained up in the rear of James Babbitt's pool room, broke his fastenings this morning and roamed into Harry Marshall's laundry for a nap. The employes ran from the place to the street, and soon the cry of "mad dog" was again sounded. Babbitt was off gunning, and Captain Grant and Sergeant Kiely were prevailed upon to capture the dog. John Peterson, colored, boldly went forth with a rope, and led the canine from the laundry to the yard, where three bullets from a Smith & Weson seven-shooter put an end to his dog-ship's career. Fully fifty persons watched the proceedings.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Daniel Crowley is home from a visit to Boston.

George F. Brown of Grove street is confined to his home by illness.

Clarence Haviland, formerly a resident of this city, is visiting relatives in town.

Miss Mabel Gillies of Madison avenue has returned from a two-weeks visit in Paterson.

E. B. Rider of Central avenue left Tuesday on a two-weeks business trip in New York State.

Miss Belle Carkhuff is stopping with Mrs. George Batchelor of Spooner avenue for two weeks.

Wm. Turner of Reynolds's Pharmacy received second rank in Unity Lodge, 102, K. of P., last evening.

A pound sociable will be held at the residence of Samuel Smith on South Second street, this evening.

William Wilcox of Manning avenue, formerly an employe in the First National Bank, has returned from the Adirondacks.

F. S. Neal has for more than five years been the faithful recorder of gas-meter indexes in Plainfield, and has missed only one trip in the whole time.

The first formal club dance of the season took place at the Park Club last night. The floor was in splendid condition and the music fine. Dancing was limited to club members.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis is among the incorporators of the Industrial Christian Alliance which has secured a fine new home in New York city for prosecution of its noble and successful work.

Cards have been issued by Mr. and Mrs John W. Murray announcing the marriage of their daughter Miss Augusta Knox Murray to Albert Arthur Tilney, Wednesday evening, Nov. 28, at 7, in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Miss Marion Taggart during her vacation this Summer obtained a treasured collection of most interesting and valuable letters and documents concerning the Arcadians, which she is weaving into a delightful romance of that fated people, for a leading publishing house. Scholars will be glad to learn of Miss Taggart's literary find.

Ellery Leonard, for several years a member of the last graduating class of the Plainfield High School, is making a mark for himself not only in the Boston University but also in historical literature. He has compiled and published in leading journals a valuable new story of Napoleon, showing how S. V. S. Wilder, formerly of Elizabeth, came near securing the exile's escape.

Much credit for the great Republican victory in New York State is given to V. B Dolliver, a brilliant lawyer of Fort Dodge, Iowa, cousin of G. Q. Dolliver of Manning avenue. He was one of the Republican speakers in Maine before the election there, and was a leading standby of the G. O. P. in the Empire State. He is a brother of Congressman J. P. Dolliver, also of Fort Dodge.

Likeness has been remarked in one of Plainfield's welcome newcomers to one of Plainfield's older citizens. Councilman S. A. Ginna's hair and whiskers show more trace of Time's white roses, but his friends insist that he has a double in Charles Dey, head of the famous Dey Time Register of 203 Broadway, New York, who has purchased the property where he has been living since early Summer, on Watchung avenue opposite the Crescent Avenue Church.

The Checker Club Open.

The rooms of the North Plainfield Checker Club in Richard Boyce's Hotel on Somerset street have been thoroughly overhauled, newly painted, and attractively furnished. The rooms are open to the public on all week days and nights, and on every Friday evening during the coming Winter there will be a series of prize contests, with a view of getting out-of-town clubs to compete.

—T. E. Hazell will lead the prayer meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

PROF. WIGGINS IS SHY.

Only One Prophecy and that Far Off. Talk of Mars and the Deluge.

Prof. E. Stone Wiggins, of Canada, arrived in New York recently on a short visit. He had been suffering from ill health for some time, and has been granted a leave of absence by the Canadian government. While here he discussed the deluge of Noah's time.

"I find," said he, "that the deluge was exactly as the book of Genesis says it was and I intend to prove conclusively that the writer of that book in the Bible told the truth about the deluge being universal and not local.

"There is absolutely no truth in Miller's accepted theory that it was only a local flood. Perhaps the most interesting of my discoveries is the remarkable change of climate that has taken place since then, and I regard the deluge as the greatest physical misfortune that ever befell the human race.

"If Miller's theory be true that it occurred by volcanic action, then it may occur again, and may have occurred many times. But the writer of Genesis says it never can occur again, and mentions the rainbow as evidence of the divine promise to that effect."

"What other investigations have you made?" was asked.

"Well, among the most important," he replied, "are my discoveries in regard to Mars, and I intend to show that the theories adopted by astronomers and scientists are none of them correct. Mars has an atmosphere of great density. The moon also possesses an atmosphere. I will meet the narrow objections brought by scientists against my theory that Mars is inhabited. You know I am the originator of that theory. It is also asserted that the Marsians cannot see the electric lights in our city because the Sandy Hook light can only be seen a hundred miles. This I will also explode.

Prof. Asaph Hall, of Washington, discovered the two satellites of Mars in 1887. One of these is only seven miles in diameter. This is equal to seeing a cricket ball from New York to Philadelphia; so that the Sandy Hook light could easily be seen on our earth, especially through an atmosphere like that of Mars, which must enlarge all bodies in the Marsian heavens. Even the sun is probably much larger to the Marsians than to us."

"Have you any predictions to make?" he was asked.

"No," he said. "I gave up predictions three years ago. The only prediction I can make is the great earthquake that will appear in the Eastern States in 1904. That prediction, however, I made in 1886. The great storm that we had last month I predicted ten years ago, and was only twelve hours out of the way in my calculations."

M. CASIMIR-PERIER.

Carnot's Successor a Statesman of High Character.

No one would have believed when the New Year was ushered in that the ides of November would find the President of France dead by the hand of an assassin, and Alexander III. dead of disease. By one of those startling variations from the expected which often occur in human lives, Carnot was assassinated, and the oft-threatened Czar died a natural death at the age of forty-nine years, although, reckoning by probabilites, and taking into account his giant strength, his life should not have been two-thirds spent.

M. CASIMIR-PERIER.

The death of President Carnot was followed by the election, to the Presidency of the French nation, of M. Casimir-Perier, whose picture is given herewith. He is a man of many qualifications for his high office, being a statesman of experience and a man of high character, who in many important respects is well-fitted to follow the lamented Carnot.

He seems to have been very successful so far in keeping the confidence and support of the French people and the French Congress, and a successful term is generally predicted for him.

M. Casimir-Perier is a man of wealth, and he has the means to fulfill the social duties of the place in fine style. His carriages and horses cost a small fortune his turnouts are the admiration of Paris, and in every place where wealth or originality is required he makes as good a showing as in the halls where statesmanship is demanded. His wife is as well-fitted for her position as he is for his, and the duties devolving upon her will be performed with grace and discretion.

Eva was There on Time.

In a Sioux Falls paper on a recent Sunday appeared an advertisement, "Stenographer wanted." Miss Eva Humes, of Salem, saw the ad., but Sioux Falls is 45 miles from Salem, and there would be no train to that city until late Monday, and before that time half a dozen persons might apply for the place. Miss Humes therefore attired herself in a jaunty bicycle suit, provided herself with a luncheon, mounted her wheel and made nearly 50 miles over a rough and hilly road to Sioux Falls, and early Monday morning applied in person for the position and got it.

Strictly Business.

"O—h! And it is a real diamond?" twittered the young woman, in the most artless manner imaginable.

"It is not, Miss Fetherbee," said the young man firmly, "but I will say that it has always been my custom to give bond to replace it with a real one immediately after the performance of the ceremony."—Cincinnati Tribune.

"LOVE AND LIFE."

Sir Frederick Watts Explains the Meaning of His Work.

The painter of "Love and Life" makes the following statement concerning the famous picture which Maj. Wilson declined to hang in the White House:

"In regard to the picture I presumed to present to the Government of the United States, it may not be out of place for me, in the first place, to point out that the painting represents in the simplest manner that naked humanity is aided to ascend from the depths of base animalism by Love, meaning sympathy, generosity, and aspiration, signified by the broad wings. The figures are purely symbolical, having, I hope, no tinge of sensuality in the character of their form.

"My idea was that the great American nation would in time gather together a splendid collection of works of art, which will represent the mind of the English speaking races, but that awaiting this time, my offering would find a home in some such place as the Metropolitan Museum of New York, though I may add that after some correspondence with the Embassy here, I accepted the arrangement that a temporary resting place should be found in some public room or gallery of the White House.

"I can't, however, presume to offer any voice in the matter, beyond saying that the painting is essentially a gallery picture, and was never contemplated by me as hanging in any dwelling house whatever. GEORGE FREDERICK WATTS.

POLITICAL LANDSLIDES.

Whig Defeat of 1852. The Democratic Landslide of '92 Reversed.

The sweeping Republican victory throughout the country, when a Democratic majority of 91 in the Fifty-third Congress was swept away and the Republican gained a majority of 150 in the Fifty fourth Congress elect, a change of 240 Congressmen, was the fourth landslide that has occurred in this country when the two chief political parties were apparently pretty evenly divided.

The first landslide in American politics occurred in 1840, when Gen. William Henry Harrison, Whig, was elected President, receiving 234 of the 293 votes in the Electoral College. The third landslide defeated Gen. Harrison's grandson in 1892.

The second landslide occurred in 1852, when Franklin Pierce was elected President, receiving 254 electoral votes against 42 for Gen. Winfield Scott, the Whig candidace.

Sweeping Republican and Democratic victories have occurred frequently during the past twelve years at the Congress elections occurring between Presidential elections, but none of them was so far reaching as the landslide of this year, which carried with it Governors, State officers, Legislatures, United States Senators and the Gibraltar of Democracy, New York.

The Whig party was the first to carry the country with a landslide when it elected Gen. Harrison in 1840 after a famous campaign. Harrison defeated Martin Van Buren. That defeat was the political death of the famous politician, diplomat and statesman. After that defeat Van Buren was twice nominated for the same office, but never again received an electoral vote. In 1844 he was the nominee of the Free Soil party, and in 1848 was nominated by the Know Nothing or American party.

In 1852 the Whig party was buried under a landslide as great as the one that carried it into power twelve years before. The party never rallied from the defeat of that year, and eight years later ceased to exist.

Landslides in every instance represent an uprising of the masses of the voters, the polling of a heavy vote, and, as a rule, a general upsetting of the calculations of professional politicians.

Franklin Pierce had won some reputation as a soldier in the Mexican war, but he was a comparatively obscure man when nominated by the Democrats in 1852. Little more was known of W. R. King, the candidate for Vice-President.

Opposed to Pierce was Gen. Winfield Scott, who had all the prestige of the conquest of Mexico, where he had been commander-in-chief of the American armies. But Scott got only 42 of the 294 electoral votes.

But in the landslides of 1840 and 1852 the winning candidates had small majorities of the popular vote. They carried a great majority of the States, but by small pluralities of the popular vote.

In 1840 the popular vote for Harrison was 1,275,017, for Van Buren, 1,128,702. The popular vote in 1852 was: Pierce, 1,601,474; Scott, 1,386,578.

The greatest landslide of the popular vote occurred in 1892, when the Democratic national ticket carried every State that was classed as close or doubtful and carried some of the strongest Republican States, notably Illinois.

A ROMANCE OF PRONOUNS.

It was evening, it was moonlight, it was late and it was fair.
I was courting. I was happy, I was brave, for she was there.
She was pretty, she was blushing, she was willing to be wed—
He arrived and he objected. He was papa, so I fled.
I returned. He was repentant. She was coaxing her mamma.
He relented, and I thanked him and forgave him—dear papa!
Then he blessed us. I was happy, while she blushed a rosy red.
He was willing. She was willing. I was willing. We were wed.

THE AFTERNOON TEA.

It is Rapidly Becoming the Fashion in New York Society.

Afternoon tea is rapidly becoming as much the fashion in this country as in England. It has been proved to be a capital way to entertain a few friends, and is almost necessary now that the dinner hour has been set so late. In houses where home life is cherished it has taken a firm hold.

In the Vanderbilt family nothing is allowed to interfere with afternoon tea. Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt has gone out in society very little since her husband died. She has a large family connection and has been in mourning more or less for some years. The loss of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Benjamin Kissane, of Brooklyn who died very recently, will prevent her accepting any invitation again this winter.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's immediate family—her sons and daughters and her sons and daughters in law—have always considered it their duty as well as pleasure to spend a short time with their mother every afternoon, and to find Mrs. Vanderbilt away from home at this time would seem indeed odd. Only the most intimate friends ever intrude upon this family meeting time, which does not of necessity last long, a pleasant chat and the familiar intercourse making it a time of rest delightful to look forward to in the whirl of New York society life.

In Sir Roderick Cameron's household, as in many others, five o'clock tea is always served, and one of the three Misses Cameron is always at home at that hour to make tea for her friends that call. More hearty food is now served at afternoon tea, again copying English fashions. Hot buttered muffins and crumpits, a thin slice of toast are served with the regulation thin bread and butter. A tea cake—a sort of pound cake, not very sweet—is also always on every well appointed table, while a plate of little sweet cakes are always to be had.

The hostess who would have good tea and who would also wish to be correct, as to fashion, must always make the tea herself, and there is considerable rivalry as to who makes the best tea. And to be a connoisseur in tea is very desirable. New York women are rarely seen to more advantage than in their own dining room at five o'clock. An invitation to take a cup of tea at some of the smart houses is highly prized, for it implies a degree of intimacy, and a far more substle compliment than an invitation to some lunch, dinner or dance.

To Make Candy at Home.

Caramels.—One-quarter pound of chocolate, one-quarter pound of butter, one pound and a half of sugar, one cup of milk, vanilla flavoring. Boil all together, stirring frequently until it will candy in cold water.

Taffy.—One quart of good molasses, half a cup of vinegar, one cup of sugar, butter size of an egg, one teaspoonful of soda. Dissolve sugar in vinegar, mix with the molasses and boil stirring frequently until it hardens, when drop from the spoon into cold water. Then stir in butter and soda, the latter dissolved in hot water. Flavor to taste, stir finally very hard, the pour into buttered tins.

Chocolate Cream Drops.—Break the white of an egg into a deep bowl. Stir in confectioners' sugar until a thick cream is formed. Then flavor to taste, mould into balls. Grate unsweetened chocolate, place in a shallow dish over a kettle of boiling water until it is melted. Roll each ball in the chocolate and set on the ice until cold. It is impossible to give the exact quantity of sugar as eggs vary in size, but about one pound to an egg is the usual receipt.

Maple Sugar Candy.—Take two pounds of maple sugar, broken in small pieces and put it in a saucepan with a quart of rich milk—part cream is better. Let it boil until it reaches the stage where it hardens in cold water; pour it into pans and make into squares as you would taffy or caramels.

Nougat Candy.—Boil together a pound of sugar and half a cup of cold water until a little of it becomes brittle when dropped into cold water. Do not stir it after the sugar melts. Butter a shallow tin—a biscuit pan will answer—and cover the bottom closely with blanched almonds, the kernels of hickory, pecan and hazel nuts, thin strips of cocoanut, split and stoned dates and bits of figs. When the candy is done add to it a tablespoonful of lemon juice and pour it over your nuts and fruits. Mark it into strips or squares when it is cool.

A DISILLUSIONING.

The Junoesque Passenger and the Mundane Quality of Her Remarks.

She was indeed a magnificent creature, and when she got on the Fourth avenue car everybody turned to look at her. An elderly lady already in the car knew the gorgeous creation, and made way for her at her side. The Philistine of a car conductor brutally asked her for a fare, and she paid him like an ordinary mortal.

She wore a white doeskin cape, a soft gray dress, and a black hat of cavalier proportions. The thick coils of her bronze-black hair were transfixed with a happy tortoise-shell pin of wriggly shape; the brow under the shadow of her hat was broad and Junoesque, and the eyes beneath the shadow of her brows were like two limpid brown pools. Her nose was an American classic, the upper lip curled back like the petal of a white hyacinth, and her mouth was as tender as a young girl's first love dream. And from this mouth there dropped these pearls:

"I find it best to sew the revers back with stout thread and then fix the hooks and eyes."

Dr Best, the old professor and king of the medical school was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced elegant young student who stood before him. The young man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before, he had graduated at the top of the class and as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellows, as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr Best was a New York physician of wide reputation and had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges both because it was his own college and because the field work, under his lectures covered, gave him almost the only vacation that he could

SWIFT AS THE WIND.

JOHN S. JOHNSON CROWDS THE LOCOMOTIVE'S SPEED.

Astride a Bike He Makes a Mile in 1:35 2-5, Beating the Record of the Fastest Running Horse. Some Notable Features of the Race Against Time.

John S. Johnson rode a mile in Buffalo, over a straightaway course in 1:35 2-5, which is about fourteen seconds faster than has ever been done before by a single rider, and six seconds faster than any tandem has ever covered the distance. More than this, it is one-tenth of a second faster than the world's record for a running horse, 1:35 1-2, made by Salvator at Monmouth Park, N. J., in 1890.

The boulevard is laid with a brick pavement, which had been sweat perfectly smooth, so there would be no danger of puncturing a tire.

Johnson wore black tights and two black sweaters, and the American flag fluttered from his waist. He weighed 168 pounds. The quadruplet team, which was to make the pace, consisted of C. H. Callahan first, W. A. Seavey second, Patrick O'Connor third, and W. A. Rhodes fourth. Johnson mounted his wheel at 4:45 o'clock. The quadruplet started with Johnson hugging the hind wheel and riding with apparent ease. The five riders dashed over the tape with the report of a pistol. Johnson lapping on the "quad." They were going at a terrible clip. The pace in the stretch was wonderfully fast, and when the men in the quadruplet crossed the line Johnson was not a foot behind the back wheel and was riding easily. The official time for the mile was 1:35 2-5, although one timekeeper made it 1:35. The last quarter was made in 23 3-5 seconds.

JOHN S. JOHNSTON.

Johnson dismounted in very fresh condition, and he was well pleased with the result. He said he had ridden without exhaustion, and he believed within the limit of his powers. He thinks he can reduce this new record to 1:30.

Johnson's performance takes rank as the fastest mile ever covered by any method of progression outside of railroading. The record tables show that engine No. 989 of the Empire State Express covered a mile over the New York Central Railroad track, between Crittenden and Wende, N. Y., on May 10, 1893, in 32 seconds. There were four heavy cars attached, and the entire train weighed 460,000 pounds. Johnson's latest achievement comes next, and it may be mentioned that he also holds the world's skating record for one mile, 2 minutes 45 3-4 seconds, made at Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 21, 1893.

The mighty thoroughbred horse Salvator will have good cause to feel aggrieved if he ever learns the facts. His great record of 1:35 1-2, made against time on the straightaway track at Monmouth Park, N. J., Aug. 28, 1890, with 110 pounds up, had just one-tenth of a second clipped off it by the flying bicyclist. In no other class of sport has the two-minute mark ever been beaten under fair conditions. The pacing record for a mile is 2:01 1-2, made by Robert J. last season, while the trotting figures have been reduced to 2:02 3-4 by Alix at Galesburgh, Ill., recently.

The fastest mile ever made by an athlete is 4 minutes 12 3-4 seconds. The record is held by W. G. George, the well-known English runner. Snowshoe racing is not a universal sport, but its followers have shown considerable speed at times. The world's record for a mile in skeleton shoes is 5 minutes 39 3-4 seconds, made by J. F. Scholes at Montreal, Canada, Feb. 22, 1871. Some noted heel-and-toe experts have gone a mile in remarkable time. The world's record for this style is 6 minutes 23 seconds, made by W. Perkins at London, England, June 1, 1874. The swimming record for a mile 26 minutes 8 seconds, made by Joey Nuttall, in Hollingworth Lake, England, Aug. 19, 1893.

LITTLE THINGS.

Why Certain Rivers, Mountains, Etc., Have the Names They Bear.

Itasca is an Indian word, meaning "source of the river."

Miami is a corruption of Miahmezah, meaning "stony river."

Lackawanna is an Indian word, meaning the "stream that forks."

Ellis Island has also been called Oyster, Bucket and Gibbet Island.

Rappahannock was originally Toppahannock, "quick rising river."

Lake Huron was named from the Hurons, an Indian tribe on its shores.

Katahdin, the name of a mountain in Maine, means "the high hill."

Hell Gate was called by the Indians Monahtonuk, "place of bad water."

Kearsage, the name of another Maine mountain, signifies "the pine mountain."

The Aroostock River took its name from an Indian word signifying "good men."

Milwaukee is a variation of Minnewaukee, meaning, "rich and beautiful country."

A Spirited Apology.

The Chinese are claiming that Japan hit them below the belt at the battle of Ping Yang, which is to say that the Japs sprung the engagement that day—15th day of their Eighth month—because it was a great Joss day in China, and nearly all the Chinese soldiers were full of everything else but fight.—Philadelphia Ledger.

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet, pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and ensure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Senate Lodge, No. 3542, K. of H., meets tonight.

—John Emmons made a score of 190 on the Trade Temple alleys last evening.

—A crab supper will be served at Force's West-Side House, Scotch Plains, tonight.

—Conductors should always stop the car at Peck's, as many ladies wish to stop there to trade.

—F. M. Hulett is prominently mentioned as a councilmanic candidate on the Republican ticket.

—The synchronized clock in A. D. Finley's bar room on East Second street is to be replaced by an ordinary.

—Initiation in Franklin Council, No. 41, will be postponed for one week on account of their fair being held this week.

—Bridget McCloskey paid a $3 fine in the City Court this morning. She had been arrested for intoxication on North avenue yesterday.

—A large and elegant line of 1895 wall-papers has been received at Woolston & Buckle's. The window shows a fine lot of samples, and there's a bigger display inside.

—The reduction in the price of gas has brought new customers to the company. Among the houses newly supplied is that of ex Mayor J. H. VanWinkle of Duer street.

—The repairs being made at the Mt Olive Baptist Church have not been completed yet. The congregation will continue to meet in Reform Hall until the middle of December.

—The police report that the Queen City Dairy shows no evidence of having been entered from the outside, and that the proprietor treats the robbery story as "a good advertisement."

—Postmaster Hetfield is constantly bettering the local mail service. He is now working to obtain a parcel postbox at the North avenue railroad station, and a much needed letter box at Steiner place and Linden avenue.

—Senior Vice-Commander Chas. B. Stephens of Post 73 will visit Somerville this evening and inspect Wadsworth Post. Several comrades will occompany him, among them Past Commanders Smith and Dobbins and others.

—Wallpaper on a bust is the unusual sight presented in the new ad of Marsh, Ayres & Co. The bust is unique and attractive, and reveals beauty evolved out of the roll. It takes only a small fraction of a roll of bills to get a big and mighty fine roll of wallpaper at this popular store.

OSCAR IS COMING.

The Sunflower Apostle of Estheticism to Visit Us.

If Oscar Wilde is really coming over here to lecture next season, as the agents insist he will, the public will not guy him as he walks through the streets, for he will be entirely unrecognizable by any peculiarity of dress. Instead of the long haired æsthete, they will see a fat and rather flabby-faced man, who looks to be between 45 and 50 years of age, and who can only be distinguished from any other smooth-shaven man by an excessive display of jewelry. Mr. Wilde insists upon wearing frock coats, and, as everybody knows, a frock coat increases the apparent bulk of a very stout man. Aside from this idiosyncrasy his dress is that of an ordinary London man of fashion, except that there is some padding of the shoulders and something like a waist line, caused by buttoning the coat up snugly.

The stories of the enormous earnings of the famous apostle of æstheticism are moonshine in the main. Mrs. Oscar Wilde has neither a carriage nor the gorgeous jewelry which the London paragraphers credit her with, but lives in quiet, almost shabby, quarters with her husband. Mr. Wilde's income is derived from occasional art work on the London papers, the royalties from "Lady Windemere's Fan," whenever that comedy is playing in the provinces, and a scattering royalty from his books. He has been very much interested in the success of Dr. Conan Doyle as a lecturer in this country, particularly as to the financial aspect of it, and it is this which will probably bring him over here next year.

A New Yorker who went to California several years ago and acquired a modest fortune has come back. He says that at first he was charmed with the country, but in time he grew mortally tired of a region where they never had any seasons. Spring was all right for three months in the year, but he began to feel a hankering for more warmth in summer, red leaves in the autum, and snow in winter. New York suits him better for an all-around place of residence.

Great Luck, Indeed.

"I tell you I'm in big luck."
"I'm glad to hear it."
"Yes. The insurance examiners passed me O. K., two months ago, and now the doctor tells me I've got an incurable disease. Ain't that luck?"—Kate Field's Washington.

An angry denial of the recently published story that Ossipee Oscar, the famous Indian bear hunter, of Upper Hohokus N. J., had retired from business in favor of his half-breed son, Adolphus, comes from that place. The Hohukus Herald says editorially that Oscar, despite his great age, is again going to spend a month in his wonderful honey cave in the Orange Mountain, where he alone dares venture, and that he has prepared cans sufficient for over two tons of pure honey. He proposes to leave his secret to his son in his will, but will not reveal it during his lifetime.

ALL QUIET IN BILLVILLE.

'Lection time is over an' the town is gittin' still;

'Lection time is over—ought to stay that way!

THE SALOON SPOTTER.

How Proprietors Keep Track of Free Drinks and Knockdowns.

"Tell you what it is," exclaimed Louis, "if that bartender of mine doesn't quit giving out so many free drinks, I'll give him his walking papers. And, then, too," he added, "he sold three drinks yesterday and didn't ring them up."

Louis is an amiable dispenser of drinks, soft and otherwise, at a little saloon in East Twelfth street which he calls a "buffet." As he spoke he held in his hand a sheet of paper, on which were several entries, written in ink, as follows: "At half past 6 a. m., barkeeper opened up. Milkman called at 7. George, the barkeeper, treated him to a cocktail. At quarter past 7 iceman called. He got a drink and a cigar and didn't pay for them. Baker came in right afterward and got a free drink of whisky. A man whom barkeeper called Tom came in at half past 7. George and Tom had three drinks together. Tom didn't pay. Stranger paid 25 cents for a milk punch at 8 o'clock. Barkeeper didn't ring up the price."

"There now," said Louis, "that's what you may expect from these barkeepers! They're always trying to do you. I came in at 8 o'clock and"—

"But," I interrupted, "what is that report you have in your hand?"

"Oh, this," replied Louis, again looking over the document referred to. "Why, this is a report from a barkeepers' detective. It's a new scheme and a great one. There's an association in this city that supplies men to keep 'tab' on barkeepers when the proprietor is away.

"I pay so much a month and get a report every day. The detective comes in at odd times, like any other stranger, watches how things are going and takes notes. Of course I expect my barkeeper to give out a free drink once in awhile. I don't suppose I ought to kick if he fails to ring up an occasional quarter, but this boy, George, of mine is going it altogether too strong. I'll just read over this report to him when trade becomes slack."

I noticed a strange barkeeper in the place next day.

"What's up?" I asked of Louis. "Did you let George go?"

"Yes," he replied, "he was getting to be too high priced for me. Come around tomorrow, and I'll show you how the new man is working."—New York Herald.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

YALE WON WITH EASE.

Chicago Football Players Stood No Chance with Her Team.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15.—The last football game Yale will play here this fall took place at the Yale field. The ground was wet and soggy, but Yale rolled up a score of 48 points to 0 against the Chicago Athletic team, their opponents, scoring 36 points the first and 12 the second half. Butterworth was the star performer. He made two touchdowns, after runs of thirty yards each, and kicked two goals from the field, one of which, from the 45-yard line, was the hardest ever kicked at Yale.

The Chicago rush line was in good shape, but the backs were disabled. Henry did the only creditable work behind the line. The Chicago players worked revolving tackling play continually, while Yale sent her backs around the ends for big gains. There was much punting, Butterworth out-classing his Chicago opponent two to one. Rodgers showed up poorly at tackle and may now be said to be out of the race for a place on the Yale eleven.

Victory for Pennsy.

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—The University of Pennsylvania football team played the team of the West Philadelphia Athletic club on the grounds of the Riverton Athletic association at Rverton, N. J., and the collegians won by the score of 22 to nothing in two halves of twenty minutes respectively Pennsylvania played the same team that defeated Princeton. The West Philadelphia team was not able to advance the ball at all. The game was more a practice game than anything else in anticipation of Saturday's game with Cornell. About 500 people were present. From now on to Saturday the Pennsylvania team will only line up for practice. Some Cornell money has been sent here to be placed on Saturday's game. The Ithacaians seem to have no hope of winning. They are only betting on points and that they will score. The Cornell game and the Harvard game on Thanksgiving day will be played on the university grounds adjoining the college. Stands capable of holding 23,000 people are now being erected and by Saturday their construction will be far enough advanced to accommodate 10,000 or 12,000 persons.

Lehigh Was Overmatched.

Easton, Pa., Nov. 15—The old-time antagonists, Lafayette and Lehigh, met for the first time on the new athletic field at Easton and Lehigh suffered a defeat after a stubborn contest, being beaten by the score of 28 to nothing. Lehigh seemed to be overmatched from the start. About 4,000 people witnessed the contest.

The Andovers Defeated.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 15.—The Lawrenceville eleven defeated the Andover club at football by brilliant work behind the line and by good interference. The score was: Lawrenceville, 20; Andover, 6.

TWO TRAGEDIES IN COURT.

Chancellor Allison, of Tenn., Killed by a Clerk, Who Shot Himself.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 15.—Shortly after noon Chancellor Andrew Allison of the Davidson county chancery court was shot and instantly killed in the court house by the clerk and master of the same court, George K. Whitworth, who, immediately turned the weapon upon himself and inflicted a fatal wound.

Whitworth had served one term and was anxious to retain the position, which is worth $20,000 a year. His term expired two weeks ago, and the chancellor appointed his son, Granville Allison. The men had not met since the appointment until Whitworth saw Allison outside the court room. Whitworth called Allison and when the latter turned around he found himself facing a double-barrelled shot gun in the hands of his late clerk, who pulled the trigger, emptying the contents of one barrel into his face and chest. Allison fell to the floor dead. Whitworth laid the gun inside the court room door, pulled a revolver from his pocket and fired two balls into himself, both in the breast. He died later. Until the new appointment, great friendship had existed between the men. Whitworth was instrumental mainly in the election of Allison, who reciprocated by appointing Whitworth to the clerkship.

Brigands Raid a Village.

Rome, Nov. 15.—One hundred brigands, heavily armed, entered Tortoli, on the island of Sardinia, plundered a dozen families and surrounded the house of an ex-mayor, battered in the doors, and stole everything valuable that could be carried off. They killed one of the ex-mayor's servants and tried to make off with the money and jewelry. Three policemen and a few other residents of the village blocked the street. The fight lasted three hours. One gendarme was killed, the other two were wounded and many of the townsmen and brigands were injured. The brigands eventually got away with their booty. Troops were sent out in pursuit of the band.

Schondel's Marriage Legal.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 15.—Chief Justice Beasley of the supreme court has decided that the indictment and conviction found against William Schondel of Hoboken in the Hudson county courts is illegal. Schondel was divorced from his first wife in Illinois and afterward married Mina Thomas, with whom he went to Hoboken to live. He was indicted and sentenced for open lewdness with the woman whom he married, on the ground that the divorce secured in Illinois was illegal.

Attempted Wholesale Murder.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 15.—Allen C. Prime, a tinker, went to his wife's home here and fired at her, once at her mother, Mrs. Theresa Lehman, and shot his sister-in-law, Miss Jennie Lehman in the shoulder. He then shot himself in the head. He will die.

Ives Ahead of Schaefer.

New York, Nov. 15.—The billiard match between Ives and Schaefer was continued last night and resulted in the score of 531 to 250 in favor of Ives. The score for the three nights' play is Ives, 1,800 points; Schaefer, 1,082.

Eight Probably Drowned.

Alpena, Mich., Nov. 15.—The steamer John F. Eddy has arrived and reported losing her consort, John Shaw. It is feared the schooner has gone down with her crew of eight persons.

A COMMON QUESTION.

WHERE MAY WOMEN GO FOR HELP?

How Many American Women Have Asked This Question of Themselves.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

You may call it dangerous modesty if you will. It is in woman's heart, and is part of woman's nature.

She shrinks from telling her physical troubles to men.

During the past 20 years thousands of women throughout the world have written in womanly confidence to Lydia E. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and laid bare the life of misery they endured.

They wrote freely, knowing that their letters went direct to the hands of a woman who not alone understood their sufferings but whose heart was full of sympathy with them. The experience of thousands has proved how carefully their letters were studied, and how true and sure came the answer and helpfulness.

You may be suffering daily when you need not. You can tell the story of your pain to a woman, and get the help that only a woman can give.

A young lady from Boston writes to a friend, saying:—

"They said I was consumptive, sent me away, told me to keep quiet, no excitement, no tennis.

Just think of it!

One day I found a little book called 'Guide to Health,' by Lydia E. Pinkham. In it I found out what ailed me, so I wrote to her; got a lovely reply. She told me just what to do, and I am in splendid health now."

The same assistance is waiting for you. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has relieved more female suffering than any other medicine in the world.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

FINE "MILLER" LAMPS with Exquisite Shades for Gifts.

ARE BEAUTIFUL, USEFUL, APPROPRIATE.

The "Miller" is made in all styles of Banquet, Boudoir, Piano, Vase, Study, Bracket, Hall, Library, Chandelier, so everybody can find designs to please in our assortment, which is the best in New York. Our "Miller" Oil Heater will warm a room. We also make Brass Tables with Onyx Tops, The "Rochester" lamp, etc. Established 1844. We make only the best.

The "Miller" gives bright, steady light, flame does not "climb" to smoke ceiling; lighted without removing chimney; a simple turn of button (which a child can do safely), adjusts the wick so the flame is always even (a great improvement over the old way of pulling up the wick); to put in new wick is no trouble. An Indicator tells when lamp is full of oil; the draft is so controlled that chimneys are not broken by the flame. THE "MILLER" A WONDERFUL LAMP; EVERYBODY SHOULD BUY IT. If your dealer will not supply come to us. Catalogues sent on application.

ON SERIOUS QUESTIONS

Work of the Episcopal and Baptist Congresses.

Bishop Potter and Prominent Clergymen Discussed Education for the Ministry at Boston, While Criminals Was the Theme Before the Meeting at Detroit.

Boston, Nov. 15.—The second days' session of the Episcopal church congress opened in the music hall with Bishop Lawrence in the chair. The attendance was large. The topic discussed was "Proper Education for The Ministry," introduced by papers read by Rev. S. D. McConnell, D. D., and Rev. J. Lewis Parks, D. D., both of Philadelphia. Mr. McConnell objected to the method of education employed, because it does not secure the right men; t does not train them properly and costs too much money. The remedy was to shorten technical training and lengthen the time required for secular education. Mr. Parks said that the primary step in education for the ministry should be spiritual.

The first of the appointed speakers was Rev. Prof. Samuel Hart, D. D., of Hartford, Conn., and the second, Rev. H. C. Swentzel, of Brooklyn. He was followed by the Right Rev. Henry C. Potter, D. D., L.L. D., of New York. He said it was not so easy for a candidate to get past the bishop as has been represented. The three notes of a proper education for the ministry are, the note of preparation, the note of accuracy, and the note of responsibility. The important question is that the preparation should not be confined to theology alone. In speaking of accuracy, he said that this applied to human speech as well as to theology. In illustration of this, he told how, when rector of Grace church, his brother told him the people were saying that he had stated in the pulpit that "God is a dead horse."

On consulting his manuscript he found that what he did say was "God is not a dead force." It impressed one, he said, with the enormous value not merely of moral, but labial accuracy.

The first voluntary speaker, Right Rev. C. A. Hall, D. D., bishop of Vermont, said that the study for the ministry begins too late and ends too soon. It should begin with the boy in the school, who should thoroughly understand his bible before he enters for holy orders. He thought the course of instruction should be more theological.

Right Rev. Dr. Rulison of Pennsylvania spoke on the necessity for having men of strength of character and ability in the ministry.

Bishop Lawrence closed the speaking with an earnest defense of the theological schools of the church. The man who studies for the ministry, he said, should first know God. He should study theology, not for its practical work, but for his own sake. The student should look into the very eye and heart of God.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 15.—"The Formation of Criminal Classes; Its Cause and Its Cure," was the topic discussed at the session of the Baptist congress here. Rev. C. R. Henderson of Chicago said the criminal took advantage of the citizens' neglect of him to tempt young Americans, steal ballot boxes, ruin cities and undo the work of churches. Crime was caused by inhumanity and low wages. To cure crime, the church must christianize society. Factory labor for children should be abolished and compulsory school laws should be rigidly enforced. In regard to the prison reform, he thought discharged prisoners should be protected and given an opportunity to reform.

Rev. George W. Hickox said crime was not to be suppressed by the machinery of law but by means of humane and moral agencies. H. Thane Miller, the blind principal of Mount Auburn seminary, said that an awakened public conscience was demanded before crime could be suppressed. President Andrews of Providence said great wealth was a cause of crime. The example of crime in high places led others to the commission of crime. He entered a strong plea in behalf of the working classes. In speaking of the dead czar and his despotic government, President Andrews said:

"Peace to his ashes and I hope he may find peace to his spirit," and then he thundered against him, saying that he was worse than Charles I. as a persecutor of mankind. Rev. Everett D. Burr of Boston said that lack of a trade education among American youths was a great cause of crime. Dr. Lawson of Camden, N. J., said the saloon was the cause of crime.

DEAD AFTER THE WEDDING,

Mrs. Frances Quintard Expires at Her Grand-Daughter's Nuptials.

Port Chester, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The magnificent wedding of Miss Florence E. Quintard, daughter of the shipbuilder, to Mr. B. B. McGregor, which was attended by the most prominent society people of the United States, ended in a tragedy. Mrs. Francis E. Quintard, grand-daughter of the bride, expired of heart disease a few hours after she had returned home from Christ church in Rye, where the ceremony was performed. She was a daughter of the late Charles Morgan who founded the Morgan iron works of New York, and Mrs. McGregor is the daughter of her son, James W. Quintard. The wedding was one of the most fashionable ones held here, and the tragedy has cast a gloom over all.

The Fall of Talien-Wan.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The Japanese minister has received the following: "Our army occupied Talien-Wan on the afternoon of the 8th instant, having destroyed Chinese torpedoes. Our fleet transports are safely anchoring in the bay. Torpedo station, with igniting equipments, charts of sub-marine torpedoes, eighty cannons and telephone line were captured."

Will Not Steal a Senatorship.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Senator Ransom has denied the report that the North Carolina democrats intend to call an extra session of the legislature and elect a United States senator, thereby preventing the election of a populist by the new legislature.

DRUGGIST WILCOX.

He talks Strongly Because He Knows.

MANY WILL READ THIS WITH THE UTMOST FEAR AND TERROR.

Danger and Death Follow Us Every Step We Take.

Too many people become insane. Too many people drop dead. Too many become paralyzed. The papers are constantly recording such cases, and even then only a small proportion ever reach the public. It is enough to frighten anybody; and what does it mean?

It means that people overwork, overstrain and weaken their nerves, their heart, their brain, and then they suffer the terrible, but natural consequences. Do you belong to this class? If so, look to your health. Read the warning words of E. T. Wilcox, Esq., a well-known druggist, residing at Ticonderoga, N. Y.:

"I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy for some time. I have sold all kinds of proprietary medicines in our drug store, and know what is said about them all.

"Whenever I feel nervous and run down I use Dr. Greene's Nervura and it does the business every time. I think it the best medicine, and it certainly is the best seller.

"I am now using it myself.

E. T. WILCOX, ESQ.

"Of course I have the choice of all medicines sold in our store, and from my own personal experience and reports of others I am perfectly satisfied that Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the best."

Mr. Wilcox has devoted his life entirely to the drug business, and when a man so experienced in medicines is satisfied that there is nothing in the world so good as Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, it is the strongest possible recommendation. Everybody who takes it speaks just as highly of it. It makes strong nerves and builds up the wornout and run down system. It prevents insanity, paralysis, and promotes long life.

The reason why this great curative has had so phenomenal a success is because it is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City, who stands ready at all times to answer for the action of his medicine.

He has the largest practice in the world, and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone, at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine

Mlle. Marietta Di Dio a Bride.

When Mlle Marietta Di Dio, a charming chanteuse internationale, became the innocent cause of a personal encounter between George Kessler and Oscar Hammerstein, she became the talk of the town. She has measurably added to this talk by quietly wedding Stephen S. Thorn, a young man who, at the death of his mother, about three years ago, came into possession of a comfortable fortune. Mr. Thorn is 26 years old, slim, smooth faced and of the type that is usually described as dudesque. His bride, who is famed no less for her diamonds, the gifts of half the crowned heads of Europe, than for her beauty, is said to be five years his junior. Mr. Thorn is one of a circle of young men about town, in which Herman Clarke was conspicuous, who nightly frequent Burns' restaurant and Broadway. He is a man of artistic tastes, and for some time studied architecture in the office of Richard Hunt. His mother belonged to an old and wealthy family who resided in Poughkeepsie. He first met Mlle. Di Dio about two months ago.

The Family Scrap Book.

Mrs. Sauers (to Willy, as minister calls to see Mr. Sauers)—Willy, is your father in?

Willy—Yes; he's up-stairs looking over your scrap book?

Mrs. Sauers (puzzled)—You mean my family account book?

Willy—well, it's all the same! He and you always have a scrap every time he goes over it.—Cincinnati Tribune

The Condemned Painting.

The famous painting, "Love and Life" which Sir Frederick Watts gave to the United States; but which Colonel Wilson declined to have in the White House, is one of the most important works from the brush of the British artist and is a companion picture to his "Love and Death." It represents the figures of a winged youth and a maiden climbing a steep and precipitous ascent. Both figures are nude, but, it is an absurdity to say it, there is not the slightest suggestion of indelicacy about them. Love, exemplified by the youth, stoops, tenderly helping his companion upon their toilsome journey. His half extended wings protect her slight form from the sun's fierce rays. The picture is an illustration of the truth that Love raises Life, that an ideal existence is possible only with the protecting care of Love. In the picture where Love's feet have trod flowers spring on the hard, rocky ground, and as the figures ascend the atmosphere becomes more and more refulgent and pure.

TORTURED BY RUSSIANS

Awful Sufferings Endured by American Seamen.

Blown Into Waters Under the Czar's Control They Were Seized and Thrown Into a Vile Prison Suitide of the Owner's Brother—Dammands for Heavy Damages.

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—Capt. Johnson of the sealing schooner Emma of Juneau, Alaska, and P. Riley, a hunter, have arrived here from the Orient on the steamer Peru. They tell a story of suffering and mistreatment in a Russian prison, and will ask the United States to compel the Russian government to pay them a heavy indemnity for their experience.

The tale is full of the horrors of prison life on the island of Saghalien and at Vladivostock. According to the captain's story, the craft was blown into the Okotsch sea. A Russian cruiser overhauled her. The Emma at the time of seizure was sailing with a jury rudder and injured spars.

The captain explained to the Russian officer the cause of his presence in those waters, but his explanation was not accepted. The Russians claimed he was after seals and seized the vessel and crew, taking them to Saghalien. There 450 prisoners attempted to haul the schooner up on the beach and in doing so broke her back, making her a complete wreck.

The prisoners, ten in number, were confined in a cell 12x16, in which were forty-five men all told. The horrors of the situation were too much for Robert Chaman, a brother of one of the schooner's owners. He went crazy and committed suicide. After being confined for six months at Saghalien, the men were taken to Vladivostock for trial. This was a farce, they say. They were convicted and sentenced to serve six months each. The Vladivostock prison was little better than that at Saghalien. Finally their sentence was served and they were finally turned loose without money or food.

The Russians refused to do anything for them, and they would have starved had not the Chinese fed them. At the end of eleven days a merchant raised a purse, which paid their purchase to Nagasaki, whence they were sent to Yokohama by the American consul. At Yokohama the American consul procured Johnson and Riley passage to this country on the Peru. The others are still at Yokohama.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The department of state has had no information regarding the Emma. No doubt is entertained that in case the story is true official reports from the consuls were forwarded by the same steamer, and will reach the department about the end of the week.

If the statements of the captain are capable of proof, the Russian government will be called upon for an explanation and for ample redress.

CAUGHT THE FIREBUG.

Waltsr Francois Confesses the New Canaan Conflagrations.

Hudson, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The recent fires at the Burnham Industrial farm, at Canaan, in this county, which have excited great fear among the inmates, have been explained to Coroner Cochran. The firebug is a boy, Walter B. Francois, sentenced from Binghamton, New York, charged with pulling fire alarm boxes, and larceny. He pleaded guilty to burning a building at Binghamton and of being the instigator of the fires at the Burnham farm which occurred on the 21st and 25th of October, last.

His confession was not made until more than ninety witnesses were sworn and when the prisoner found himself trapped by the coroner and jury. He assigns no reasons for the attempts to burn the building.

Sued for Malpractice.

Matawan, N. J., Nov. 15.—A suit for $10,000 damages for alleged malpractice has been brought against Dr. Cyrus Knecht. The plaintiff is Augustus Close, a brick manufacturer. He charges that Dr. Knecht wrongly diagnosticated an ailment of his wife. Mrs. Close was suffering from a tumor and for a year the doctor treated her for another disease. Finally Mr. Close took his wife to New York, where the tumor was removed. Shortly afterwards she died.

Ingersoll on the Election.

Johnstown, Pa., Nov. 15.—In an interview here Col. Robert Ingersoll said Cleveland's blunders are responsible for the democratic defeat. President Cleveland, he said, is dead politically. The logical republican candidate for president in 1896 would be either Reed or McKinley. The next republican congress would certainly repeal the Wilson bill. The "crowning glory" of the election, he concluded, was the breaking of the "Solid South."

Crowds at the Horse Show.

New York, Nov. 15.—The rain made things dull at the horse show, but the attendance was good. Roadsters, saddle horses and heavy draught horses were judged. Prizes were won by many New Yorkers. Judge Livesey created a sensation by ruling out horses with docked tails. In hackney stallions John Jacob Astor's Typhoon won first prize.

Nicholas Attends Mass.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 15.—Emperor Nicholas, attended by the Prince of Wales and other royalties, was present at a mass for the dead czar in the cathedral to-day. He will attend similar services twice each day until the funeral.

Archbishop Corrigan's Denial.

New York, Nov. 15.—In answer to charges made Sunday in Baltimore by Rev. Walter Vrooman, Archbishop Corrigan denied that he had used any influence with Catholics at the recent elections.

Horseman Christie Dead.

Hackensack, N. J., Nov. 15.—Andrew Christie, one of the best known horsemen in New Jersey, is dead at his home here of paralysis.

Local Weather Forecast.

Fair; warmer; probably southerly winds.

PAIN BANISHED SLEEP.

A RHEUMATIC TELLS A WONDERFUL STORY.

Less Than Half a Bottle of Munyon's New Remedy Restored Him to Health.

James Buckley, 215 Washington street, Newark, N. J., says: "I have been suffering from rheumatism for a number of years. The pains were exceedingly severe and I could not sleep nights. The remedies I obtained did me little or no good, nor did the doctors whom I consulted. This had gone on, each recurring attack being more painful and prolonged than the previous one. I could not get relief until I commenced taking Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Less than one-half a bottle drove all the rheumatism out of my system and I am as well and strong as I ever was in my life. I consider the remedy a wonderful one and take pleasure in recommending it."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Co. of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25c. a bottle.

TERROR FOR HUNDREDS

Outlaws Plunder a Whole Train-Load of People.

"Dynamite Dick" and Bill Cook with Their Gang Commit Another Daring Outrage in the Indian Territory—Plight of a Passenger Who Was Compelled To Assist.

Wagoner, I. T., Nov. 15.—Notwithstanding the large force of United States marshals and Indian police that have been surrounding the Coook gang of outlaws and pressing them hard, the gang has broken the armed circle of the law and held up a Missouri, Kansas and Texas train at Wybank. On the train being side-tracked the engineer and fireman took to the woods. The gang placed dynamite on the trucks of the express and baggage cars. Five sticks were exploded, blowing holes in the bottom of the cars.

One of the gang entered the smoking car while three on each side of it kept up a fusilade of bullets through the car. The robber who entered called for a volunteer to hold the sack, and levelling his gun on a young man from Indiana seated near the front of the car, said:

"You had better throw your wad into this sack, then take the sack and pass it along, and if you don't do it quick I will kill you."

The young man begged for mercy crying that he would do anything if the robber would not shoot. The robber with his gun and the young Hoosier in advance, passed down the car, everybody but the women contributing liberally. The robber was not satisfied however, shouting that not enough watches were coming in, and turned over the cushions of every seat where he found many hidden watches. Having passed through all the cars, the sleeper included, with a farewell volley the robbbers left, taking the young Hoosier with them.

A few minutes later the passenger returned stating that the robbers had taken him a quarter of a mile and then turned him loose. The train was delayed an hour. All the windows were shot out and the sides of the cars were riddled with bullets. Seven men were engaged in the hold-up and they were undoubtedly led by Bill Cook, Cherokee Bill and "Dynamite" Dick. The robbers struck out for the bottoms between the Verdigris and the Kansas rivers.

A posse from Muskogee is in pursuit. About $5,000 was secured.

BLEW UP THE STORE.

John Washburn's Gun Caused Death and Disaster.

Sing Sing, N. Y., Nov. 15.—A terrible powder explosion occurred in Captain Abraham Jones' gun and sporting goods store here, resulting in one death and injury to several persons. John Washburn, jr., a boy who had hired of Captain Jones a gun for duck shooting, returned the gun declaring it was not loaded. He aimed the gun at a keg of powder and pulled the trigger. The explosion followed. Sylvester Lyons, the clerk in the store, and two boys—Leonard Fluffen and George Atheson were blown out of the building through a rear window. William Persell, who was walking along the aqueduct, was severely cut and bruised and Thomas Loftus had his leg broken. Washburn's body was found later pinned to the floor by a big beam. The fire which followed the explosion entirely gutted the building.

BASEBALL MEN IN SESSION.

Important Changes Expected in the Various Clubs.

New York, Nov. 15.—The National Baseball league magnates met at the Fifth Avenue hotel to-day. Nothing was done of importance but among the rumors floating about is one that if the worst comes Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Baltimore and Washington will resign from the National league and American association in a body and organize a new eight-club league of their own by placing another club in Philadelphia. This would leave the present organization in the hands of the five western clubs, Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Louisville. N. E. Young was elected president for a term of three years. The report of the board of directors was accepted and the delegates spent their time until they adjourned in revising the league constitution. In section 26 they made a considerable change in the wording. Heretofore a manager could release a player and reconsider it at any time prior to the expiration of the ten days. Now after a player is once released he will have to be resigned. Section 45 was also amended for the better. A postponed game can now be played on the grounds of the visiting club at the option of the two clubs, provided there is no open date in that series for the grounds from which the postponement is made. There will be a meeting of the officials of the other leagues at the Fifth Avenue hotel late to-day. The representatives are B. Johnson, president of the Western league; P. T. Powers, preisdent of the Eastern league; T. Murnan, president of the New England league and H. H. Diddlebock, secretary and treasurer of the Pennsylvania State league.

BYRON B. WRIGHT'S FUNERAL.

Committees Appointed by the House and Senate To Attend.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The funeral of Myron B. Wright of Pennsylvania who died at Trenton, Ontario, will take place at his home, Susquehanna, Pa., to-morrow at 2 o'clock p. m. Speaker Crisp has appointed the following committee to attend on the part of the house: Representatives John B. Robinson of Pennsylvania, J. B. Reilly of Pennsylvania, A. C. Hopkins of Pennsylvania, Howard Mutchler of Pennsylvania, J. D. Hicks of Pennsylvania, Amos J. Cummings and J. W. Wadsworth of New York, J. W. Causey of Delaware and C. A. Cadmus of New Jersey. Messrs. C. A. Gibson of Pennsylvania and E. L. Berry of Arkansas will accompany the party.

Vice-President Stevenson appointed the following committee to attend on the part of the senate: Senators Cameron and Quay of Pennsylvania, Senator Butler of South Carolina, Senator Peffer of Kansas and Senator Manderson of Nebraska.

The committees of the two houses will leave Washington to-day arriving at New York at 6 o'clock p. m., and reaching Susquehanna to-morrow morning.

JAPAN WILL NOT ACCEPT.

America's Offer of Mediation Likely To Be Rejected.

Tokio, Nov. 15.—Japan has not yet received any peace overtures from China. If Japan accept America's offer of mediation, she will do so only upon certain conditions concerning the question of indemnity. It is understood that Japan's actual outlay for the war up to the present has been about £30,000,000.

Dispatches from Field Marshal Yamagata say that he is continuing his advance in Manchuria. His left division s marching upon Sui-Yen, where a force of 20,000 Chinese under Gen. Ma is encamped. The right division recently routed a large force of Chinese cavalry on the road to Lin-San-Kwan, which was occupied later without opposition from the Chinese.

The division is now advancing upon Wo-Tin-Ting, where the Chinese under Gen. Tho, have taken a position.

New York's Epileptic Colony.

Albany, Nov. 15.—The managers of the Craig colony for epileptics met here. They are Dr. Frederick Peterson of New York, Mrs. J. B. Wadsworth of Geneseo, George M. Shull of Mt. Morris, Mr. Cudderback of Buffalo and Dr. C. E. Jones of Albany. A report, which will be presented to the legislature, was adopted. It states that a $300,000 appropriation will be needed to construct buildings. The colony, which is situated in Livingston county, a few miles from Mt. Morris, where 1,800 acres have been purchased by the state, is to be modelled after the German Epileptic colony on the cottage plan. The managers believe the colony can be made self-supporting. There are 12,000 epileptics in the state, 1,200 of whom are cared for in state hospitals. Dr. Scrappley of New York city was elected superintendent of the colony.

Unitarian Conference Adjourns.

Baltimore, Nov. 15.—The session of the Unitarian conference was devoted to Sunday school work. Rev. A. T. Bowser of Wilmington, Del., Rev. Edward Hale of Orange, N. J., Rev. Stephen H Camp of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Rev. George H. Badger read papers. "The Gospel of the Pessimist" was the title of a paper read by Rev. James T. Bixby, Ph.D. of Yonkers, N. Y. The conference adjourned after a symposium of fifteen minute addresses.

The Duty on Clock Springs.

Boston, Nov. 15.—The United States circuit court of appeals has rendered a decision in the case of the United States vs. Frank J. Wetherell, holding that "cold rolled cast steel" for clock springs is subject to an ad valorem duty of 50 per cent. This decision reverses the judgment of the circuit court which made the duty two cents a pound.

SPECIE FOR UNCLE SAM

Bankers Will Line His Coffers with Yellow Metal.

Reports from Washington and Wall Street Are That the $50,000,000 Loan Is To Be Subscribed in a Few Weeks—Many Bids in Secretary Carlisle's Hands.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Judging from the number of bids received by Secretary Carlisle, bankers all over the country are anxious to line Uncle Sam's coffers with gold. The whole amount of the $50,000,000 will be subscribed in two or three weeks. There is a serious phase, however, connected with the proposed issue. The treasury department is beginning to lose gold. On Nov. 13 it lost $6,000 n gold, and yesterday $130,000 in exchange notes. This gold was withdrawn from subtreasuries and further withdrawals are expected.

The first offer for the bond issue was received at he treasury early in the morning. It came in the form of a telegram from the interior of New York state. It was for $50,000, and the sender stated that he price offered and other particulars were contained in a letter which was now on its way to Washington.

The treasury's net balance yesterday at the close of business stood at $103,702,000, of which $61,951,000 is in gold, a net loss of $50,000 since the day before. Sub-treasuries lost $130,000, but a gain was made in the United States mint, leaving the net loss as stated.

An additional bid for $500 of the new bonds was received at the treasury department late in the afternoon.

None of the bids will be opened until Nov. 24, so the price offered for the new bonds cannot be stated. The two offers were made by telegraph and the details as to price have been sent by mail.

The attention of the president was called to the statement that there had been a disagreement between him and Mr. Carlisle in regard to the issue of bonds that might result in the secretary's retirement from the cabinet.

The president emphatically denied the entire "batch of silly misstatements" and said:

"Never since our association has there been the slightest unpleasantness concerning the affairs of the treasury department or any other matter I have every reason to believe that his attachment to me is as sincere and great as mine is for him. I should be much afflicted if anything should cause him to entertain the thought of giving up his position where he is doing so much for his country.

"We have agreed exactly as to the issue of bonds, and there has been no backwardness on his part on that subject. I see it is said that I am formulating a financial scheme. If such a scheme is presented it will be the work of the secretary of the treasury, and I shall indorse and support it.

"The trouble seems to be that those charged with the executive duties of the government do not appear willing at all times to take the counsels of the newspapers and make public all they intend to do."

Will Keep Bonds at Home.

London, Nov. 15.—Financial experts here agree that the new loan of $50,000,000 will stop exports of gold from the United States to Europe for the next two or three months. The best authorities, however, do not think that the issue of bonds without proper currency legislation can long prevent gold from leaving the United States. The stock exchange is inclined to favor the issue to revive activity in American securities.

SENATOR HILL'S EXPENSES.

His Unsuccesful Campaign Cost Him a Little Over $3,000.

LOOK TO YOUR DAUGHTERS.

The Wives and the Mothers That Are to Be.

THEIR THIN, PALE CHEEKS AND LACK OF SPIRIT LEAVES NO DOUBT.

The Nerves Are Poorly Fed and Blood Lacks in Red Corpuscles.

Oh, my boys are never nervous. One couldn't stand that. But with girls, you know doctor, it is different.

Too many mothers reason like that.

They do not like to hear their girls called tomboys, and they hasten to make them "ladylike," to keep them from running and climbing and from vigorous games, while the boys are laying in a stock of health that will last them far into middle age.

The least sign of physical failure on the part of girls at the critical times in their lives should ring a grave alarm. Pale lips, nervous habits, retarded growth, a lack of high, youthful spirits and a poor condition of the skin, urgently demand a better and a more complete nutrition.

In all cases, whether it be a young child or an aged person, Paine's celery compound adds vigor and increased weight by strengthening the very foundation of heath by feeding blood and nerves richly and promptly. It is only when the nerve centres are healthy that the other bodily functions can be healty.

If anxious mothers will only follow the advice of the most careful physicians and make sure that their children are getting sufficient material to meet the big demands made by their growing nerves and tissues, there will be an end to the weakly condition, the continual headaches, the blue days and the general ill-health that so few young girls escape.

The best ally against nervousness and irritability is that remarkable nerve food, Paine's celery compound first prescribed by Dartmouth's greatest educator Day by day when taken with the regularity and care that physicians say is indispensable for excelledt results comes invariably a steady gain in weight which can mean but one thing: a gain in quantity and quality of the blood. Trifles begin to worry less sleep comes naturally and refreshing appetite increases and their frames grow plump with solid flesh, because all the delicate parts of their nervous system, upon which the nutrition and well being of the body directly depends, are beginning to be fully nourished and to work without friction.

A body thus fed by Paine's celery compound makes those joys and little innocent pleasures possible, without which childhood and girlhood is sad to look upon.

THE MAN WHO DID NOT BELIEVE IN LUCK

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

He got in at Ipswich with seven different weekly papers under his arm. I noticed that each one insured its reader against death or injury by railway accident. He arranged his luggage upon the rack above him, took off his hat and laid it on the seat beside him, mopped his bald head with a red silk handkerchief and then set to work steadily to write his name and address upon each of the seven papers. I sat opposite to him and read Punch. I always take the old humor when traveling. I find it soothing to the nerves.

Passing over the points at Manningtree the train gave a lurch, and a horseshoe he had carefully placed in the rack slipped through the netting and fell with a musical ring upon his head.

He appeared neither surprised nor angry. Having stanched the wound with his handkerchief he stooped and picked it up, glanced at it with, as I thought, an expression of reproach and dropped it gently out of the window.

"Did it hurt you?" I asked.

It was a foolish question, I told myself so the moment I had uttered it. The thing must have weighed three pounds at the least; it was an exceptionally large and heavy shoe. The bump on his head was swelling visibly before my eyes. Anyone but an idiot must have seen that he was hurt. I expected an irritable reply. I should have given one myself had I been in his place. Instead, however, he seemed to regard the inquiry as a natural and kindly expression of sympathy.

"It did, a little," he replied.

"What were you doing with it?" I asked. It was an odd sort of thing for a man to be traveling with.

"It was lying in the roadway just outside the station," he explained; "I picked it up for luck."

He refolded his handkerchief so as to bring a cooler surface in contact with the swelling, while I murmured something genial about the inscrutability of Providence.

"MY EMPLOYER GAVE ME A GOOSE."

"Yes," he said; "I've had a deal of luck in my time, but it's never turned out well.

"I was born on a Wednesday," he continued; "which, as I daresay you know, is the luckiest day a man can be born on. My mother was a widow, and none of my relatives would do anything for me. They said it would be like taking coals to Newcastle helping a boy born on a Wednesday; and my uncle, when he died, left every penny of his money to my brother Sam, as a slight compensation to him for having been born on a Friday. All I ever got was advice upon the duties and responsibilities of wealth, when it arrived, and entreaties that I would not neglect those with claims upon me when I came to be a rich man."

"ALL I EVER HAD WAS ADVICE."

He paused while folding up his various insurance papers and placing them in the inside breast-pocket of his coat.

"Then there are black cats," he went on; "they're said to be lucky. Why, there never was a blacker cat than the one that followed me into my rooms in Bolsover street the very first night I took them."

"Didn't he bring you luck?" I inquired, finding that he had stopped.

A far-away look came into his sad eyes.

"Well, of course it all depends," he answered, dreamily, "maybe we'd never have suited one another; you can always look at it that way. Still, I'd like to have tried."

He sat staring out of the window, and for awhile I did not care to intrude upon his evidently painful memories.

"What happened then?" I asked however, at last.

He roused himself from his reverie.

"Oh," he said, "nothing extraordinary. She had to leave London for a time and gave me her pet canary to take charge of while she was away."

"But it wasn't your fault," I urged.

"No, perhaps not," he agreed; "but it created a coldness which others were not slow to take advantage of.

"I offered her the cat, too," he added, but more to himself than to me.

We sat and smoked in silence. I felt that the consolations of a stranger would sound weak.

"Piebald horses are lucky, too," he observed, knocking the ashes from his pipe against the window sash. "I had one of them once."

"What did it do to you?" I inquired.

"Lost me the best crib I ever had in my life," was the simple rejoinder. "The governor stood it a good deal longer than I had any right to expect; but you can't keep a man who is always drunk. It gives a firm a bad name."

"It would," I agreed.

"You see," he went on, "I never had the head for it. To some men it would not have so much mattered; but the very first glass was enough to upset me. I'd never been used to it."

"But why did you take it?" I persisted. "The horse didn't make you drink it, did he?"

"Well, it was this way," he explained, continuing to rub gently the lump which was now about the size of an egg; "the animal had belonged to a gentleman who traveled in the wine and spirit line, and who had been accustomed to visit in the way of business almost every public house he came to. The result was you couldn't get that little horse past a public-house—at least I couldn't. He sighted them a quarter of a mile off, and made straight for the door. I struggled with him at first, but it was five to ten minutes' work getting him away, and folks used to gather round and bet on us. I think, maybe, I'd have stuck to it, however, if it hadn't been for a temperance chap who stopped one day and lectured the crowd about it from the opposite side of the street. He called me Pilgrim, and said the little horse was Rollin, or some such name, and kept on shouting out that I was to fight him for a heavenly crown. After that they called us 'Rolly and the Pilgrim, fighting for the crown.' It riled me, that did, and at the very next house at which he pulled up, I got down and said I'd come for two of Scotch. That was the beginning. It took me years to break myself of the habit."

"But there," he continued, "it has always been the same. I hadn't been a fortnight in my first situation before my employer gave me a goose weighing eighteen pounds, as a Christmas present."

"Well, that couldn't have done you any harm," I remarked. "That was lucky enough."

"So the other clerks said at the time," he replied; "the old gentleman had never been known to give anything away before in his life. 'He's taken a fancy to you,' they said; 'you are a lucky beggar!'"

He sighed heavily. I felt there was a story attached.

"What did you do with it?" I asked.

"That was the trouble," he returned; "I did not know what to do with it. It was ten o'clock on Christmas eve, just as I was leaving, that he gave it to me. 'Tiddling Brothers have sent me a goose, Biggles,' he said to me, as I helped him on with his great coat. 'Very kind of 'em, but I don't want it myself; you can have it.'

"Of course I thanked him, and was very grateful. He wished me a merry Xmas and went out. I tied the thing up in brown paper, and took it under my arm. It was a fine bird, but heavy. I made sure the circumstances, and it being Xmas time, I thought I would treat myself to a glass of beer. I went into a quiet little house at the corner of the Lane and laid the goose on the counter.

"'That's a big un,' said the landlord; 'you'll get a good cut off him tomorrow.'

"His words set me thinking, and for the first time it struck me that I didn't want the bird—that it was no use to me at all. I was going down to spend the Xmas with my young lady's people in Kent."

"Was this the canary young lady?" I interrupted.

"No," he replied; "this was before that one. It was this goose I'm telling you of that upset this one. Well, her folks were big farmers; it would have been absurd taking a goose down to them, and I knew no one in London to give it to, so when the landlord came round again I asked him if he would care to buy it. I told him he could have it cheap.

"'I don't want it myself,' he answered. 'I've got three in the house already. Perhaps one of these gentlemen would like to make an offer.'

"He turned to a couple of chaps who were sitting drinking gin. They didn't look to me worth the price of a chicken between them. The seediest said he'd like to look at it, however; and I undid the parcel. He mauled the thing pretty considerably, and even examined me as to how I came by it, ending by upsetting half a tumbler of gin and water over it. Then he offered me half a crown. It made me so angry that I took the brown paper and the string in one hand and the goose in the other and walked straight out without saying a word.

DRUMMER'S GHASTLY SAMPLE.

He Sold an Embalming Fluid, and Carried a Corpse as a Specimen.

"Drummers have all kinds of traveling paraphernalia," remarked a traveling man as he lighted his cigar and settled himself back in the easy chair contentedly. "At Memphis on my last trip down there I fell in with an old man whose white hair and general patriarchial aspect gave me the impression that he was a minister or college professor. He was sitting in the hotel, and as I glanced at him I noticed he was smoking. This struck me as surprising, and when later I saw him in the dining-room chatting very familiarly with the waiting girls he became a mystery. I got curious.

"On the train next morning I saw my venerable mystery in the smoking car reading a novel and determined to make his acquaintance. He was very affable and rather risque in his conversation. He was going to St. Louis, then to Kansas City, and from there to Little Rock—my route exactly. I inquired his business with an apology for my curiosity, and was surprised to learn that he was selling an embalming fluid and was visiting undertakers.

"Well, we reached St. Louis and put up at the same hotel. As the baggage man was bringing in the trunks I noticed a long, peculiar-looking leather case, which the old man was guarding very carefully as he stood by while it was being unloaded and gave orders that it was to be handled very carefully and to be taken direct to his room.

"At Kansas City I noticed that he disappeared as soon as the train pulled in, and in a moment I saw him over at the baggage car attending to the unloading of that mysterious leather case. The same care was observed when we reached the hotel, and when at Little Rock the same performance was gone through with I could stand it no longer. Without a word of preface I asked him that evening at supper what he had in that leather case.

"'Wait until I go upstairs,' replied the old man with a smile, 'and I will show you; but you must promise me that you will say nothing about it or they wouldn't let me have it in my room.'

"We went to his room, and after he had carefully locked the door he turned to the corner where stood the long, narrow, leather case.

"'Please help me lift it over a little,' he said, pleasantly, 'for it's rather heavy and I can't handle it very well myself.'

"Slowly the straps were thrown back, and then the old man pulled back the lid and I gave a gasp of horror.

"There before me lay the body of a beautiful girl, cold in death, but with a calm and peaceful smile parting her icy lips, as though she had but just passed away while asleep. The body was wrapped in a loose gown of white silk, which the old man pulled away, leaving it perfectly nude. With a muttered curse at the light he called to me to come up close, and pointed silently to the arms, which were punctured with innumerable small holes.

"'My fluid is something new to the trade,' said he, without emotion, 'and I carry this body around with me to show the undertakers how to use it. It's a little idea of my own and sells lots of fluid.'

"My teeth chattered and it was a minute at least before I could speak. I asked him how long he had been carrying it.

"'I have had this one about six months,' he replied, 'but it is getting worn. I shall have to get another. This one I got in Evansville, Ind., and I shall have to commence looking around for another. They cost a good deal, for I have to have a good subject, and a girl is so much lighter; and then,' he added, 'they take with the trade better than a man would."

"That was a year ago," continued the traveling man, "and I have not seen the old man since. When he got through with a body he always had it buried, and in some cases had it returned to the same grave from which it had been taken. It was certainly the most grewsome traveling kit I ever ran across."—Indianapolis Sentinel.

PLAINFIELD'S GLORY.

Public-Spirited Citizens Abandon Politics.

UNITY FOR TOWN DEVELOPMENT.

Ex-Councilman Spangenberg, Renouncing Partisanship in Local Affairs, Advocates Retention of Present Mayor and Councilmen, and Asks for Business Men on the School Board Who Will Stand by the People's Policy.

The activity of The Daily Press in fostering sentiment in favor of the unanimous re-election of Mayor Gilbert and Councilmen See, Ginna and Fisk, has generated such expressions of esteem and co-operation from representative citizens of both political parties, and has found such ready favor throughout the mass of voters, that it seems as if all the town had been possessed of the one idea and only needed a leader to formulate it. Representatives of The Daily Press have discussed the movement with most of the leading men of the town, and find that there is practically no opposition to the continuance in office of these faithful officials to complete the important work they have so well advanced.

Among others who were interviewed yesterday concerning the matter was Leonard Spangenberg, whose views are found to coincide with those of The Press and most citizens. Mr. Spangenberg always has something interesting to say, and his opinions on the subject in hand are particularly valuable because they come from one of the most enterprising and enegetic of Plainfield's citizens, a man who is working zealously night and day for public improvements and Plainfield's progress, and who keenly appreciates just what is best for the town. Both as a faithful councilman and as a public-spirited citizen, Mr. Spangenberg has been and is devoted to the continued development of Plainfield, and its permanent prosperity. He is a Democrat on national issues; but in Plainfield municipal affairs his creed is just Plainfield, and no politics about it.

"I believe"—he told the representative of The Press who asked for an interview—"that there should be absolutely no partisanship in the administration of local affairs, and the men who now seem sure of receiving the Republican nomination for Mayor and Councilmen shall have my vote and fullest support.

"Mayor Gilbert should be renominated and re-elected as an appreciation by the people of the great and untiring interest he has taken in the city's welfare. He has won every confidence by his personal sacrifices in strict devotion to Plainfield's advancement. As the father of the sewerage system now progressing he has placed our city many degrees higher in the esteem of the world, and his judicious management and admirable policy are every day developing the town into a model city of healthful, happy homes. His aim is to provide Plainfielders with the best of civilization's advantages; and whether or not there is any other ticket in the field, everybody ought to reward Mr. Gilbert with his vote.

"The present Common Council is as a whole a most devoted set of representative men, and it would be too bad not to return such councilmen as Messrs. See, Ginna and Fisk when their good work is in such a stage of development.

"I should like to see Mr. Fisk returned from the Third Ward because he has worked hard in every department, is a most excellent business man, a progressive citizen, and understands just what has to be done. He has the city's interests at heart. The ward could not send a more able representative to foster the interests of Plainfield.

"In my own ward, the Second, Mr. Ginna has proved himself a most thorough and energetic councilman. His common-sense ideas and marked business ability make him a public official eminently worthy of being returned by an appreciative public. He has taken a great interest in sewers, and the Netherwood people are much indebted to him for having their district included in the first series of piping.

"Mr. See is very properly recommended for re-election in the First Ward. He has favored the sewer project, and is a strong, earnest representative, a very excellent councilman.

"And in the Fourth Ward as in the others I hope to see a good progressive man placed in nomination."

"Would you"—Mr. Spangengenberg was asked—"advise the Democrats to make any nomination for mayor or councilmen?"

"No;"—was his answer—"in my judgment we could not have better men in charge of affairs than those I have reviewed. They all have the best interests of Plainfield at heart.

"The same is true of the assessor and treasurer. No better assessor can be chosen than J. A. Hubbard, experienced, capable, fair-minded, honorable; and Alexander Titsworth is a treasurer beyond reproach."

"What are your views on the School Board issue?"—asked the reporter.

"As to that,"—said Mr. Spangenberg—"I hope the Republicans will nominate such men as will thoroughly support Mr. Gilbert in his views in regard to the new High School project. They should be men of thorough business qualifications."

"Have you any suggestions to make concerning the policy of the municipal departments during the coming year?"

"Many citizens"—he replied—"join with me in the decided view that the Fire Department can now afford to economize. It has spent abundant money for the present, and is thoroughly well equipped—much better, indeed, than fire departments of any other town of the size in the United States. I consider the department very efficient, and well officered. It has reached that high state of development where its expenses can be curtailed. Owing to sewers being put in, next year we should spend as little as possible.

"To show how far funds will go when judiciously managed"—added the ex-councilman—"I may cite the case of the Fire Department during the Council of 1890. That year we put in the fire-alarm system, costing $3,300, bought $1,000 worth of horses, and 1,000 feet of hose, besides operating the department, all within the appropriation of $10,000. There is no reason why the committee cannot be as frugal today, as they are men of ability."

"What of the Police Department?"

"That is a very important point. Plainfield is too large a territory to be so sparsely officered. To make the police force effective, and especially to afford secure protection at night, we should have at least ten more men on the force, so that the whole city could be thoroughly covered. No other city of such area has so few policemen."

Mr. Spangenberg urged economy in street expenditures, pointing out that till after the sewers were constructed and the streets replaced money spent on macadamizing would necessarily be wasted.

On the subject of street-railway extension he became enthusiastic.

"There is something"—he said—"that cannot come too soon. Plainfield is going to have a great boom when her sewers and rapid transit are complete. Franchise for the railway extensions should be granted as speedily as possible, and the work pushed. The present Street Committee has done all in its power to further this enterprise, and I hope to see the Netherwood, Park avenue, and other extensions, quickly made. Nothing will boom the town more than an electric railway reaching every outskirt. We have a vast area, and no cheap means of getting around. Real-estate will become very active as soon as the extensions are made, and the population will jump amazingly."

Mr. Spangenberg is thoroughly posted on the street railway matter, and said that no blame whatever could attach to the Street Committee for delay in railway extensions. He said he had great hopes for early results if the present policy were pursued covering this public enterprise; and he explained his warmth of feeling in urging non-partisan, public-spirited activity in municipal affairs by saying that as long as he lived in the city of Plainfield he should take a deep interest in its welfare.

EVONA LYCEUM.

Organization to Be Speedily Effected.

For the purpose of organizing an Evona Lyceum twenty-two were present in the Church of the Heavenly Rest last night.

The meeting was called to order in a few well-chosen remarks by Edwin Bishop. He was afterwards elected chairman pro tem. Isaac Foskett was nominated as secretary, but declined the nomination in favor of A. H. Levers, who was elected. Fifteen signed their names to become charter members. A committee of three was chosen by the chairman to secure names and bring them in at the next meeting, to be voted upon as officers of the association, and a committee was then appointed to secure a programme to be carried out at the next meeting.

The name of the association is the Evona Lyceum.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday, Nov. 27, and it is expected that officers will be elected and the association thoroughly organized.

Mrs. Opdyke President.

The Women's Temperance Aid Society at their business meeting yesterday afternoon elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. G. F. Opdyke; first vice-president, Mrs. H. H. Palmer; second vice-president, Mrs. G. M. Angleman; third vice-president, Mrs. Geo. Musgrave; secretary, Mrs. W. Townsend; treasurer, Mrs. J. S King.

Wants It for Women Too.

In the Seventh-Day Baptist Church tomorrow at 10:30 Dr. Lewis will review the Y. M. C. A. work for fifty years, and make an appeal for a similar work among young women. All who are interested will be welcome.

THE BABCOCK ESTATE.

It Is the Basis of a Friendly Suit in Court.

FOR CONSTRUCTION OF THE WILL.

Among the Statements Made in the Application for Legal Settlement Is That It Will Cost $20,000 to Complete the Mammoth Building—Executors Bring the Suit Against All Beneficiaries.

In the Chancery Court yesterday the executors of the George H. Babcock estate applied to Vice-Chancellor Pitney for the construction of the will. The application was made in the form of a friendly suit brought by the executors against all interested in the settling of the estate for the purpose of obtaining direction from the authorities as to how the property should be disposed of.

The finishing of the Babcock Building at a cost of $20,000, the variety of the lines in which Mr. Babcock had invested his money, and the presence of a minor among the heir, are complications which make the executors desirous of obtaining instruction before going ahead.

The Newark Evening News said last night in regard to the matter:

"The building is said to be entirely too large for the present needs of Plainfield and only a few of the offices are rented. The balance of the property after the work on this building is completed is to be held in trust for George Babcock, a son of the testator by a former marriage. Mrs. Babcock claims the right under the codicil to select what part of the property she desires as her share, but the other beneficiaries think that the court should decide on that point."

To a Daily Press reporter this morning Mr. Stillman said that there was no dispute between Mrs. Babcock and the executors, and that the friendly suit had been brought only for the purpose of placing matters on a solid basis.

MAY MOVE DOWN STAIRS.

First National Bank Considering Improvements.

Architect A. L. O. Marsh today took measurements about the First National Bank Building for the purpose of making an estimate of the cost of lowering the bank to the level of the sidewalk.

This improvement, which has long been advocated by The Press, is now receiving the serious consideration of the officials, and will undoubtedly be decided upon in a short time. It is possible that an elevator for the office floors will be put in if the change is made. Mrs. L. Adams sub-lets the millinery store in the basement from Van Emburgh & Son, whose lease does not expire until next Spring.

One Man Against 11.

The jury disagreed in the Paoli-Thorne suit in Justice Mosher's Court, as exclusively reported in The Daily Press of yesterday. They were locked up till 4 in the afternoon and were then dismissed.

All were in favor of giving Paoli the full amount claimed for replacing the defective well except Robert Walker. He held out against the other 11. The case will be tried again next Monday.

Sudden Death of Oliver Tweedy.

The painful news was received today in Plainfield of the death yesterday of Oliver D. Tweedy, son of O. B. Tweedy of Crescent avenue. He died suddenly of heart failure on his ranche, Knickerbocker, Texas. Full details have not yet been obtained.

—When you are making up your list for Sunday dinner just remember that you can buy hams at 10½ cents, and they are fine. Oh, I forgot to tell you where to go. It's J. F. MacDonald's, opposite the Y. M. C. A. Building. Read his ad.

THE YEARLY MEETING.

INTERESTING PAPERS READ AND DISCUSSED.

For the First Time in the History of the Meeting-House, Refreshments Served Therein.

An interesting session of the half-yearly meeting of the Hicksite Friends was held in the Watchung Avenue Meeting-House yesterday afternoon, following the other sessions reported exclusively in The Daily Press of yesterday. Two interesting papers were read and discussed.

Mrs. Mariana W. Chapman of Brooklyn, superintendent of the prison reform and philanthropic department of the Friends' work, presented a paper in which she dealt with various lines in her department on which the Friends were working and the good which they had accomplished in the past. She treated her subject in a general way, referring to many phases of philanthropy and telling of the lives of great men of the sect to illustrate her statements.

Mrs. Cornelia A. Gavett of West Fifth street followed with a paper on temperance work. She discussed particularly the use of alcohol in medicine, quoting physicians concerning its effect on the system. Among the men quoted were Dr. Ezra Hunt, late president of the State Board of Health and Dr. Davis of the Mercy Hospital, Chicago.

It was the purpose of the paper to prove it necessary for Christians to take the side of temperance because of the evidence in favor of it. Mrs. Gavett also quoted Dr. Talcott of the Middletown State Asylum, who takes the side of alcohol. She gave several of his arguments and then showed how false they were. At the close of the reading Mrs. Gavett's views were endorsed by many of those present, who spoke in support of the Friends' position.

In the evening Miss Nettie Haviland presented a paper on "Indian Affairs" in which she spoke of the tribal relation and its consequences in encouraging lack of thrift. She reviewed the history of the dealings of the whites and the Indians, especially referring to the breaking of treaties. The situation was now more hopeful, as land was being allotted to individuals. Miss Haviland favored the giving of full citizenship to the Indian and the educating of his children.

Mrs. Phœbe C. Wright of Manasquan gave her views on peace and arbitration. She spoke especially against the introduction of military instruction in the schools. She believed it very important for Friends to try to extend their influence throughout the State and nation. The discussion of these subjects was long and interesting. Then the Friends adjourned to meet again today for worship.

The Friends departed from the usual custom of dining at their homes, and for the first time in the history of the society in this society lunch was served in the meeting house.

OLD FOLKS EVENING.

MERRY CELEBRATION IN THE FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST.

Warren Chapel Endeavorers Pay a Fraternal Visit—Song and Story, and Refreshments.

A pleasant evening was spent in the First Church of Christ last night. Members of the Warren Chapel society visited their fellow Endeavorers and gave them an entertainment which was greatly enjoyed by all concerned and which brought a satisfactory sum to the treasury of the home society.

The entertainment was an "Old Folks Evening", and was a repetition of one which was given in Warren Chapel a few months ago. All of the parts were taken in an excellent manner, the extra rehearsals having made the participants more accustomed to the lines. The programme, given after an address of welcome by Elder Hand, was as follows:

Song—"I am coming home again."
Dialogue—"How to keep a secret."
Recitation—"The Inventor's Wife". Miss Happe
Solo and chorus—"The Old, Old Friends and the Old, Old Home". Miss Dunham
Recitation—"The Engineer's Story". Miss Haberle
Dialogue—"The Canvassing Agent."
Song—"Do n't take the left-hand road."
Recitation—"The Noiseless Chime". Miss Happe
Recitation—"The Wedding Day". Miss Haberle
Solo and chorus—"Call again some other eve". Miss Dunham

Refreshments were served after the entertainment.

Satisfactory Inspection.

Past Commander Charles B. Stephens of Winfield Scott Post No. 73, G. A. R., inspected General Wadsworth Post, No. 75 of Somerville, last evening. The inspection was very satisfactory and the visiting delegation was very agreeably entertained.

Besides Inspector Stephens the Plainfielders who went were Past Commanders W. C. Smith, M. C. Dobbins, and William Hand; Officer I. L. McVoy, Chaplain John Goodman, Surgeon William R. Moore, and Samuel Terry and James Lewis, all of Post 73; and Officer Edward Dunn of Post 109.

JUDGE WILHERE'S LOYAL SPEECH.

He Shows the Ancient Order of Hibernians to Be a Great and Glorious Institution, and the Plainfield Members Prove Its Hospitality.

The musical and literary entertainment given in the C. Y. M. I. Hall last evening by the A. O. H. No. 4, of Plainfield, was an excellent one in every respect.

The programme published exclusively in The Daily Press of Wednesday was carried out by P. Ludwig Conde's orchestra and J. C. Traynor, the Misses Quinn, William O'Connor, Miss Maggie Flanagan, F. Wharton, Thomas J. Cummerford, Charles Ward and M. J. Cashin. The attendance showed great appreciation. The speaker of the evening was Judge Wilhere of Philadelphia. He spoke as follows:

MR. CHAIRMAN, REV. FATHERS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I feel very much complimented in being with you here tonight to participate in this magnificent entertainment which is given by my friends and brothers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians; and I feel especially complimented in the fact that the reverend clergy, pastors and the assistants, of your good city of Plainfield are present here tonight. And with them the additional compliment comes in finding so many handsome women who have graced with their presence this entertainment this evening. I heard but a few moments ago something said about the old maids from South Plainfield. (Laughter) and I am sure if this is South Plainfield there is not going to be an old maid in the town. If there are any of the good men here—and I am sure the good fathers will back me up in it too—if there are any of the good men here who have not the nerve and backbone to take to themselves a lady, and especially a handsome lady, such as are represented here tonight, I say to them very frankly and plainly that I have three friends from Philadelphia here. Two of them are old-fashioned widowers, and one of them a plain, decent, young bit of a boy; and I'll guarantee if you men of Plainfield have n't the nerve and backbone to take the handsome girls and to give the Reverend Fathers Smyth, Murphy and Miller the benefit of all the little things that necessarily will come in the shape of marriage donations, and in the shape of other donations which will follow that—if you do not do it, I'll guarantee that there are three good men from Philadelphia who are here to take three of the handsomest women there are in Plainfield (Applause); and they will do it before they leave tonight, too.

We are indeed in earnest and truth complimented, ladies and gentlemen, in finding such a magnificent audience present tonight; and as I said truthfully too, graced by the presence of so many of the beautiful women of this town. My friend, Thomas Goff Flanigan, who is one of the most eloquent as well as a most distinguished member of the Bar of Philadelphia, and whom you will have the pleasure of hearing before this entertainment closes, is especially a lady's man; and I am sure that he is going to take from the good pastor here and carry to far off Philadelphia one of the handsome women, unless the men of Plainfield have the nerve and courage and backbone to do their duty. And we have also with us here tonight my friend and brother James Jackson, who is one of the National Directory of the A. O. H., who is the State delegate or State President of Pennsylvania for five years, and who has served the order faithfully and well. While he has no special forte in talking, at the same time he is like the other good men who accompany him, he's especially complimentary and has a special adaptability for talking to the ladies. And what more introduction especially to Irish women and their descendants—what more introduction and what higher compliment can be paid to them than to find visiting them tonight that old chieftain, that true and tried Hibernian, that old Fenian, Captain John Flannigan, who led a company into Canada and fought with General John O'Neill at Ridgeway! These, ladies and gentlemen, are the men who are with you tonight, and who feel especially complimented, too, in your presence.

I have been asked to come here and say a word about the Ancient Order of Hibernians, its aims and its objects, to speak some little of its history; and in view of the fact that you have such a programme, and an elegant entertainment, I am not going to detain you very long; but it will necessarily take some little time to speak of the society as it is, because I desire after I am through, and if our visit means anything at all, it should serve the purpose of encouraging men who are here and the men of this town who are eligible, to become members of it. As I understand there is a very flourishing division of the order here, but the membership is only about 75, and I am sure from what I have heard of the Catholic population of the town, from what I have heard of the nationality of the people who compose the Catholic population of the town, I am sure there are 500 men in this town who are eligible for membership in the A. O. H. And I think upon an examination of the society, upon having a proper idea of its aims and of its good purposes, and of the work that it does—I am sure that every eligible man in this town as well as in every other town, should be a member of this society.

You may ask me very properly what kind and character of society is it. It is a society composed of men of Irish birth or of Irish descent through either parent. The other qualification is that every member, every applicant for membership in the society in order to be successful, and in order to be a proper person to be admitted to the organization, must be a practical Catholic. A beneficial membership in the society—that is, those who receive the sick and funeral benefits, are limited to men between the ages of 18 and 45 years. But men over 45 years of age can be elected and are invited to join as honorary members, who will contribute a very small sum every year to the fund. They are entitled to all the rights and privileges of membership outside of the beneficial features of the organization.

And now what character of society is it? Whence comes it? What are its especial objects outside of the beneficial features about which I have spoken? It is a society that was formed in Ireland, some assert, and some who have inquired into the history of it assert that it was formed in Ireland more than 900 years ago. It was formed to resist the Danish invasion of Ireland—that it preceded the time of Ireland's heroic King, Brian Boru, but upon that question, because it is one of the things that is not proven clearly, upon that question I will not occupy your attention; but certain it is that the society was in existence during the time of the penal laws—and bear in mind ladies and gentlemen and kind friends that its purpose at that time was the same purpose that we have in view to day: God and country—Church and Fatherland. In the days that I speak of, two and a half centuries ago, the same price was put on the head of an Irish priest and an Irish schoolmaster as put on the head of a wolf that preyed upon the people and destroyed their substance. So it is recorded in the statute books of England that 5 pounds would be paid to the person who would bring to the English authorities, the representatives of the English government in Ireland, 5 pounds would be paid to them for the head of the wolf that was preying upon the substance of the people there; and so also the same statute said that five pounds would be paid for the head of a priest or for the head of a schoolmaster. And in those days when the ministers of our holy church could not live, when a price was put upon their head, and that price, as I say, only equal to the price that was put upon the head of the wolf, in those days sprang into existence as history teaches and illustrates to us, a society which is now known as the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and which was known at that time as the Knights of Saint Patrick. (Applause).

That society's especial purpose was to guard the minister of our holy religion, hunted as he was by the minions of English authority throughout the country; and when in the night time, or in the early morn he gathered his people around him to celebrate the holy sacrifice of the mass and to administer to them the sacraments of our holy church. The men who stood upon the hillside, the men who guarded his person and the men who kept him from being harmed or hurt or destroyed were the men of this ancient and honorable society now known as the Ancient Order of Hibernians. (Applause).

This society was transplanted to his country in 1836 and for many years it struggled along because the Irish Catholics in this country were few and far between. It struggled along for many years until within the last twenty years notably, its aims and objects, its purpose, its noble purpose, have directed the attention of our people, and they have flocked to its standard, and today not only is it the oldest society but it is the strongest organized body of Irish race in the civilized world, and the strongest Catholic society there is in the United States of America. (Applause). Now it may be said, ladies and gentlemen, notwithstanding the fact that its purpose may be good as regards the Irish Catholics and those who are eligible—Irish Catholics and those of Irish descent—that its aims are very laudable, but that it is a narrow and contracted society because it does not take into its ranks people of other nationalities and people of other creeds. I can only say in answer to that: The Catholic Church for its very wise purpose prohibits its children in this country from joining such societies as the Free Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias and the Knights of the Golden Eagle and other organizations of that character. And the Catholic Church says to its children that it is wise and proper that you should not join societies of that kind, but you can organize societies for proper purposes among yourselves and among people who believe the same as you do.

Now, so far as our society, and so far as the people of our race and creed are concerned we have no antagonism, no desire to antagonize prohibited societies. We have no antagonism against the Free Masons, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias or the knights of anything else that you please, but our church very wisely and for our benefit prohibits us from joining these organizations. Is it not right and proper that our people being denied the opportunity of joining societies of that character—is it not right and proper that we should have an organization among ourselves for mutual benefit and protection? We have no quarrel with those societies, but in the name of common sense is it not a proper and a wise, is it not a necessary thing for us to have a society among ourselves that is organized for like purposes, but conducted in a different manner, is it not proper that we should have a society, not to antagonize, not to fight, not to quarrel with anybody else, but to stand up as manly men should, as American citizens have a right to do—to stand up heart to heart, shoulder to shoulder in defense of our common rights and in defense of our common purpose and to carry out more efficiently our common duties—that is all the Ancient Order of Hibernians has in view. It is not that kind of society that while it limits its membership to men of Irish birth or of Irish descent it is not that kind of a society that declares war against other societies that have not our creed or birth. But we have a right as American citizens, nay but I regard it as our duty here as American citizens, it is our duty to our families, it is our duty to our country, it is our duty to our church to be organized and banded together and united in a society of this kind for the common good and for a common purpose, because our only purpose is to serve God, to serve our country and to help our families.

In these days, ladies and gentlemen, those of our race and creed and organizations like unto ourselves are sometimes attacked, their motives are questioned, their purposes are attacked. It has become a fad in these modern times among certain people to attack the Catholics, and especially the Irish Catholics—to attack their patriotism and their devotion to the flag of their country, and unfortunately that sort of knownothingism which we thought was buried beyond the question of resurrection more than 40 years ago, even that spirit of knownothingism is rampant throughout the country today, and men in the face of history stand up and they question the motives and they doubt the patriotism and the devotion to the flag and to the free institutions of this country, of the men of our race and creed, and I think that it is time for us to stand out upon every public platform and on every public occasion and to say to those who may call themselves American Protective Associationists or who may call themselves what they please, those who are in doubt as to the loyalty and devotion of Catholics, and especially Irish Catholics, to the flag of this country and to its free institutions—it is time that we ought to recall to the minds of these people the facts of history, and to teach them that were it not for the men of our race and creed there would be no flag, and there would be no liberty in this land today. (Great Applause.) Who are these people who are prating about their patriotism? Who are they? Point me out a prominent and distinguished

THE LITTLE BLUE SLED.

Among all my treasures that gave me most joy
Was the little blue sled that I owned when a boy,
It was uncouth and homely and weighed near a ton,
But in racing down hill it was my sled that won.
It seems to me Mercury's wings loaned the aid
To the little blue sled that my grandfather made.

The top boards were of oak, it sides were of ash;
Wrought iron its braces; 'twas well named "The Flash."
On its shining steel runners 'twould fly down the hill,
Through the long village street 'till it stopped at the mill,
With a tow headed boy and a girl half afraid,
On the little blue sled that my grandfather made.

Then the lass held on tight, while I toiled up the track,
How I tugged and pulled till I near strained my back.
But I never complained, tho' 'twas nearly a mile,
Who wouldn't do that for a pretty girl's smile?
Long ago in the grave was the pretty girl laid,
She that rode on the sled that my grandfather made.

Way up in the loft of the old lumber room,
'Twixt the hair covered trunk and my grandmother's loom,
Lies the little blue sled, with its weather warped frame,
And its deer skin rope coiled on the dust effaced name,
For vic'tries hard won may its lustre ne'er fade—
That little blue sled that my grandfather made. —Rockford Registe-

ROMANTIC BOYHOODS.

A Wonderful Baby King was Louis XIV. of France.

To be a king at five years of age and hold a court of superlative magnificence is the lot that fell to only one monarch that ever lived. He was called the Dauphin until at his majority, attained when he was 14 years of age, Louis XIV. became King of France.

The little Louis never knew what fun was from a boy standpoint; his babyhood was made up of formality, elegance and rich clothes.

No gay rides or swims, or meeting the common people, as his English cousin Prince Charlie did. Prime Ministers, Cardinals, Dukes and Princes talked to him and surrounded him jealously. But he probably would have had elaborate, showy manners anyway, his disposition being formal and exacting of the courtesy due him.

When he had been christened on his fifth year, with great state, in the chapel of the palace, his mother carried him into the room where his father, Louis XIII., was dying. "Well, what is your name?" his father, the King, asked.

"Louis XIV.," the little fellow promptly replied.

"Oh, not yet, not yet, my son."

But he was King in a few days, for his father's crown descended on him, and the stately little tot was the ruler of a great nation.

His first act of state was to receive the oaths of allegiance from his people. This he did, sitting in regal state on the throne, with a royal violet robe on and superb crown jewels. Sitting in front of him on the steps was another little boy, the Comat De Guiche. Both the little chaps behaved like grown up men.

The infant circle that little Louis gathered about him was famous as the most brilliant court of children ever assembled. He lived in the Palais Royal, which cost something over $1,000,000 to build, and occupied the apartments that had served the great Cardinal Richelieu. The most magnificent furniture and tapestry was placed there for his use, and he held his household in splendor there. A Cardinal superintended his education; he had also his governor, his preceptor and his valet de chambre. The Marchioness de Senecey and other women of high position told him fairy tales to put him to sleep, and looked after all the frills and ornaments and velvets he wore. He developed early an abnormal fondness for two things, history and military exercises. This was a signal for his after life, for he was noted for knowledge of kingly and political affairs and for controlling some of the greatest generals, who conquered for him vast territories.

Lessons in kingly etiquette were forced upon his mind by his older court; for instance, one day he loaned a crossbow to a little friend. When he started to take it back the Marchioness de Senecey reminded him with:

"Sire, kings give what they lend." The kingly little fellow, with a low bow, said, "Monsieur de Leminie, I wish the gift were of more importance." Think of this from a boy of 5!

Louis, at 14 years of age, was declared absolute monarch of France. All the grandeur attendant upon a coronation was present; people thronged the streets and frightened his steed, but Louis' athletic nerve stood him in good stead. He studied the affairs of other governments closely, he took pains to familiarize himself with all details of policy and then and there commenced to reign over the greatest era France has ever known and inaugurated the longest reign of any king in the world—seventy-seven years!

And still, unlike his cousin Charlie, who was called the "Merry Monarch," he was always known as the "Grand Monarque."

A Legal Triumph.

In the Upper Peninsula is a lawyer whose peculiar style of eloquence is celebrated throughout the 12th district. This genius of a lawyer was handsomely whipped in a case, the jury bringing in a verdict against his client. A friend met the genius.

"Congratulate me," said the latter. I have achieved a grand triumph."

"Why how so?" was the astonished response. "The case went against you."

"That isn't the point, my boy. Did ye notice, now, how long the jury were out?"

"Yes, they were out three hours."

"Three hours, is it? And it took thim three hours to unravel the thread of me sophistry. It was a great triumph."—Detroit Free Press.

THIS MAN HAS NERVE.

The Courage of a Western Detective Who Never Killed a Man.

Until the discovery of the Sayres murder monopolized the attention of Portland's detective force recently, the members thereof were interested in the capture of an assassin at Seattle by Detective Cudihee of that city. Cudihee is very well and favorably known in local police circles, having visited here several times on professional business, and there are also in Portland several non-official persons who are qualified by long acquaintance with him to give intelligent testimony as to his value as a man hunter.

It was one of the latter who talked about him last evening in this way:

"Cudihee's police training was received in a school from which no coward or blockhead could graduate with honor. It was in Leadville, Col., that he first donned a star, and he wore it through the most troublous period of that great and wicked mining camp's history. When silver was first discovered there, in 1878, nearly all the thugs and thieves in the West, and some of the worst characters of the East, started for the new Eldorado, and when the town was a few months old its rulers were desperadoes. There was a reign of terror, and it naturally resulted in the organization of a law and order party by the responsible element.

"The new party got control of the municipal government, and at once began purging the camp of its rowdies. A large force of picked men was enlisted, and Ed Cudihee was one of the first volunteers accepted.

"Then began the cleaning-out process. Hardly a day passed without a policeman shooting a thug or being shot by one. The Chief was assassinated by a bully, who rode away and escaped, and the dead man's official shoes were immediately filled by the next in command, and Cudihee was raised from the ranks to a captaincy. The war was continued until decency triumphed, and Cudihee was finally elevated to the city marshalship. He literally fought his way to the place, for in every dangerous duty he was at the front.

"He has told me that he never killed a man, and I know that he has frequently refrained from taking a human life when a less courageous or cool-headed man in his place would have shot to kill, and his reputation for daring doubtless made many a desperado surrender quietly to him who would not have voluntarily succumbed to any other member of the force. Cudihee's conduct in that Seattle affair reminded me of an almost similar incident in which he figured, and of which I was an eyewitness.

"It happened in 1883, when Cudihee was a captain. A big and burly Irishman, while frenzied by drink, shot a man in a saloon, and was the sole living occupant of the place when Cudihee and one of his officers arrived. He was standing over his victim and brandishing his revolver when Cudihee entered the door, and when the murderer looked up and saw the police uniform, he pointed his pistol directly at the part of it which covered the wearer's heart, and shouted defiantly:

"'If you come near me I'll kill you!'

"Cudihee did not stop; did not even falter, but holding out his empty hands, continued advancing, gazing steadily at the eyes of the desperate man as he did so. There was something in that gaze that seemed to fascinate, or perhaps the murderer was overwhelmed with astonishment at the fearlessness of the advancing officer. At any rate, the trigger was not pulled, and Cudihee, quietly saying 'I want that,' pulled the weapon from the still extended hand, and in an instant had the big man manacled.

"That was the greatest exhibition of cool courage I ever saw in my life. When Cudihee entered the door of the saloon the murderer was standing about a dozen yards away from him, and fully twelve seconds were consumed in his slow and deliberate advance to the muzzle of the pistol aimed at his breast."—Morning Oregonian.

A Sensible Fad.

An unusually sensible fad that was started among the young ladies of his congregation in San Francisco by a Dr. Martin is said to be spreading on the Pacific Slope. It is for the wearing of a badge that carries with it a solemn vow that the wearer will never make a secret engagement with or marry young men of whom their parents do not approve.

The American Game.

A long, loose-jointed pilgrim strayed into one of the parks the other day where a hotly contested game of football was in progress.

He watched the players for some time in silence, and at last asked a bystander:

"What d'ye reckon that thing they're fightin' over is wuth?"

"About $2.50 perhaps," replied the man to whom he had spoken.

"They're a pack o' durned fools!" exclaimed the pilgrim, stalking away in disgust.—Chicago Tribune.

40,000 MILES ON A BRIDAL TOUR.

A New York Couple's Wedding Trip Makes a New Record.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer returned a short time ago from the longest bridal tour ever made by a New York couple. A thousand persons tried to crush into Calvary Church on April 14, 1893, to witness the marriage of Miss Maud Lorillard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, to Mr. Tailer, and the wedding reception at the Lorillard residence was one of the social events of the year.

For eighteen months Mr. and Mrs. Tailer jogged leisurely around the world, stopping at interesting points for a month or so, and quite unconsciously covering a distance of about 40,000 miles.

They spent the first five months in doing their own country. At Vancouver Mr. and Mrs. Tailer met Moses Tailor of this city and Frank and George Blake of Boston, and on Aug. 28 the party of five sailed on the Empress of Japan for Yokohama. The party spent two months in Japan, and under the leadership of a guide they penetrated into the unfrequented portions of the kingdom. Everywhere they were most courteously received.

In China the conditions were totally different. The Chinese are so vicious and treacherous that the travellers were advised not to remain out of their hotel after dark. Mr. Tailer was strongly impressed by the activity and success of the Roman Catholic missionaries in China. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church and a generous contributor to its missions, but he admits that Protestant missionaries have been far less successful in Christianizing China than the Roman Catholics. The success of the Catholic Church he attributes to its methods. Jesuit missionaries from France and Italy were met who looked so much like Chinamen that it was difficult to distinguish them from the natives. They have adopted the Chinese dress even to the cue, and they live like the Chinese and talk their language fluently. The Protestant missionaries live like Europeans, and generally hold aloof from the natives.

Mr. and Mrs. Tailer spent a month in Ceylon, remaining most of the time in Kandy, the former capital of the island. The enormous amount of shipping in the port of Calcutta reminded them of New York Harbor.

Mr. Tailer did not enter the jungle, although he was invited by some Englishmen to join a hunting party. He says that hunting in India these days is somewhat farcical. A maharajah informs his sportsmen friends whenever a tiger is found in his province. The beast is located. Boxes are erected in the trees, and a fat pig is tethered within range of the men in the boxes. An electric light is hung over the pig. At night the hunters ensconce themselves in the boxes while a native prods the pig until his squeals resound through the jungle. When the tiger appears the electric light is turned on, and the hunters riddle the unfortunate beast with bullets. A squabble for the skin naturally follows.

In India the Tailers met the Duke and Duchess of Newcastle. The Duke was collecting animals for the London Zoo, and his Lordship took great pride in his noisy car load of parrots, monkeys, jackals, and other Indian animals. Mr. and Mrs. Tailer reached Europe by way of Bombay, the Red Sea, Suez, and Brindisi.

What the Champion Has Done and is Going to Do With His Money.

As a talker, when it comes to offering explanations, William Brady, manager of James J. Corbett, has few equals. If Corbett is all that Brady says, his modesty will cause him to feel embarrassed. The champion has been praised by his manager in an interview as follows: "Times and men change. Corbett glories in the fact that he is not one of the stamp of the much quoted old timers who fought gallantly in the ring for a paltry sum, spent that in some ale shop and died in an institution poor and forgotten. When Corbett retires from the ring he will have enough to live in luxury, beaten or unbeaten. And right here I will say that Corbett will retire unbeaten. He has heard enough to know that a pitcher which goes to the well too often is likely to be broken. Now, referring to the charge that he is a miser, I know that he paid off a $10,000 mortgage for his father and mother on the homestead in San Francisco. When his sister was married he made her a wedding present of $2,500. Furthermore, he liquidated the debts of his brothers, and when he made his trip to Europe he took his father and mother with him at an expense of $3,000 or $4,000. They had the best of everything. He enjoyed more than anything else the pleasure they had in going abroad. I know that his expenses on the other side of the water were greater than the sum he realized by his exhibitions. Now, I will leave it to the general public whether Corbett displayed more generosity by expending his money in this way than if he had thrown it away in barrooms in order to be a good fellow. Pshaw! He has spent $15,000 to $20,000 on his folks and has a lot left. I will speak of a little affair which occurred in Boston. Corbett and I travelled from New York, paid our own expenses, and Corbett appeared in a ball game for Charlie Bennett's benefit. When it was over he presented Bennett with $50, which was more than some other men of means did. It is an unpleasant thing to speak of such matters, but I only say it in defence of Corbett. Now we will take Corbett as a financier, or rather as a man who makes money and well invests it. To-day he owns property in New York which is worth $75,000, although it did not cost him that sum. He has money in the bank and interests in various shows equal to another $75,000. At Asbury Park he and I own cottages and land which are worth from $8,000 to $10,000. Between us, in money and interests we can state our financial assets as fully $250,000. I expect to see Jim Corbett a very wealthy man within a few years, outside of his fighting. I know that he will take care of what he gets, and no amount of abuse will change him from his policy of making and keeping money. In that respect he will be an example for others who may succeed him in the same line of business. There is a certain amount of credit attached to the title of champion, but a solid bank account is more substantial and lasting, and Corbett knows it."

Dr Best, the old professor and king of the medical school was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced slight young student who stood before him. The young man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before, he had graduated at the top of the class and as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellow professors as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr Best was a New York physician of wide reputation and had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges both because it was his own college and because the field work which his lectures covered, gave him almost the only vacation that he could

SOME BIG GOLDEN EAGLES.

One of Them Had a Thrilling Fight With a Wildcat High in the Air.

Scores of golden eagles have made their temporary abode in the last six weeks on the high mountain peaks that overlook the Loyalsock Creek, north of Forksville, in Sullivan county, Pa. From lofty heights the fierce birds have swooped down on the poultry of the farmers in the valley, and their arrival and departure have been so sudden and swift that the owners of the poultry have had no time to get their guns.

One day last week a splendid cock eagle, with a beautiful golden chest, shot like a meteor from the sky and nailed a handsome turkey gobbler on Farmer Richard W. Goodwin, Jr.'s, place, at the junction of Sand Spring Run and the Loyalsock Creek. The gobbler was fat and heavy and the eagle was unable to rise with her in a jiffy. The gobbling of the captive, the noise of the frightened poultry, and the flapping of the bird's wings were heard by Mrs. Goodwin. Mrs. Goodwin is young and quick-witted. She was standing on a chair in the act of putting a coverlet on the line. Jumping down she rushed at the big-winged robber and threw the coverlet and herself on top of him. Instantly the eagle released the turkey and began to claw and flap and scream. He was completely covered by the cloth, and Mrs. Goodwin, who is muscular and spry, pressed his wings together with her knees, caught him by the neck with both hands, and choked him till he stopped struggling and screaming. Mrs. Goodwin said she hated to strangle the eagle, he was such a noble, handsome fellow, even after she saw that he had murdered one of her finest fowls, so she lossened her grasp on his neck and let him get breath. Then she lugged him to an empty crockery crate after a good deal of trouble, and succeeded in confining the ugly bird in the crate. The eagle has a spread of wing of 7 feet 3 inches, and is at present living on rats and mice and beef scraps.

An eagle caught a sucking pig on the farm of Anthony Pearson, a mile and a half below Mr. Goodwin's place. The old sow saw the stealthy bird nab her little one, and set up a watch over the five other pigs in the litter. The eagle must have relished the young porker to the top notch, for two days after it dived and gobbled another pig. This was the biggest blunder of its life. The mother of the pig had been on the watch all day, and the instant the eagle swooped and stuck its talons into her young one she jumped upon it, fastened her tusks in its throat, and in spite of the violent beating she got from the desperate bird's wings she dragged the eagle around the yard, trampled and tore it to death, and finally devoured it.

R. D. Davidson, of Dushore township, Sullivan county, witnessed and intensely interesting combat between an eagle and a wildcat on a recent Sunday. He was sitting on a ledge east of the Loyalsock and was peering down into the ravine when he spied a wildcat crouching on a log as if it was about to pounce upon a grouse. The rich foliage reflected the noonday sunlight till the ravine was aglow where the wildcat was, and Mr. Davidson said he had just made up his mind to surprise the solitary animal with a stone when a shadow passed him like a flash, and almost simultaneously he saw an eagle with an immense spread of wing plunge into the ravine and set its claws into the wildcat. Hardly had the wildcat screamed when the eagle arose. It had one claw in the animal's neck and the other in the hide on its rump, and it was beating the air and ascending fast. The wildcat's nose was under the powerful bird's left wing, and the open-mouthed brute yowled and kicked violently in a vain attempt to turn over and give battle to the eagle.

At a height of two or three hundred feet the noisy wildcat partly turned upon its back and snapped at the eagle's wing. A single feather floated off on the air, and at once the eagle dropped like a shot and slammed the wildcat upon a flat rock, directly across the ravine from where Mr. Davidson was sitting. The wildcat struck on its feet without being stunned. Immediately the eagle swooped again, clawed at the dancing wildcat and missed. This time the four-footed fellow was prepared, and instead of undertaking to turn tail, it sat up and cuffed at the eagle, snarling and spitting as it repeatedly warded off the savage bird's enormous claws. It sprang at the eagle several times, but the latter was too quick for it. The determined bird jumped at the wounded cat like a gamecock, and for nearly ten minutes it was nip and tuck between the two. One was just as pugnacious as the other, Mr. Davidson said, and the way they made the feathers and fur fly showed that they were both bound to fight till one had to turn up its toes. Finally the eagle arose, hovered for a moment, and then came down slap bang upon its glaring antagonist. The wildcat was bewildered by the sudden swoop, and, before it had a chance to act, the eagle sent it spinning over the cliff into the rocky ravine, and instantly plunged after it. The fall broke the wildcat all up, and once more the fierce bird nailed it, arose above the treetops, and sailed leisurely off in the direction of the nearest mountain peak.

Melted But Faithful.

A girl emigrant writes back to the lady who had helped her as follows:

"Dear madam, I hope this finds you as well as it leaves me. The ship is in the middle of the Red Sea, and it is fearfully hot, I am in a terrible state of melting all day long. But, honored madam, I know you will be pleased to hear that I am still a member of the Church of England."

Hard on Russian "Drunks."

To repress drunkenness the Governor of St. Petersburg has just ordered that the names and addresses of all persons found intoxicated in the streets, regardless of rank or sex shall be posted in certain public places in the city and also printed in the Official Gazette. Fifty years ago they were compelled to sweep the streets for a number of hours, under the eye of the police.

Fine Writing Paper from Wood.

Paper making has progressed so far that a good imitation of linen writing paper is manufactured wholly from wood pulp, while a great deal of so called linen paper is made from cotton rags. True linen paper of American manufacture is now often as good as the best of the imported. The refuse from the best paper mills goes to those of next grade below until the lowest is reached.

—Wm. Hadely was sent to Somerville for ten days by Borough Magistrate Crosley today. He had been arrested on Somerset street by Chief Pangborn for being drunk and begging.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery, for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed —Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

ACHIEVEMENT.

The hilltops are aflame, the byways glowing
With sunbeams garnered from the summer's yield;
The mountains dip their banners to the field;
The field gives answer, tribute streamers throwing
Athwart the landscape's rainbow-tinted shield.

The heavens arch the earth with burnished splendor,
Wedded, they seem, as with a crystal ring;
The breezes do their votive tributes sing—
Now in grand trumpet tones, now sweet and tender—
While harvests to the fete their bounty bring.

Glad is the fruitful land; seed time has meted
To toiling hands the faithful steward's prize;
All nature joins him in his rhapsodies,
And, grateful for the goodly work completed,
Waves victory's tokens 'neath the smiling skies.

PERHAPS ADVERTISING PAYS.

The "Arizona Kicker's" Editor Converts a Disbeliever.

About a year ago Mr. J. M. Ford came to this town and opened a general store, and after waiting four weeks for him to drop in and arrange about his advertising we made him a personal call. To our surprise we found him a man who did not believe in advertising, and he was frank enough to say that he would see us far down in Texas before subscribing for the Kicker. We seldom argue with such bigoted men. The question of whether advertising pays is as old as the hills and was settled in the affirmative one hundred years ago.

We have not attacked the reputation of Mr. Ford because he refused to advertise with us. From time to time we have published brief articles which seemed to reflect on him. We got it straight that he burned a barn in Ohio; that he ran away from his wife in Michigan; that as a merchant in Illinois he beat his creditors and that he was here under an assumed name.

The other day it came to our ears that Mr. Ford had decided to shoot us on sight. As soon as we could finish an editorial on the great railway strikes we buckled on our guns and took a walk, to be "on sight." We encountered Mr Ford on Apache avenue, and he wished us to make the statement for him in connection with this article that he is thoroughly ashamed of his shooting. While we were lifting our hat to him and observing that it was a fine day he opened fire on us from a gun concealed in his hand and got in four shots before we fully realized that the meeting had been called to order. He had fired his sixth shot when we hit him in the right shoulder, and as he fell we assisted him into a comfortable position and temporarily bandaged his wound.

While he lay there waiting for our family physician to arrive Mr. Ford inquired after our advertising and subscription rates, and he also took advantage of the occasion to observe that the Kicker was a family paper deserving of the highest credit and the most vigorous support. We sent word to the office and had our lounge brought over, and then assisted to carry the wounded man home. He understood from the first that we would have been legally exculpated had we killed him, and that we shot only to disable.

On the third page of this issue will be found Mr. Ford's three-column advertisement, which will hereafter appear once a week for a year. While our acquaintance with him has been brief, we are satisfied that he is a gentleman and a thoroughly reliable business man, and his goods and prices are all that could be desired.

The doctor says that he will be able to ride out in about ten days, and we shall take great pleasure in driving him down to and through our private graveyard. He sells for cash, and cash only, and warrants full weight and fresh goods.

EDISON'S PECULIARITIES.

He Has Invented a Cuss Word and Never Wanted to Know the Time.

In addition to the many inventions in electricity which have emanated from Thomas A. Edison there is a pet cuss word which is characteristic of the great inventor.

He was speaking the other day of a man who said that a certain decision affected all Mr. Edison's inventions, and that they could be used universally without compensation to the inventor. When the reporter asked him if this was true, Edison fumed a moment and finally blurted out:

"That man is a Himalayan Andesian jackass."

Continuing he remarked with a tinge of bitterness in his tone that he had never made a cent out of any of his inventions in this country.

Another characteristic reply of the inventor was his answer to a jewelry firm which desired his experience with his first watch.

"I never owned a watch. I never wanted to know the time," he said. Mr. Edison works at all hours of the day and night in his private study. He enjoys a dry smoke and chews black cigars after the style of the late Gen. Butler.

IT TURNED OUT RIGHT.

Belle Was His Sister, and Letter-Piecing Didn't Hurt.

"I'd like to speak to Miss Edith private," said a woman who had been a servant in Miss Edith's family, but who now took lodgers.

"Miss Edith," she began after some preliminary remarks, "I'm told that Mr. Ripley comes here considerable. And, Miss Edith, you know what I've always thought of your family, "and that any one of you young ladies is fit for the best in the land. And I'm not saying but what Mr. Ripley is a worthy young man; but I think I owe it to you, Miss Edith, to tell you that he gets terribly affectionate letters from a young lady named 'Belle.'"

"I've no right to interfere with his letters," said Edith, but her voice trembled. "And how do you know anything about it, Ann? You wouldn't read his letters."

"No, indeed, Miss Edith; far be it from me to read anybody's letters when they're in the whole sheet and done up proper in envelopes; but when a man tears up his letters and scatters them round the room, I have the right, as nobody can deny, to piece them together and make what may be out of them; and I hold that it's my duty for your family's sake, and for your own sake, too, to let you know, Miss Edith."

A few days later Ann paid another visit and this time she announced, "Miss Edith, my mind's at rest, and I hope yours will be, too. I pieced together a letter from his mother, last night, and I found out that Belle is his sister."—New York Tribune.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

As there was no school today the meeting of the Kappa Delta Phi and High School Lyceum were postponed till next Friday. There will also be no meeting in Thanksgiving week.

There was a meeting of the Senior class yesterday at recess, but little business was transacted owing to the limited time. Most of the time was spent in discussing the class spread.

The result of the football game of Wednesday delighted everyone, coming as it did, something of a surprise. Webster Littell '97, the regular centre, was unable to play on account of a serious accident two days before, and Volney F. Green '96, the crack half-back, was out of town, while sundry sore heads and strained muscles left the team in bad condition.

F. Wilbur Cornwell '96 is certain of his place as quarter for the rest of the year as his playing Wednesday afternoon was very fine; he broke through the line repeatedly and was in every play, and were he a number of pounds heavier he would be an ideal football player.

Edgar I. Serrell '95, who distinguished himself at half Wednesday, is at present the principal ground gainer on the eleven, his fast running and his rotating motion on making a centre won him many yards. George A. Horne '95 and Elwood Sebring '95 who played the ends were powerful assistants in stopping the opposing runners, Sebring distinguishing himself by making a number of fine tackles and Horne by his tackling and interference.

Herbert Richardson '96 played his first regular game after several years absence from the field. He has not forgotten his old tricks and made his touchdown by a splendid run of 40 yards around right end. Owing to the absence of Littell, J. H. Craig '96 was taken from tackle and placed at centre, and A. B. Crane '97 taken from guard and put behind the line, Rapalje taking his place. Despite the fact that two of the centre trio were new to their positions, they played very well and most of the gains of the High School eleven were made through openings made by them. A. B. Crane '97, though usually playing guard, understands the duties of the half back and it was behind his interference that Serrell made many of his gains. The make-up of the team will be somewhat changed for the game with the New Brunswick High School Cadets and several heavier players will be put on the team.

A number of the High School boys met yesterday afternoon to practice basket ball. George Smith '98 and Charles B. Morse '95 was chosen as captains and selected the teams. A very exciting game, full of brilliant plays by both sides, was played, resulting in a tie, 3—3, Smith throwing the goal for his side and George A. Horne '95 for the other side.

As soon as the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium is ready, practice will be continued there so that the players may become used to the room before their match game with Leals. The personnel of the High School team has not been decided on yet but, as there is plenty of material to choose from, a strong team may be looked for.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

DOANE & EDSALL.

ALL FOR AMERICA.

man in the American Protective Association and I'll show you the descendant of a Tory who tried to tear down this flag when it had only 13 stars in 1776. Point me out a spouter and a shouter who calls himself an American Protectionist and I'll point you out either a man or a descendent of a man who in 1861 when Irishmen and Catholics were fighting for American liberty and shedding their blood that liberty might survive in this land, this man or his progenitor was with England at that time conspiring with the Confederate States in order to destroy the Union of these United States. (Applause.)

[Here followed an extended and eloquent review of the great deeds of Irishmen for America.]

But while we believe in Irish liberty and give attention to the church, we are first in teaching our members that their highest civic duty is not to Irishmen, it is not to the land of their birth or the land of their fathers. Their highest civic duty is to the Stars and Stripes and to the free institutions of America. Were Ireland free tomorrow and were the Pope of Rome possessed of civil power, were he a sovereign over the Papal States or over any other civil dominion, no matter what it might be, and much as we love and honor and venerate him, the head of our church, willing to live for him, willing to die for him if need be, but if in his sovereign capacity as a sovereign king, he attacked the flag of our country, if he attacked the glorious Stars and Stripes the intelligent Ancient Order of Hibernians, and the men of our race and creed, would know where their duty lay. Their duty would be to stand up in defense of the Stars and Stripes and the glorious free institutions of this grand and great country in preference to all other institutions and of all other flags, no matter where they may be. (Applause.)

I appeal to you friends and gentlemen to examine this society, to examine its merits. You will find it filled with Irish patriotism, Catholic devotion, true benevolence. You will find that it does not confine its charities to the members of its society. You will find that when misfortune or trouble overtakes the country as it has done before in the case of the Johnstown flood and in the case of the yellow fever at Memphis and other places, that the Ancient Order of Hibernians has been first to extend the ready hand of charity and fellowship regardless of creed or conditions to all people no matter who they may be. You will find also that it is filled with American patriotism and devotion to American institutions. That is the first and highest duty that we teach our people, and I ask you men to examine it, and I am sure every eligible man, upon examination of the objects and purposes of the society and of the work it is doing, will be proud to acknowledge himself as a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

May we not hope then, continuing upon these lines of patriotism, love of church, love of country, devotion to principle, may we not hope, ladies and gentlemen, and I am sure that you will pardon me and join with me, that these two flags about which I have spoken, the free flag of America, representing the greatest nation, the freest nation, the best government that God ever gave to mankind, that that flag side by side with the green flag, representing a people who have always been true to God, to their church, to their country, who have never sold their birthright for a mess of pottage, that these two flags may soon in the providence of God represent two nations equally happy, equally prosperous and equally free.

After the judge had finished, Lawyer Flanagan was introduced by President Sheehan. He made a ringing speech in which he endorsed the sentiments of the previous talker.

Refreshments were abundantly served, and all had a royal good time.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Boehm is having a great sale in his toy department and in coats and underwear.

—Costs money to eat, 'tis true; but costs less to eat what Fulper sells, and you like. Just see his list today.

—The Independent Fife and Drum Corps will give an invitation dance in their hall, Thursday evening, Nov. 22.

—The Women's Relief Corps, No. 10, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will be inspected this evening by Mrs. Lacey of Rahway.

—A very interesting time is promised at the Christian Endeavor meeting in the First Baptist Church this evening. All are earnestly invited to be present.

—The Sixth Street Social Club will enjoy one of their delightful subscription dances next Thursday evening. It will be held in the Olympia, Sycamore street.

—Several communications have been received today on both sides of the School Board question. They are unfortunately crowded from this issue, but will appear tomorrow.

—Don't put off after tomorrow calling on The Daily Press for the Palmer Cox books. They are being sold so fast that the supply is likely to be exhausted at any time.

—Casual mention in The Daily Press that a stolen gate awaited its owner at 332 West Fifth street was the means of the immediate restoration of the gate to its proper place.

—The floor in the rink was not ready for the expected opening ride of the Riding Club last evening. A large gang of men is at work now, and the repairs will be completed by tonight.

—"Double the space", says Lederer, for he has much to tell the public of big bargains for tomorrow. Keep warm by all means, and yet save money to your purse. Dealing with Lederer does it.

—Because of his rapidly increasing business, John J. Shotwell has hired the new store on Park avenue next to George W. Rockfellow's and placed a part of his fine stock of mantels there. He retains his rooms in the Vanderbeek Building.

—Ladies who are thinking of buying a pair of the B & L patent cork-sole boots, should do so at once, as the demand is so great for them all over the country that the manufacturers are unable to keep up with it. Doane & Edsall at present have all sizes.

THE REVIVAL OF "BEN BOLT."

Congressman English Speaks of His Song's Vogue Through "Trilby."

Has George Du Maurier made Representative Thomas Dunn English, of Newark, N. J., famous, or has the Congressman lifted the English novelist and caricaturist to a higher pinnacle of fame? In Du Maurier's last novel, "Trilby," which is having such a sale, the song of "Ben Bolt" is echoed and re-echoed throughout. It has even been claimed that fair Alice furnished the theme of the story.

However this may be, it is certain that the work of the Newarker, first published half a century ago, is once more on everybody's tongue, and if Du Maurier, as is stated, was not aware of the author of "Ben Bolt" when he penned "Trilby," he has learned who he is by this time. Dr. English—for he practiced medicine in early life—talked in an entertaining manner to a local interviewer the other day who called at his home.

He is an old man. You see that at a glance. He was born on June 29, 1819, in Philadelphia. Without his glasses he hardly sees at all. But his voice is strong and musical and winning, and when he talks you like to listen to him. There was a copy of his poems among the litter on the table.

"This," he said, opening the volume, "has been published by subscription. As you will see, it is edited by my daughter Alice. It contains "Ben Bolt" as it was originally written in 1843, and published for the first time in the New York Mirror. In its travels it has met with some hard knocks, like its father, and there have been many mutilations of its lines.

"I have seen the use made of 'Ben Bolt' in Du Maurier's novel 'Trilby,'" went on the Doctor, "and it is by no means to my liking. But, after all, what does it matter? All this controversy about the author of 'Ben Bolt' and the British assumption that he must have been a Briton is surprising to me. Now, let me read you this." The Doctor took up a copy of "Trilby" and read:

Its harmonies in the playing of "Svengali" were all magnified into a strange, almost holy, poetic dignity and splendor quite undreamed of by whoever wrote the words and music of that unsophisticated little song, which has touched so many simple British hearts that don't know any better—and among them once that of the present scribe—long, long ago.

The Doctor laid down the book. Now, had any one read 'Ben Bolt' carefully and intelligently," he said, "he would have seen that it was written by an American."

"Why?"

"I will tell you. There are certain words in the poem that would only have been written by an American. The word 'slab,' which occurs in the first stanza, is an Americanism. It is not used in England. Then, again, 'hickory tree' is used. There are no hickory trees in England known by that name. When the Englishman speaks of a tree he calls it an oak."

Then the Doctor grew reminiscent.

"When I first floated into Congress on the Democratic tidal wave," he said, "some of the newspapers, speaking of the newly-elected member, fell back on my literary record, and dragged 'Ben Bolt' from its lurking place. The result of this was a sort of 'Ben Bolt' revival through the country, but a source of great annoyance to me.

"I was assured by one member of the House that his wife had won him years ago by the pretty and pathetic manner in which she had sung 'Ben Bolt' to him. Another told me that, like Dr. Conn, in the Sandwich Islands, his mother had sung him to sleep with 'Ben Bolt,' and, to cap the climax, I was introduced to a lady who had been christened 'Alice Ben Bolt.' She was a daughter of General Pickett, of Confederate fame.

"Whenever I got into a mood of indignation at some legislation adverse to my views," he went on in his musical way, "and expressed my indignation in strong and perhaps emphatic terms, some of the members would clap me on the back and sing:

Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?
Sweet Alice, whose hair was so brown.

"This would put me in a rage. 'Confound it,' I have often said, 'I begin to wish that "Ben Bolt" or I had never been born.'"—N. Y. Herald.

Dolly the Outlaw.

From Indian Territory there have lately been coming stories of "Dolly, the Queen of the Outlaws," who has become fully identified with the Cook gang. She accompanies them on their pillaging expeditions, and is said to be a handsome, dashing young woman, who possesses courage unlimited, and whose daredevil recklessness exceeds that of the once noted Belle Starr.

She wears a six-shooter and a big bowie knife and carries a rifle. With a rifle she is a dead shot, and is cool and collected in time of danger. The gang was camped not far from Salisaw, two stations west of Muldraw, not long ago, when she went into town accompanied by two of the boys as far as the outskirts.

Attired in a short dress, close fitting jacket and felt hat, she boldly walked into the Post Office and inquired for mail, after which she visited several stores, where she did some trading, carrying a six shooter all the while. Near the edge of town she held up three men, taking from one a gold watch, and from the others a small sum of money; then coolly walked up the railroad track, where she was joined by the outlaws. Dolly is but 22 years old. Her true name is unknown, and she guards the secret of her identity well.

FIVE NOTABLE WOMEN.

One Smokes, Another Has Enough Champagne for a Lake.

Mrs. Charles Dudley Warner, is said to be the best amateur musician in New England.

The wife of the Italian Prime Minister, Crispi, is an ardent lover of cigarettes and enjoys puffing a cloud whenever she is disengaged. Crispi does not use tobacco.

The French Duchess d'Uzes has between 12,000,000 and 14,000,000 bottles of champagne in her cellars in the Rue de Temple, Paris, and as many more in her vaults at Rheims.

Miss Braddon has now been writing for over 30 years with undiminished reputation. She usually commences work soon after breakfast, and considers her task completed when she has composed some 3,000 words.

The widow of Stonewall Jackson says that when he was courting her he made it a rule never to read one of her letters on Sunday or send one to her so that it would be likely to be carried through the mails on that day.

DR. M'COSH DYING.

Princeton, November 16.—Dr. James McCosh passed a quiet night, but is gradually sinking, and has not long to live.

Smashed by a Trolley.

Frank Randolph's truck, driven by Charles Gaskill, who was accompanied by Edward Vanderweg, was wrecked by a New York-Newark trolley car at Bergen Hill at 12:45 this morning.

They drove from in front of a car on one track, not seeing the car coming behind them on the other. The truck was considerably broken, and a portion of the car. The horses were thrown down and cut. They are being doctored in Seguine's stables, Newark.

Runaway.

C. Schepflin was riding in his coach along West Front street at 8 this morning when he narrowly escaped being seriously injured. The coach collided with a brick wagon in front of Max Wiertz's house and plunged up on the sidewalk. A window was broken and the carriage was scratched. No other damage was wrought.

Friendly Sociables.

The Hicksite Friends will give a second series of socials and entertainments in the Watchung Avenue Meeting-house this Winter. The first will be Saturday, Dec. 15, when Dr. Edward Magill of Swarthmore College will lecture on "Fenelon and His Times".

—Putnam & DeGraw, the popular dealers in dry goods and notions, offer a wonderful lot of bargains.

—The gas company is running a main through Fairview avenue, Watchung Park.

—Justice Nodyne is getting settled in his new office in the Babcock Building.

—The case of Seader against Kratzel was won by the plaintiff in Dunellen yesterday. The defendant appealed.

—The proposal for a subscription series of great attractions in Music Hall did not produce the requisite number of subscribers, and has been abandoned.

—The committee of arrangements of the Ancient Order of Hibernians desire to thank, through The Daily Press, all who assisted in the entertainment last evening.

—Wm. Sanders, brother-in-law of Alexander Manning of this city, dropped dead Monday of heart trouble. He belonged to No. 2 Engine Co. of Elizabeth and was employed in the Elizabeth freighthouse.

—The office of the Chief Engineer is being put in fine condition by the Fire Committee. Mr. Bird will hang a group portrait of the Board of Engineers on the wall, and Mr. Fisk will put a handsome rug on the floor.

JOGGIN' ALONG.

We're joggin' along,
An' we're singing our song,
No matter what Fortune is bringin';
A song sends a sigh
Out o' hearin'—sky-high.
An' the Lord gave us voices for singin'!

We're joggin' along
With the right an' the wrong,
In weather that's cloudy and sunny;
The worms make the silk
An' the cows give the milk,
An' the bees help us out with the honey.

We're joggin' along—
Purty healthy and strong;
We toil for the true hearts that love us;
An' when death ends the race,
With a smile on each face
We'll make for the heaven above us.

Anecdote of Mr. Blaine.

On one occasion a decision which Blaine made as Speaker of the House greatly enraged a new member, who waited on Pennsylvania avenue after the House adjourned, with some friends, declaring that he would "have it out or fight."

"You can't," said one of his friends, "nothing you will say will get the better of Blaine's good humor and politeness."

"We'll see," said the enraged man, as he caught sight of the stately figure of the Speaker coming slowly toward him. He stepped forward quickly and stood across his path.

"Mr. Blaine," he said loudly, "I don't know you; I am no acquaintance of yours, but I take the liberty of telling you, sir, that you are a fool and a jackass!"

"Indeed," said Mr. Blaine mildly, "now, I wonder," regarding him thoughtfully, "what kind of a liberty you would have taken if I had been one of your intimate friends?" and, bowing courteously, he passed on, while the the companions of the Congressman burst into a shout of laughter.—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Little Story of Napoleon.

"Who are you?" asked the first Napoleon of a man in humble guise who one day presented himself before the Emperor. "Sire," said the man, "I had the honor at Brienne for fifteen months to give writing lessons to Your Majesty."

"You turned out a nice pupil," said the Emperor sarcastically—his handwriting was atrocious—"I congratulate you on your success." Nevertheless he saved the man a pension: so runs the story which Professor Sloan has contributed to the "Century."

SWEPT BY FIERCE FIRE

Colorado Towns Burned to the Ground.

Gold Hill, the First Destroyed, Was Evacuated by the Residents Just in Time—Many Narrow Escapes. Damage in Other Places—Scenes in Boulder—Losses Over a Million.

Boulder, Col., Nov. 16.—A forest fire which was started from a camp fire has been raging all night north of the mining camp of Gold Hill, a town of 500 inhabitants, fifteen miles from here. The timber is as dry as powder and a fierce wind carried the flames over five miles of dense timber in a short time. Fifty people came into Boulder in wagons from Gold Hill. They were mostly women and children. They reported that the business men and miners were carrying what goods and property they could into the mining tunnels, and had abandoned hope of saving their stores and dwellings. A courier arrived at Boulder at 1:30 p. m. reporting that all the buildings at Camp Talcott, a short distance from Gold Hill, were burned, except the steam mill, and that the fire had reached the western portion of Gold Hill, burning the mill of the Prussian mine.

Several ranch houses were burned during the morning. Two men named Eihler and Seaman being badly burned. At 3 p. m. the fire was spreading toward the town of Copper Rock. The gravity of the case is fully appreciated here in Boulder and the utmost excitement prevails. It is believed many small camps will be burned. The residents of Gold Hill who have not come to Boulder have assembled on the top of Horsefelt mountain, and are watching the progress of the flames as they consume their homes. The wind is blowing furiously and drives the fire before it in large sheets of flame.

The property loss will amount to over $1,500,000. There will necessarily be great destitution. Among the business houses at Gold Hill are the following: Frank Body, general merchandise and postoffice; Dr. Trovillian, drug store; Johnson & Hawkins, general merchandise; James Corvell, boots and shoes; Mrs. J. Murphy, hotel. All have been destroyed.

Denver, Nov. 16.—A fierce wind and dust storm struck the city from the north, filling the air so that it was impossible to see across the street. Many plate glass windows and awnings were destroyed. The temperature fell twenty degrees in thirty minutes. At 6 p. m. a wet snow began falling but it is probably too late to save Gold Hill from destruction.

Perry, Okla., Nov. 16.—Oklahoma and the Cherokee Strip, have been visited by a fierce sandstorm for a week and the sand is blinding. The city authorities have ordered fires in the business section extinguished. Part of the time one could not see fifty feet.

DANGER OF A BATTLE.

Farmers After the Cook Gang in Indian Territory.

Muskogee, I. T., Nov. 16.—A courier has just arrived from the Arkansas bottoms and reported that he, by chance, ran into the Cook gang in their quarters. They received him without fear. A number of farmers arrived and reported to United States Attorney Jackson, asking that they be commissioned and permitted to lead twenty deputy marshals against the outlaws. A plan of operation has been suggested. A battle is expected soon.

Ex-Senator O'Malley Surrenders.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—State Senator John F. O'Malley, who has been wanted by the police for over a week on the charge of shooting and wounding a hack driver and a saloon keeper on election night, surrendered himself to Chief Brennan. He was taken to the East Chicago Avenue station, where he gave bail to appear when called for trial. O'Malley was an unsuccessful candidate for the state senate from the 23d district at the late election.

Caricaturing Li Hung Chang.

London, Nov. 16.—Li Hung Chang's vicissitudes have had a noteworthy effect upon his hold on the popular mind. A caricature published in Tien-Tsin and pasted on the walls represents him on the back of a tortoise with a cannon under his right arm, sinking a Japanese cruiser. Another shows him as a fish on the point of being hooked. In one placard Li Hung Chang is called Wongpa, the lowest name of derision.

Applications for Bond Blanks.

New York, Nov. 16.—There were many applications to-day at the subtreasury for subscription blanks and Secretary Carlisle's circular on the new bond issue. The officials believe that the bids from the public will be more numerous than when the February issue was made. It is understood that he foreign houses which will take bonds will not form a syndicate, but will put in individual bids.

Flames in Providence.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 16.—There has been a disastrous fire in Wakefield which was placed under control only after three buildings had been burned to the ground. The fire started at 11 oclock in the basement of the drug store occupied by Howard Donahue, on Maine street. Mr. Donahue fixes his loss on the stock at $8,000.

Great Custom Frauds.

New York, Nov. 16.—Herman Aitch, senior partner of the importing firm of Herman Aicht & Co., has been arrested by Deputy United States Marshals Stafford and Bostwick. It is said that undervaluations to the extent of $100,000 have been discovered.

Insurance Companies Liable.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 16.—The state superintendent of insurance has received a decision of the supreme court of Illinois holding all "Lloyd insurance associations" individually liable for all policies issued by their company.

Collector Connelly Installed.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 16.—James F. Connelly has been duly installed as internal revenue collector for the 5th district of New Jersey.

FIVE MEN SCALDED.

Serious Injuries Caused by a Boiler-drum Explosion.

Muncie, Ind., Nov. 16.—A horrible accident occurred in this city in which five men were dangerously scalded and burned. The men were employes of the Muncie Muck Bar mill. In the mill is five large boilers and under these is a mud drum twenty-five feet long and three feet square. An end of the drum cracked and burst. A stream of hot mud, boiling water and steam was thrown the length of the mill, and five men who were standing in the line of the stream fell to the ground, either burned or cooked. They were carried to their homes and physicians summoned. The flesh on John Gainer's face, hands and legs is completely cooked and when his clothing was removed, the outer part of the flesh peeled off. It is thought that he is burned internally and cannot recover. Gibson is also in a bad condition, his face and hands are in a blister. Curtis is in about the same condition as Gainer. Taylor and Bowers were burned about the face and hands and their bodies were scalded. Their eyes were filled with hot mud and they ran wild about the factory screaming for help. Their suffering was intense. The factory was slightly damaged.

Her Bones Like Glass.

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 16.—Sarah Scott of Oak Grove village is attracting the attention of physicians. In 1893, while on her way to the Massachusetts General hospital, she broke her thigh in alighting from a car. Her leg was amputated. While turning in bed at the hospital her other leg was broken. After it had heeled she was removed to her home. There while chewing, she broke her jaw-bone, and last night, while attempting to put her hand behind her she broke the bones of her arm. Dr Skidder says she is suffering from osteomalacia.

Saleman Hubbell's Suicide.

New York, Nov. 16.—E. R. Hubbell, 45 years old, a traveling salesman for Horace Sherman, wholesale grocer at No. 61 Main street, North Adams, Mass., was found dead in his bed at the St. Stephen's hotel, No. 52 east Eleventh street. He had shot himself in the head. On a table were letters which Hubbell had addressed to Mr. Sherman, Mark H. Hubbell, Wayne, Pa., and Charles B. Hubbell, of No. 2 Wall street, this city.

Eight Cars Wrecked.

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 16.—An extra west-bound freight on the eastern division of the New York & New England railroad broke in two and ran together near Hop River station and derailed eight cars temporarily blocking both main tracks. The night express from Boston was run around over the New York, New Haven & Hartford road, by way of Willimantic and Middletown.

The New York Horse Show.

New York, Nov. 16.—The attendance at he horse show was the largest of the week. The garden had some 15,000 people in it and the sale of admission tickets was stopped. Fully 3,000 people wege turned away. The Astors, Vanderbilts, Belmonts, Crugers, Wideners, Cassatts, Lawrences, Webbs, Kips and other well-known families were in the boxes. Coaching stallions and hunters were judged.

Coal Breaker Burned.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 16.—Number three breaker, boiler house and other outbuildings located near the town of Plymouth have been destroyed by fire. The loss on breaker and machinery is estimated at nearly $200,000; partially insured. The breaker was operated by the Delaware & Hudson Coal company and employed some 300 men and boys, who are thrown out of employment.

Christian Alliance Convention.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—The National Christian Alliance convention resumed its session. Rev. J. G. Stewart of Monmouth, Ill., presided and conducted a brief service. Rev. Stephen Merritt of New York delivered an address. Rev. A. B. Simpson, the national president of the alliance, and Rev. Mr. Galbien of the New York Hebrew mission also preached.

New Navigating Instrument.

New York, Nov. 16.—The solarometer, a navigating instrument invented by Lieut. W. H. Beehler, U. S. N., excites much attention at the Maritime exchange. The use of the sextant is done away with by the solarometre, which is so constructed that when adjusted the results are determined at a glance.

FLASHES FROM THE WIRE.

J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, I. T., Banner, in that town shot and mortally wounded George Miller.

The Baptist congress at Detroit came to a close with the reading of a couple of papers on evangelical subjects.

The town of Sheffield, Ia., fifteen miles south of here, on the Iowa Central railroad, was totally burned Wednesday night. The loss is estimated at least $100,000.

Henry Potts, aged 60 years, was instantly killed at Hudson, N. Y., by a stone thrown from a blast fired in Jones' quarry. His head was severed from his body.

Edith Elder shot and killed Frank Quinn yesterday at Stockton, Cal., and then fatally shot herself. Quinn had wronged the young woman under a promise of marriage.

Ground has been purchased in St. Louis for the erection of the largest tobacco factory in the world, for the use of Liggett & Meyers. The buildings will cover twenty acres and will cost $1,000,000.

The sailors drowned by the capsizing of the schooner Antelope, near Grand Haven, Mich., were Capt. John Larson and brother and an unknown Swede known as "Chris." They made their home in Whitehall, Mich.

Alphonso Magno was dangerously wounded in Newark, N. J., by the accidental discharge of a revolver in the hands of his friend, Guisseppe Gregorio. The young men were rehearsing a theatrical performance.

Just before his death Alexander III. urged the present czar not to keep the theatres too long in mourning. "I do not wish," he said, "to have so many lose their bread by my death." Nicholas II. has given 500,000 roubles to actors made idle by the closing of places of amusement.

NO ANSWER FROM JAPAN

The Attempted Mediation Has Been Ignored.

Ministers Made the Offer November 6, and China Agreed, But Japan Has Failed To Reply—Defeats of the Japanese Reported—Prospects of a Bloody Battle at Port Arthur.

Washington, Nov. 16.—There seems to be a hitch in the proposed United States mediation in the Chinese-Japanese war. State department officials remain mute on the matter and similar silence appears to have been imposed on the legations of the contending powers in this city. Nevertheless, it is understood that no notification has yet been received from Japan of the acceptance of the United States offer of mediation, though that proposition was cabled to Minister Dun, to be presented to the government at Tokio on Tuesday week, Nov. 6, ten days ago.

China, to whom, through Minister Denby, the same proposition was made on the same day, is said to have given a "reluctant assent," as it is understood hampered by conditions which do not seem to have been complied with. Frequent interviews have been had within the past few days between Secretary Gresham and the Chinese and Japanese ministers, but whatever may have been accomplished by these conferences, it is quite clear that no agreement has been arrived at which contemplates a suspension of hostilities on the part of Japan, and no such agreement appears to be immediately in prospect. There is an impression prevailing in diplomatic circles that the offer of mediation on the part of the United States may fail of its object.

London, Nov. 16.—A Tien-Tsin dispatch to the Times says that thousands of refugees who were fleeing from Kinchow were mistaken for the enemy by the Chinese troops and were fired upon. Hundreds of them were killed. A correspondent of the Standard in Berlin says that he understands that Germany advises China to negotiate for peace directly with Japan.

The Daily Graphic has this dispatch from Tien-Tsin:

"Chinese reports emanating from Port Arthur are to the effect that the Chinese still hold two forts at Talien-Wan and have repulsed the Japanese after desperate fighting. The Japanese are said to be elosing gradually round the Chinese position. At Port Arthur every preparation has been made for the Japanese attack and the garrison is resolved to offer vigorous resistance. Part of Gen. Sung's army has retaken Kinchow and Mo-Tieng-Ling. The Japanese were routed and pursued for miles."

Tien-Tsin, Nov. 16.—The present whereabouts of the Chinese army, which was defeated at Kiu-Lien-Chang, is unknown here.. Colonel von Hannekin has been given supreme command of the whole Chinese navy.

Yokohama, Nov. 16.—The newspapers here resent Great Britain's offers of intervention, which they regard as entirely a movement in behalf of China. They add that Great Britain's influence in the east is in jeopardy by this offer, which wounds Japanese feeling. The newspapers of this city say that the defenses of Port Arthur are reported to be stronger on the land side than on the sea front. Fully 100 guns are said to be in position. The Japanese expect that if the Chinese make any defense the assault will be bloody.

Would Not Sing for Most.

Detroit, Nov. 16.—Johann Most, the anarchist, spoke at Arbiter hall here. He roundly abused the Chicago police and the authorities who found the anarchists guilty of the Haymarket crimes. He urged workingmen to be more radical, and compel capital to give them something beyond the crumbs now tendered labor. The local socialist Maennerchoir, which had been asked to sing at the meeting, declined to appear because Most had often shown animosity toward the milder people of the socialists.

Knights of Labor Convention.

New Orleans, Nov. 16.—The time of the Knights of Labor convention was taken up in listening to an address by Vice-President George W. Howard, of the American Railway union, in which Mr. Howard discussed the principles of the union and urged amalgamation of all the great labor organizations of the country into one association and under one management. Grand Master Workman Sovereign replied expressing his approval of the plan. No other business was transacted.

Will Cripple the Company.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 16.—Sheriff Lehlbach made a levy opon fifty cars of the Newark Passenger Railway company to satisfy a judgment in the hands of Lawyer Leonard Kalish, who secured a verdict of $12,000 against the company for injuries received by John Kelly, his client. The value of the cars will meet the obligation, but the loss of the cars themselves will seriously cripple the company.

Stuck in the Mud.

Boston, Nov. 16.—Two stone cutters in Cambridge happened to look at the Charles river flats and saw a man stuck up to his arm pits in the mud. They succeeded in rescuing him. The man was taken to the Cambridge hospital, where he said his name was Horace L. Coombs.

Dead in the Woods.

Upper Sandusky, O., Nov. 16.—Robert Kenan, who went hunting alone Tuesday, was found dead a short distance southeast of the town. Both barrels of his gun had been discharged and he had bled to death from an ugly wound in his right groin.

Whitney's Brother Elected.

Boston, Nov. 16.—At a meeting held in this city Mr. Henry M. Whitney, brother of ex-Secretary Whitney, was elected a director of the American Express company.

Schaefer Defeats Ives.

New York, Nov. 16.—The billiard match between Ives and Schaefer was continued and resulted in a victory for the latter, the score being 711 to 600.

TORTURED THIRTY YEARS.

His Suffering Ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith, of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and, although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

BEFORE THE CONGRESS

Church Orders Discussed by the Episcopalians.

Argument Waxed Warm During the Debate and Some Personalities Were Indulged In—Bishop Thompson Attacked by Mr. George Zabriskie—Opinions of the Members.

Boston, Nov. 16.—"Religious Orders in the Protestant Episcopal Church Today," was the topic before the Episcopal convention. The first speaker was Rev. Lucius Waterman, D. D., of Laconia, N. H. He defended the orders and said: "To-day we find many women and some men who say that they feel divintely called upon to separate themselves from society and enter a religious order. The revival of these orders is the call of the Holy Ghost. I fear, though that the members of these orders may not sufficiently realize the difficulties of their vocation and thus fall lamentably short of it. The people are inclined to treat every sister as a saint and every brother is beatified by his profession. I believe in sisterhoods," he continued, "I believe in more sisterhoods and more brotherhoods of the old Catholic church. I believe in deaconesses but not as they are now constituted. My sorrow is that those who claim to be friends of sisterhoods have organized a system that is antagonistic to the teaching of the church. No one has a right to take the vows of an order which is antagonistic to the loyalty he owes to his bishop. He should subject himself to obedience to no one that claims a higher authority than the authorities of the church."

The next speaker was the Right Rev. Hugh Miller Thompson, D. D., L.L. D., bishop of Mississippi. He gave a history of the origin of monastic orders and ridiculed the saints of the early Christian church. "I am humbly thankful," said he, "that saints are scarce now adays. The religious orders must shun every suggestion that they are better than other people." The first appointed speaker was Mr. George Zabriskie, president of the New York Church club, a leader in the St. Andrews brotherhood and one of the most prominent high church laymen in the country. Mr. Zabriskie said:

"It might be very diverting to hear a bishop of the church ridicule the men who from the purest and highest motives have devoted themselves to the service of God; but he was surprised to hear it." He announced himself as a firm and strong believer in orders. He admitted that there have been errors made by these men; but these errors came largely from a disregard of their own rules, which were the rules of the church.

Rev. Leverett Bradley of Philadelphia was the next appointed speaker. He objected to religious orders because there was a tendency among them to secrecy.. These orders grew out of a desire on the part of men to avoid the perils of intemperance and gluttony and they hoped by bringing the clergy and laymen under one roof, they would eat at a common table and be subjected to the same conditions of life. These conditions do not exist to-day and to show that there is a need for these orders, it must first be shown that they can do a greater good than is being done by Christian men and women outside of them.

Rev. William Wilkinson of Minneapolis spoke earnestly in behalf of orders. Mr. Wilkinson, it is interesting to note, had extraordinary experiences and did heroic work in the Minneapolis fires. Dr. W. Curdie of Baltimore spoke humorously in favor of an order of cranks with which the church is infested. Rev. Dr. John Fulton of Philadelphia said he could not conceive of any reason why a man who is called by God to follow any religious vocation should not obey the call. There is work enough for these men to do in the world and God should be trusted to see that they do their work aright.

Rev. Dr. McConnell of Philadelphia was the last speaker and said that he believed the introduction of orders into the Episcopal church would work ill, however good the intention of their promoters.

Fooled the Burglars.

Hudson, N. Y., Nov. 16.—At 2 o'clock in the morning the safe in the American Express office at Barrytown was blown open by burglars, wrecking the building. The safe was also used by the postmaster and the railroad ticket agent, as all the offices were in the same building. The safe, however, contained but one dollar at he time of the burglary.

Death of an Old General.

Milford, Mass., Nov. 16.—General Orison Underwood, who was perhaps the oldest militia general in the United States, is dead here, aged 90. He was commissioned brigadier general of the Massachusetts militia in 1841, was a prominent shoe manufacturer and Mason for years, and had held many political and other offices.

Not Entitled To Extra Pay.

Albany, Nov. 16.—Attorney General Hancock has written an opinion to the effect that a member of an election board cannot receive any extra compensation for filing the returns with the county clerk, unless the office of the county clerk is in a different town, when he shall receive four cents for each mile traveled.

A Boy's Lucky Fall.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Jacob Dannenfelsher, 19 years old, of 1951 Dean street, Brooklyn, fell six stories through an elevator shaft at 136 William street, yesterday and escaped without a broken bone. He complained, however, of pains in his abdomen, and may be injured internally.

Will Contest Holcomb's Election.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 16.—The republican state central committee has announced that they will contest the election of Judge Holcomb to the governorship. Fraud is charged.

Bell Telephone Stock Increased.

Boston, Nov. 16.—At the meeting of the directors of the Bell Telephone company, the capital stock of the concern was increased to $25,000,000.

COL. COIT DECLARED GUILTY.

He Must Answer for the Fayette County Volley.

Columbus, O., Nov. 16.—Coroner Edwards, of Fayette county, to-day reported his findings in the inquests upon the bodies of the persons who were killed by the volley of the militia defending the court house, where the rapist Dolby was confined. The coroner holds the shooting to have been unjustifiable and holds Sheriff Cook and Col. Coit, who was in command of the militia, responsible for the fatal results. The finding was not unexpected. The coroner is an uncle of one of the victims.

So far as can be learned no warrants had been issued for the arrest of the men, but Walsh, the father of one of the victims, will swear out warrants.

Col. Coit's friends protest against his being taken to Washington Court house, without a military escort, for fear of assassination. Gov. McKinley refuses to discuss the matter, but if it is made apparent that the lives of the officers will be endangered he will send a sufficient force for their protection. The feeling against the community is growing very strong in other parts of the state.

SMITH'S BRIDE ELOPED.

On Her Wedding Night She Disappeared with an Old Lover.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 16.—From Harrisville comes news of the most sensational elopement ever chronicled here. Miss Mollie Baker, a resident of Granville, became the bride of Addison R. Smith, of Harrisville. Among the interesting features was a corn husking. A very large crowd of young folks were invited, among them being Willie Wilcox, an operative in one of the mills at Graniteville. The guests remained until 11 o'clock. The bride went just outside of the doorway to bid some of them good night. Her attention was diverted to Wilcox, and nothing has been heard of her since. Young Wilcox is missing. Folks say that he and the bride were always in love.

Closed the Library.

Ansonia, Conn., Nov. 16.—The fine library erected by Miss Caroline Phelps Stokes of New York a year ago in memory of Anson G. Phelps, has been closed because, it is said, those for whom the structure was intended, have shown a lack of appreciation. The claim is made that the gift was hedged in with such restrictions that the local authorities did not accept it. The orders to close the building were received from New York on Friday last and those having it in charge have not the slightest idea what the next step will be. The building is of sandstone, beautiful in design, and cost about $100,000. Miss Stokes furnished it with 30,000 volumes.

Poisoned by Oysters.

Middletown, Conn., Nov. 16—The theory that the illness at Wesleyan was caused by oysters containing germs of malarial and typhoid fever is substantiated by the illness of several of the alumni who were at the banquet of one of the fraternities.

This theory is a new one as it was supposed that the salt water would kill all germs. Dr. Lindsley of the state board of health and Professors Whitney of Yale and Conn of Wesleyan are experimenting with the oysters obtained from the same locality, to discover typhoid or malarial bacilli. Their report is awaited with much curiosity.

Harvard Defeats Brown.

Boston, Nov. 16.—A substitute Harvard team defeated Brown on Soldiers' field by a score of 18 to 0. That Harvard should put a substitute team in the field after advertising the final home game and giving out that the regular 'varsity team would play, was a great injustice to the 5,000 people who turned out to see what Harvard could do against the team which Yale defeated only by 12 points. But a number of Yale football men were looking on and Captain Emmons did not wish to let them see the style of play which he expects to use against them next week.

An American's Sad Plight.

Tuxpan, Mexico, Nov. 16.—An American named F. J. Hanley, here for the purpose of buying a vanilla plantation near here, started out alone and nothing further was heard of him until he was brought back by two Mexicans who found him wandering. He is demented, and all his money which he had on his person when he left is gone. It is believed that he was drugged by the locco weed and robbed. From a card found in the pocket of the unfortunate man, it is learned that his home is in Pittsburg, Pa.

Three of the Crew Lost.

Quebec, Nov. 16.—Captain Joncas of the schooner Maria, wrecked at Trinity bay Sunday morning, is at Rimouski. He says his vessel went ashore on the rocks and it was with the utmost difficulty that he made his way to the mainland, a quarter of a mile distant. His arms and legs were badly bruised. Three of the crew lost their lives.

British Admiral Symonds Dead.

London, Nov. 16.—Sir Thomas Matthew Charles Symonds, admiral of the fleet, is dead. Admiral Symonds was the son of the late Rear Admiral Sir William Symonds, and was born in 1811. He served in the Black sea during the Crimean war and was captain of the warship Arethusa at the bombardment of Sebastopol.

Swindled Pennsylvanians.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—An investigation proves that the bucket shop men Frazier and Spahler, who are being sued by Joseph Vogler of this city, have swindled Pennsylvanians out of nearly $18,000.

Killed by a Falling Roof.

St. Louis, Nov. 16.—A band of schoolboys dug a cave on a vacant lot in the northern part of the city. Seven of them were buried and one killed by the roof caving in.

Maxwell at Cambridge.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell has gone to Cambridge, Mass., on account of the serious illness of his mother.

Another Dynamite Outrage.

Brussels, Nov. 16.—A bomb exploded in a low tavern in Houdeng-Aimeries, province of Hainaut. The building was shattered. No arrests have been made.

BALL FOR NEXT SEASON

Business at the National League Meeting.

Officers Re-elected and Money Donated to the Widow of Late "King" Kelly—Changes in the Rules and the Per Cent. System—The National Game's Future.

New York, Nov. 16.—The session of the baseball league lasted two hours. Harry Wright was elected chief of umpires and Henry Chadwick, the veteran baseball reporter was elected an honorary meber of the National league, which swells the list of honorary members to five, the other four being John B. Day, A. G. Spaulding, A. G. Mills and Mr. Howe. They have the privilege of the meetings but have no vote. One delegate from each of the twelve clubs, as individuals, together with N. E. Young and A. G. Spaulding, each subscribed $100, making a purse of $1,400 for the widow of the late M. J. Kelly, the famous baseball player who recently died in Boston.

The greater portion of the day was taken up in adjusting the percentage system. The big clubs did all in their power, but they could not make the small clubs yield to their 60 and 40 per cent. proposition. This scheme had to be finally abandoned and another tack taken. This was to strike out section 49 of the constitution, which required each club to put ten per cent. of its receipts of each game into a general fund that was divided among the clubs at the end of each month. This of course was a source of rich revenue to the small clubs and on this point the whole matter hinged.

The little clubs were well provided for by the above section and were carried along and virtually supported by the big clubs. They realized the fact that they would have to concede something to prevent hostilities, and they were finally persuaded to agree to do away with the system of paying ten per cent. A clause added to section 48 and a new clause was created to take the place of section 49, which reads as follows:

"Section 49. Out of the funds of the league now in the hands of the secretary there shall be created a sinking fund not to exceed $12,000, which shall be invested in government bonds. All other funds in the treasurer's hands shall be applied to current expenses." Section 54 was also amended.

A committee of three was appointed to receive and consider any amendments to the playing rules and submit the same to the league at its meeting in the spring. The committee consists of Ned Hanlon, F. DeH. Robinson and James A. Hart. Mr. N. E. Young was re-elected president of the league for a term of three years. J. T. Brush, Cincinnatti; J. A. Hart, Chicago; Chris von der Ahe, St. Louis; C. H. Byrne, Brooklyn; A. H. Soden, of Boston, and H. R. Von der Horst, Baltimore, were elected as board of directors. They represent three eastern and three western clubs, and were elected by ballot instead of by lot as heretofore.

The national board was re-elected, and consists of A. H. Soden, C. H. Byrne and President Young. A resolution was adopted giving the committee on playing rules instructions to report at the spring meeting such amendments as may be necessary to compel the umpire to enforce the playing rules, particularly those preventing noisy coaching and rowdy or disorderly conduct on the ball field. The meeting then adjourned.

BROUGHT BACK TO LIFE.

Prof. Houston Believes He Can Bring To Electrocuted Criminals.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—Prof. Edwin J. Houston, the eminent electrician, is a staunch opposer of the theory that persons scientifically electrocuted, with alternating currents of electricity, as provided for murderers in the state of New York, can be resuscitated by medical processes.

With Prof. A. E. Kennelly, he has conducted experiments with a view to disproving the claims of the French electrician, M. d'Alsondal, who advanced the resuscitating theory. In the presence of a number of the most prominent medical experts and specialists in Philadelphia, the professor electrocuted four large dogs in his laboratory. In three cases death was pronounced by all the gentlemen as positively instantaneous. The fourth animal was only subjected to a voltage of 700 for five seconds, and, although consciousness was instantly snuffed out, death did not ensue.

Hoffman Was Convicted.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 16.—In the case of John Hoffman of Billingsport, Gloucester county, N. J., who has been on trial in the federal court for two days for selling beer without paying the government license fee, the jury rendered a verdict of guilty but recommended Hoffman to the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced next Wednesday. The penalty is a fine of from $100 to $500, or imprisonment from six months to two years, or both.

Found a Great Oil Well.

Toledo, O., Nov. 16.—At Gibsonburg, twenty-five miles from here, the Kirkbridge brothers of this city bored in an oil well which so far has eclipsed all previous discoveries of petroleum in the Ohio and Pennsylvania fields, if not in the world. The well started off at the rate of 300 barrels an hour and has kept up the phenomenal record.

Saratoga's Gas Trust Broken.

Saratoga, N. Y., Nov. 16.—The Saratoga Gas and Electric Light company is in the hands of L B. Gleason, receiver, of No. 49 Wall street, New York.

Holt Committed Murder.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 16.—Henry Holt, a jealous negro shot his wife, inflicting slight wounds upon her limbs, and killed Hamp Anderson, a colored man.

Curran Candidate for Mayor.

Holyoke, Mass., Nov. 16.—The democratic caucuses held here selected Jas. J. Curran as their candidate for mayor.

THE MAN WHO DID NOT BELIEVE IN LUCK

[Copyright, 1894, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

[CONCLUDED.]

"I carried it in this way for some distance, because I was excited and didn't care how I carried it; but as I cooled, I began to reflect how ridiculous I must look. One or two boys evidently noticed the same thing. I stopped under a lamp post and tried to tie it up again. I had a bag and an umbrella with me at the same time, and the first thing I did was to drop the goose into the gutter, which is just what I might have expected to do, attempting to handle four separate articles and three yards of string with one pair of hands. I picked up about a quart of mud with that goose, and got the greater part of it over my hands and clothes and a fair quantity over the brown paper, and then it began to rain.

"I CARRIED IT THIS WAY."

"I bundled everything up into my arm and made for the nearest pub, where I thought I would ask for a piece more string, and make a neat job of it.

"The bar was crowded. I pushed my way to the counter and flung the goose down in front of me. The men nearest stopped talking to look at it; and a young fellow standing next to me said:

"'Well, you've killed it.' I dare say I did seem a bit excited.

"I had intended making another effort to sell it here but they were clearly not the right sort. I had a pint of ale—for I was feeling somewhat tired and hot—scraped as much of the mud off the bird as I could, made a fresh parcel of it and came out.

"Crossing the road a happy idea occurred to me. I thought I would raffle it. At once I set to work to find a house where there might seem to be a likely lot. It cost me three or four whiskies—for I felt I didn't want any more beer, which is a thing which easily upsets me—but at length I found just the crowd I wanted—a quiet, domestic looking set in a homely little place off the Goswell road.

"I explained my views to the landlord. He said he had no objection; he supposed I would stand drinks round afterwards. I said I should be delighted to do so, and showed him the bird.

"'It looks a bit poorly,' he said. He was a Devonshire man.

"'Oh, that's nothing,' I explained. 'I happened to drop it. That will all wash off.'

"'It smells a bit queer, too,' he said.

"'That's mud,' I answered; 'you know what London mud is. And a gentleman spilled some gin over it. You won't notice that when it's cooked.'

"'Well,' he replied, 'I don't think I'll take a hand myself; but if any other gent likes to, that's his affair.'

"Nobody seemed enthusiastic. I started it at sixpence; I took a ticket myself. The potman had a free chance for superintending the arrangements, and succeeded in inducing five other men, much against their will, to join us. I won it myself and paid out three and twopence for drinks. A solemn-looking individual who had been snoring in a corner suddenly woke up as I was going out and offered me sevenpence ha'penny for it—why sevenpence I have never been able to understand. He would have taken it away, I should never have seen it again, and my whole life might have been different. But fate has always been against me. I replied, with perhaps unnecessary hauteur, that I wasn't a destitute Xmas dinner fund, and walked out.

"It was getting late, and I had a long walk home to my lodgings. I was beginning to wish I had never seen the bird. I estimated its weight by this time to be thirty-six pounds.

"The idea occurred to me to sell it to a poulterer. I looked for a shop; I found one in Myddleton street. There wasn't a customer near it, but by the way the man was shouting you might have thought that he was doing all the trade of Clerkenwell. I took the goose out of the parcel and laid it on the shelf before him.

"'What's this?'

"'It's a goose,' I said; 'you can have it cheap.'

"He just seized the thing by the neck and flung it me. I dodged, and it caught the back of my head. You can have no idea, if you've never been hit on the head with a goose, how it hurts. I picked it up and hit him back with it; and a policeman came up with the usual: 'Now then, what's all this about?'

"I explained the facts. The poulterer stepped to the edge of the curb and apostrophized the universe generally.

"'Look at the shop,' he said; 'it's twenty minutes to twelve, and there's seven dozen geese hanging there that I'm willing to give away, and this fool asks me if I want to buy another.'

"I perceived then that my notion had been a foolish one, and I followed the policeman's advice, and went away quietly, taking the bird with me.

"Then I said to myself: 'I'll give it away. I'll pick out some poor deserving person, and make them a present of the d—d thing.' I passed a good many people, but no one who looked deserving enough. It may have been the time or it may have been the neighborhood, but those I met seemed to me to be unworthy of the bird. I offered it to a man in Judd street, who I thought appeared hungry. He turned out to be a drunken ruffian. I could not make him understand what I meant, and he followed me down the road abusing me at the top of his voice, until, turning a corner without knowing it, he plunged down Tavistock place, shouting after the wrong man. In the Euston road I stopped a half-starved child and pressed it upon her. She answered 'Not me!' and ran away. I heard her calling shrilly after me: 'Who stole the goose?'

"I dropped it in a dark part of Seymour street. A man picked it up and brought it after me. I was unequal to any more explanations or arguments. I gave him twopence and plodded on with it once more. The pubs were just closing, and I went into one for a final drink. As a matter of fact I had had enough already, being, as I am, unaccustomed to anything more than an occasional glass of beer. But I felt depressed, and I thought it might cheer me. I think I had gin, which is a thing I loathe.

"I meant to throw it over into Oakley square, but a policeman had his eye on me and followed me twice round the railings. In Golding road I sought to drop it down an area, but was frustrated in like manner. The whole night police of London seemed to have nothing else to do but prevent my getting rid of the goose.

"They appeared so anxious about it that I fancied they might like to have it. I went up to one in Camden street. I called him 'Bobby,' and asked him if he wanted a goose.

"'I'll tell you what I don't want,' he replied, severely; 'and that is none of your sauce.'

"He was very insulting, and I naturally answered him back. What actually passed I forget, but it ended in his announcing his intention of taking me in charge.

"I slipped out of his hand and bolted down King street. He blew his whistle and started after me. A man sprang out from a doorway in College street and tried to stop me. I tied him up with a butt in the stomach and cut through the Crescent, doubling back into the Camden road by Batt street.

"At the canal bridge I looked behind me and could see no one. I dropped the goose over the parapet and it fell with a splash into the water.

"Heaving a sigh of relief, I turned and crossed into Randolph street, and there a constable collared me. I was arguing with him when the first fool came up breathless. They told me I had better explain the matter to the inspector, and I thought so too.

"The inspector asked me why I had run away when the constable wanted to take me in charge. I replied that it was because I did not desire to spend my Xmas holidays in the lock-up, which he evidently regarded as a singularly weak argument. He asked me what I had thrown into the canal. I told him a goose. He asked me why I had thrown a goose into the canal. I told him because I was sick and tired of the animal.

"At this stage a sergeant came in to say that they had succeeded in picking up the parcel. They opened it on the inspector's table. It contained a dead baby.

"I pointed out to them that it wasn't my parcel, and that it wasn't my baby; but they hardly took the trouble to disguise the fact that they did not believe me.

"The inspector said it was too grave a case for bail, which, seeing that I did not know a soul in London, was somewhat immaterial. I got them to send a telegram to my young lady to say that I was unavoidably detained in town, and passed as quiet and uneventful a Xmas day and Boxing day as I ever wish to spend.

"In the end the evidence against me was held to be insufficient to justify a conviction, and I got off on the minor charge of drunk and disorderly. But I lost my situation and I lost my young lady, and I don't care if I never see a goose again."

We were nearing Liverpool street. He collected his luggage, and, taking up his hat, made an attempt to put it on his head. But in consequence of the swelling caused by the horseshoe it would not go anywhere near him; and he laid it sadly back upon the seat.

"No," he said, quietly; "I can't say that I believe very much in luck."

NOT THE SAME GIRL.

But She "Was Glad" Time Hadn't Made Any Change in Her.

The following anecdote has both a comical and pathetic side. What a long time fifty years is in the life of a human being! And how far apart, how unlike in tastes, feelings, opinions and habits, men and women can become, who in childhood slept under the same roof, attended the same school and dreamed of nothing but of being friends forever! A gentleman whose "courtly manners" were mentioned in all the newspapers when he died, a few years after this incident, fancied in his old age that he wished to see his boyhood friends, and most of all, the fair young girl, whose love long years before, he almost, but not quite, had dared to ask.

He forgot country manners and called at half-past eleven in the forenoon. He was asked to walk "right out into the kitchen," as there was no fire anywhere else.

His early admiration stood before him, in a worn calico dress, no collar and a wide and not faultlessly clean apron. Her half-combed grizzly hair was tucked under a rusty black lace cap, trimmed with faded purple ribbon. She had no teeth and a huge pair of silver-bowed spectacles were pushed up on her brown, wrinkled forehead.

Fifty-two years before they had parted with a kiss, and he had been intending to meet her with one and thus bridge the chasm of years. But he changed his mind when through his gold-bowed glasses he took in the picture before him.

Wiping her hands on her apron she gave him a hearty handshake and bade him "sit right down," adding that they were "killing hogs and trying up lard," but if he would "stay to dinner" she would have "a fire put in the front room."

Of course he declined the invitation, and for his own comfort, as well as for his convenience, he determined to make his call short. Still, he must say something complimentary before leaving, but what could he say?

Just then the lard boiled over, and with a shrill cry to her daughter to "come quick," the woman jumped up and caught hold of the kettle. The smoke and perfume were in themselves far from agreeable, but they were grateful to the caller, as they gave him a chance for the desired compliment.

"Your step has lost none of its elasticity since the evening we sauntered together along the banks of the R—," he said, "while this"—holding out his gold-headed cane—"is needed to support mine."

"Yes," answered the woman, "I'm as spry as a kitten, and I have thought ever since you've been here that I was glad enough time hadn't changed me as it has you."—Youth's Companion.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Elves Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1. Our price 45c and 90c.

CARS 30 FEET LONG.

Big 16-Wheelers to Run on the Trolley Line.

FANWOOD STILL DELIBERATES.

Much Discussion Among the Residents—Mr. Shepard Wants to Know Who Constitute the Company Anyway, and is Told All About It—Nothing Done But Talking.

At the Fanwood Township meeting last evening the trolley matter was immediately taken up. Clerk Hand read a letter from Town Counsel Codington advising the committee not to act hastily, but rather to proceed with care, as there were several clauses in the ordinance which should be changed to protect the township Discussion, however, was held on the matter. Mr. Shepard said he had concluded it was a matter we ought to consider well before acting on. He was in favor of giving the majority a benefit of an improvement even if a few were injured. It had been reported he was opposed to the trolley. He was sorry such report had been circulated, as he was not opposed to anything that would improve the town. The people, however, should know who they were dealing with.

Mr. Cook said he had the consent of a majority of the property owners on Forest avenue. He also had seen the majority of owners on Mountain avenue, but they could not decide for a week or two, and the people would rather give them the land to run through than to have them use Mountain avenue, as it was the intention to macadamize Mountain avenue for a driveway in the near future.

Mr. Stanbery said he would not oppose the company if they would would use Stanbery avenue, as that was in the rear of his property, but that he would oppose them passing in front of his house on Mountain avenue.

Mr. Shepard said he as one of the citizens of the town wanted to know who the Philadelphia and New York Traction Co were, as he had been unable to find out who they were.

Mr. Bethel arose for the company and said the committee and citizens had had since Oct. 2 to find out who they were, and he supposed the committee did know, as they had been spending money and advertising for bids for a long time, and the bids were only closed yesterday, Nov. 15 The president of the company was Frank McKown of Trenton, a prominent potterv manufacturer; vice-president, R. Duncan Harris, a prominent member of the Bar of New York; treasurer, J. H. Dwyer of Trenton; directors, J. L. Staddaman of Philadelphia, J. C. McNorton of Philadelphia, and I. H. Bain of Trenton. He said the engineers of the company had been consulted with in regard to the other routes asked for, but could accept no route but the Midway avenue one, as they could not turn corners very well with cars 30 feet long having 16 wheels. But the company would consider a loop or spur to be built to come through the village and run smaller cars from the main line. Quite a discussion was held when Mr. Bethel said the Committee had called the meeting for a final decision. Mr. Quereau bore him out in it, saying we had all left the room at the last meeting understanding that it would be decided this evening. W. R. Stanbery said if the company was granted the franchise they should be made to sign a contract to put a spur in through the village, and have it in operation within one year or forfeit their franchise. Mr. Kyte said the company had tried to get through the town other routes, but had failed. They came to him about coming through Midway avenue; he promised to do all he could to help them cover that route or any other route, as it was a benefit to this town He had gotten the company 70 per cent. of the property owners on Midway avenue, and as it was the only possible route he believed in granting them the franchise. He said the people had opposed the Central Railroad when they wanted to come nearer the village. They went further away to where the property owners did not oppose them. Consequently Fanwood had grown, and Scotch Plains had stood still. His interest in it was not the interest of the Central Land Improvement Company, but he had the interest of the town at heart, and would do anything to benefit it. Mr. Nichols asked why the company could buy property when they cross corners same as they have to do in the city. Mr. Bethel said the company could not bind itself down to a city ordinance as the company had refused the Bridgewater Township because they had presented to the company a city ordinance.

The chairman asked for a vote of the people of the meeting to express their opinion on whether the company should be allowed to run widway avenue alone. No one was in favor of it. A vote was taken on granting an ordinance for the Midway avenue route with a loop through the village, and a unanimous vote was given. Mr. Bethel said if the franchise was granted the company would have the road in operation by July 1, 1896, or the franchise would be void. On motion of Committeeman Miller, the trolley matter was dropped and the regular business was taken up The next meeting was set to be subject to the call of the chair, with a notice of five days. Mr. Cook says he will still work for the Forest avenue route.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The treasurer's report was accepted. All the bill were ordered paid, and the meeting was adjourned.

FITZ'S FIST FATAL.

IT KILLS CON RIORDAN IN A SYRACUSE THEATRE.

The Knockout Blow Said to Be a New One Fitzsimmons Was Practising for Corbett.

Syracuse, Nov. 17—Con Riordan, the Australian heavyweight boxer, was accidentally knocked out by Bob Fitzsimmons last night, and this morning at 3:30 he died from the effects the blow. Fitzsimmons is in jail, almost prostrated with grief. Bail has been refused. Riordan, who of late had been drinking heavily, was employed about three weeks ago as sparring partner to the middleweight champion of the world. They were old friends, having met first in Australia, where both hail from. The fatal blow is said to be a new one Fitzsimmons was practising for Corbett.

FAVORS FREE SCHOOLS.

But Protests Their Being Made a Burden Too Great to Bear—A Query About Salary-Raising.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:

As a taxpayer, I have always been in favor of free schools, and that the property of the county or city ought to pay for every childs education. But when I say that I mean that every child should have a chance free of charge for a common business education, but if parents wish their children to have a college or high branch education, let them send them to our country colleges and other high schools at their own expense. The masses do not demand this for their children. The common people that own little homes and have all they can do to live and keep their families together, are usually taxed higher in proportion than the rich and aristocracy of our town. They should not be taxed to school the children of the rich. No man, rich or poor, that will not work for the interests of the common people is not fit for a school trustee or any other office where taxation comes under their jurisdiction. Trustees should never step beyond the wish of the people. It seems that the old Board stepped hastily in the purchase of the Wadsworth property in not consulting with the people. They were only the custodians of the people, and when the masses manifested their displeasure, the Board seemed to manifest rather an oppressive spirit, as if they had the power in their own hands and should do as they pleased. This independence was the cause of the mayor and others to move in applying to the Legislature for protection. And still, if I rightly understand their action, they still persist in opposing the mayor and the people. Our school tax is our greatest item of taxation at the present time. To go on and increase our taxation in these hard times, when our road improvments has added largely, add now our sewage is upon us to be met bo taxation, besides, every citizen that is compelled to connect his sewage with the main pipes at his own expense will have about all he will feel that he can afford. Every citizen that desires to remain as such does not desire to become a bankrupt or bankrupt our city as our neighboring cities have done heretofore. Certainly, I have not seen any signs of retraction on the part of the Board further than they were compelled to do. I have no feeling against these men as men and citizens; but I think it best to protect ourselves, and to be safe, I would say change the Board and let the people will.

I think this Board has raised the salary of our school superintendent, as hard as the times have been. The wages of other public men have not been raised. Is he a favorite with the Board? TAXPAYER.

Epworth Sociable.

The regular monthly social of the Epworth League was given in Grace M. E Church last evening. The attendance was large, and the affair was a most enjoyable one.

The social pleasures of the evening were added to by Miss Lillian Epner, who spoke and sang; the Messrs. Downey, who played a duet on the zither and autoharp and Miss Edna French, who gave a recitation. Refreshments were then served.

Tonsorial Change.

Peter M. Decker of Springfield, Mass., has purchased the business of I. M. Morres, the barber in the Hotel Grenada Building. He took possession today and began at once to make arrangements to put in entirely new fixtures of the most improved style. Mr. Morres will go to New York to remain there a short time before starting on a trip to Europe with his father, who is an invalid.

NOW FOR THE WOMEN.

They Too Deserve a Christian Association.

BURNING WORDS BY DR. LEWIS.

He Points Out How Much Better Provision Is Made for the Stronger Sex Than for the Weaker—Society Ought to Fit Women for Higher Living Rather Than Have to Provide Poorhouses and Jails for Their Children.

The text of Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church this morning was John vi: 28. He reviewed the Y. M. C. A. work from its inception in London in 1844, and in Boston in 1851, down to the present time. He stated that the Jubilee Meeting in London last June showed 5,158 Associations, with 467,515 members, representing 26 different nations and 17 distinct languages.

The work in America began under the influence of George M. VanDerlip and D. S. Ford of The Watchman and Reflector, of Boston, in that city, the first association being organized Dec, 22, 1851, and the second in New York, a few weeks later. There are now nearly 1,400 Associations in America, with about 240,000 members. More than 36 000 men are acting on committees. The Associations own more than $12,000 000 in real-estate and buildings and over $3 000,000 in other property, making an aggregage of $15-000 000, plus An average of attendance at the rooms of more than 140,000 daily shows something of the value of the work.

Dr. Lewis showed that a work like that of the Y M. C. A could not have arisen during the centuries of Roman Catholic rule, since the genius of that faith demanded that all men be brought into the church, and did not seek to organize Christian work outside of the church.

The same spirit obtained among Protestants for a long time. Each denomination was so eager to strengthen and extend its own borders, that it took years of experience to lift Christians high enough to make such a movement as the Y. M. C. A. possible. It is the fruitage of broader and more Christlike conceptions which have marked the latter half of the present century.

Dr. Lewis then passed to the discussion of the demands which young women have a right to make upon Christianity for a similar work. The following are some of the points presented:

1. The value of the character and lives of young women is to the world as great as, if not greater than, that of young men. The mothers of a nation hold the balance of destiny in their hands. The majority of the children in the United States are born in homes to which the best of social, educational and religious advantages do not come. The Church, Society and the State, owe it to themselves and to the women of the land that all girls and young women be cared for and fitted for the duties and responsibilities which are sure to come to come to them.

2. There is, in all cities especially, a large percentage of young women and girls who are in a greater or less degree homeless and without the means or opportunities for that culture which is necessary for their good, and for the welfare of the world. They go to some sort of service, in factories, stores, offices, kitchens, etc., at an early age. A "servant's room", a cheerless "hall bed-room", or something less comfortable and uninviting, is their only retreat, after the day's work is done, or on days of leisure. In passing to strange towns or cities looking for places, in most cases nothing better than "Intelligence offices" are open to them. They are often subjected to greater privations, temptations and disappointments than men are. Something has been done in a few places to meet these demands—but not a tenth of what is demanded.

Institutions which shall combine the best elements of the Y. M. C. A., the W. C. T. U. the King's Daughters, the Whittier Home, the College Settlement, and the Industrial Christian Alliance, ought to exist in large numbers in every town and city, for the help, education, development and salvation of young women These should include social culture, intellectual training and industrial pursuits outside the fields in which the women are regularly employed. They should provide lectures on physical culture, and on all themes which fit young women for the duties of wife, mother, and woman.

These institutions should be wholly non-sectarian, with The Ten Commandments and The Sermon on the Mount, as the core of this religious atmosphere. All Christians and all non-Christians who love humanity and have its highest good at heart should unite in this work, and the State should give financial aid if necessary, on the largest philanthropic basis.

It is cheaper, and a thousand times better, to fit women to preside in pure and Christian homes, than it is to care for their children in jails, alms-houses and States prisons. The next twenty-five years should see as much done for young women as the past fifty years has done for men. Women should lead in this work. Thus may we "Work the works of God".

IRISH-AMERICANS.

Plainfield Hears Strong Eloquence for Erin's Sons.

HOW THEY SAVED OUR NATION.

Judge Wilhere Reminds Local Hibernians of the Great Deeds of Loyal Catholic Patriots Who Fought for the American Stars and Stripes—Holds That But for Catholic Help Our Nation Would Never Have Survived.

Publication of the eloquent speech of Judge Wilhere before the Plainfield Branch of Ancient Order of Hibernians Thursday night, which was quoted so liberally in The Daily Press last evening, is herewith completed by the publication of the following section, which was unavoidably crowded out yesterday:

Why do these people fail to remember that this country was discovered by a Catholic? Why, it is a matter that is accepted by most people as historical that old St. Brendin, 900 years before Columbus came to America, with his Irish sailors first discovered the continent of America. But, leaving that out, Columbus discovered America; and who was he, pray? He was a Catholic! The first man that leaped from a caravel of Columbus and trod upon American soil was Patrick Whelan, an Irish Catholic. Who was it that first blessed this new hemisphere that was discovered? Why, the old Spanish monk that sailed with Columbus. Talk about liberty in America! Who gave to America the first charter of civil and religious liberty? Lord Baltimore! While this state of affairs was in Maryland, the Puritans were persecuting all who were not of their faith. In those early days they were persecuting all who believed a little less or a little more than themselves. In those days, who gave to this country that great immortal charter of liberty, religious as well as political and civil liberty in the Catholic colony of Maryland? A representative of the Catholic church that always has stood for religious and civil and political liberty for all men. Why, I come from a town, my dear friends, the town of the immortal Declaration of Independence, in which that great charter of human rights was first proclaimed. By whom was it written? Charles Thompson was the secretary of the Continental Congress. Col. John Knox, an Irishman, first read from the steps of Independence Hall that immortal charter of liberty. Eleven Irishmen signed it. What man pledged his life, his property, his everything, and his sacred honor, to the cause of American liberty? The man who had most at stake from a human standpoint was Charles Carroll of Carrollton, an Irish Catholic. Franklin was sent over to the Court of France and he failed in his mission to secure the support of the French government for the struggling colonies. What was done by the Continental Congress then? Every person who reads history, the most prejudiced person, will say that without the aid of France we never could have achieved liberty here in America. What was done in those days? Why, Father John Karroll, a Jesuit priest, afterwards the first Archbishop of Baltimore, was commissioned by the Continental Congress, and through his intercession, and through his influence, the aid of France was secured. And the French armies and the French fleets were sent here and Yorktown became a certainty.

In later times (talk about loyalty of the Catholic clergy!) these A. P. A's were trying to tear down the flag. When Abraham Lincoln—God bless his soul!—a great, and a noble and a pure man he was—when Abraham Lincoln felt that the liberty of this country, and felt that the very existence of this government, was in danger, and he desired to appeal to France and to Spain and other Catholic powers in order that they might keep their hands off and in order that they should not do like England was doing, because England was giving aid and comfort to the Confederate forces and the Confederate government in order to disrupt this union and to destroy its free institutions, when Abraham Lincoln desired that the Catholic powers of the world should morally, if not materially, aid the forces of constitutional government, the forces which were battling for this flag, who did he send? He sent that other noble soul of blessed memory, Archbishop John Hughes of New York, as a representative of the United States government to the Catholic powers of Europe in 1861, in order to secure their moral, if not their material aid, so that liberty might live in this land.

These people talk, these people talk. Do they forget, do they forget, that the first general officer who fell in the war for American liberty was Gen. Richard Montgomery, born in County Tyrone, Ireland. Do they forget that if Gen. Washington was the father and organizer of the American Army, do they forget that Commodore Jack Barry, whose bones rest in St. Mary's churchyard in Philadelphia, was the first organizer of the American Navy? He was the man who, when hailed by the British sloop and asked who he was, said: "I am saucy Jack Barry, half Yankee and half Irishman: who the devil are you?" (Applause).

Do these men forget, do these men forget, that more than one-half of the army of liberty who fought and contended for that priceless jewel during the revolutionary time were Irish or of immediate Irish descent? Do they forget that when Washington was at Valley Forge in that dreadful Winter of 1778, when he appealed to Congress for supplies in order to keep together the last remnant of the army of liberty, do they forget that the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in Philadelphia contributed £103,500? I am a member of that society today. It is now known as the Hibernian Society for the Relief of Immigrants from Ireland. (Applause). Upon the records of that society today is the testimony of Gen. Washington himself, in which he says: Were it not for the timely relief afforded me by the society of the Friendly Sons of St Patrick of Philadelphia in 1778, were it not for the relief given me by that society, the last remnant of the army of liberty that was struggling for righteousness and justice in this land would have been disbanded as would the snow before the noonday sun. Washington himself, in accepting an honorary membership in that society puts these golden words upon the record there, that will remain as the testimony when all this spirit of bigotry and intolerance that is known as the A. P. A. spirit, when that has passed into oblivion, when it has been sunk into the grave from which I trust it never will be resurrected, because no American man, no intelligent American man, I care not at what altar he worships, no intelligent American man dare, in the face of history, stand up and asperse the courage, the loyalty and the devotion of the people of our race and creed to the Stars and Stripes and to the free institutions of our country. (Applause.)

I will not talk of Shields, of Perry, MacDonough, and of all that glorious galaxy of worthies, I will not talk of Jackson and of numerous men who preceded him in their struggle and in their fight for American liberty, but I want to recall this incident, because at an Ancient Order meeting it is a proper thing to recall and it is pardonable even if we take pride in it. In the early part of 1860 the present Prince of Wales visited this country. There was a regiment in New York known as the 69th N. Y. State Militia, whose colonel at that time was named Michael Corcoran. The Governor of the State issued an order as Commander in Chief of the militia that all of the regiments, especially in that section of New York, should turn out in parade in order to do honor to the distinguished guest who had visited them. Col. Corcoran, who had been driven from his country by the tyranny and oppression, degradation and misery that had come to them by reason of that government whose representative was there to be honored at that time—Col. Corcoran, in his Irish manhood, refused to turn his 69th Regiment in parade. The Colonel was suspended from his place and ordered for court martial. And just immediately succeeding that the gun was fired upon Fort Sumter. The fate of this nation was at stake. At that time there were two companies of State militia in New York city, one in Hoboken, only a few miles from this very spot, and one in Brooklyn, that because of the conduct of Col. Corcoran and the 69th Regiment, had passed resolutions that they would not admit to their ranks any foreigners and especially any Irish Catholics. They were prohibited from joining those companies. Fort Sumter was fired on on the 17th day of April, 1861. President Lincoln issued his proclamation calling upon the manhood of Americans to rally in defense of the nation and of their country, and of their homes and of their firesides—to rally in defense of the only republic which guaranteed free and equal rights to all men. These four companies that passed the resolution that they would not admit Irish Catholics to their ranks disbanded. They disbanded immediately; but two days, 48 hours, after that proclamation was issued—it was issued on the 17th day of April—and on the the 19th day of April, 1861, there were 1,800 Hibernians, every man a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, marched down Broadway, New York, carrying side by side the Stars and Stripes of their adopted and of their beloved country, and along with that the green flag representing the hopes and inspirations of the country of their birth. 1,800 Hibernians marched down Broadway in the 69th New York and not 100 of these ever came back to their homes or their families again. Look at the career of those men. But a few weeks ago I stood beside that consecrated spot called the bloody angle upon the field of Gettysburg. Come with me, you A. P. A's, to that spot which is called the high tide of rebellion. Come with me where rebellion was destroyed in this land and stand with me beside that, and then dare to raise your voices, dare to raise against the equal enjoyment of every man of life, liberty, civil, religious or otherwise, and the pursuit of happiness in this land. What do you find there? You find that at that bloody angle the 69th N. Y. Regiment, composed entirely of Irish Catholics, under command of Gen. St. Clair Milholland, stood there at the high tide of rebellion, and they beat back the enemy. When men were required, when bravery was required, when courage was required, you got men and bravery and courage, manly men who never turned their back upon a foe, in the Irish Catholic race in this land. (Applause)

I would, ladies and gentlemen, that I had the opportunity of continuing this, because, while I deplore the introduction of things of this character, I do believe and sincerely believe that the people through whose veins is running the blood of the Irish race and the people who believe in the old immortal and imperishable Church of Rome and in its doctrines, I believe that they ought to be educated so that the young men and the young women, the boys and the girls, the old men and the old women, should always feel that they of all people in this free land of America can hold up their heads and say, Yes, we have liberty here, but thank God it was through the blood and sacrifice of the people of my and of my creed more than through the blood and sacrifice of any other race and creed. I have a right to be here, and I am not going to apologize to any A. P. A. nor to any English Tory, no matter who he may be, for my being here, and for the liberties that I enjoy, because my fathers and the people of my race and creed won liberty in their blood and sacrifice for all people to enjoy in this country. This society, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, is an Irish-Catholic society, and a man who is not thoroughly imbued with the idea and principles of Irish liberty has no business in it and we do not want him in its ranks at all.

The Brownies Are Coming.

Thursday evening, Nov. 22, the first of a course of three entertainments will be given in Music Hall. It will consist of the Cecelia Bradford Trio, who are spoken of as first-class artists, and to hear them once is to long to hear them again. Dec. 10 or 11, "The Brownies in Fairyland" will be given. Their reputation is known in every household, and the mere announcement of "Brownies" creates a desire to see them. Jan. 15, the Kinder Symphony and Marshall P. Wilder will appear. This combination is a treat seldom offered to the public. All of these entertainments are given under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Course ticket will be $1.50, with reserved seat.

The "Midway" Programme.

"The Book of the Fair" is the title of the official programme of the great Y. M. C. A. fair and festival. It has been edited by a committee of which Mrs. B. J. Shreve is chairman, and it contains the full committee lists, descriptions, menus, and festival programmes, well spiced with wit. The closely packed pages of advertising speak well for the good will of Plainfield tradesmen and for the efficiency of Curtis M. Thorpe and his associates on the Advertising Committee. The book is now on the press. It has 48 pages, with a handsome card cover, tied with ribbons, and is pretty enough to be worth keeping "after the fair is over".

SLEVIN-DUMONT.

Brilliant Wedding in St. Mary's Church.

THREE REV'D FATHERS OFFICIATE.

The Bride Was Beautiful in White Chiffon and Orange Blossoms, and Was Attended by a Courtly Train—After a Southern Wedding Trip, Plainfield to Be Their Home.

St. Mary's Church was the scene this morning of a wedding in which Plainfield and Finderne were closely concerned. It was the marriage of Miss Mary Emma Dumont, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H Dumont of Finderne, to Andrew Gross Slevin of 330 Franklin place.

The ceremony was performed at 11 by Rev. Father Smyth, assisted by Rev. Fathers Murphy and Stafford. Miss St. Leger officiated at the organ very acceptably. Many friends of both families were present. The bridal party presented a very pretty appearance as they entered the church and took their places at the altar.

The bride was very becomingly gowned in white brocaded satin, trimmed with white chiffon and satin ribbon and adorned with orange blossoms. Her veil was of tulle. She wore a pearl pendant pin presented by the groom. Her bouquet was of white chrysanthemums. The maid of honor was Miss Ann W. Slevin, a sister of the groom. Her gown was of light blue satin and her bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

The bridemaids were attired in white mull and carried yellow chrysanthemums. They were the Misses Fannie and Natalie Dumont, sisters of the bride. The gifts of the bride to her maids were handsome rings.

The ushers were Charles Farrelly of Morristown, John Cullinam of Brooklyn, William Whitfield of Maplewood, and Frank Mellaby of New York. The pearl pins they wore were presents from the groom. The best man was John Slevin, brother of the groom, from whom he had received the gift of a diamond pin.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate relatives at the Hotel Albion, in the faultless style of that fashionable hostelry; and Hon. Samuel Conover, owner of the hotel, surrendered his parlors for a delightful reception. Mr. and Mrs. Slevin then started on a trip to the South, to return in a few weeks to reside on Putnam avenue. The bride received numerous costly presents.

The Latest

addition to the list of breakfast foods is Hecker's Old Homestead Flap-Jack flour. It is a blend of Wheat, Corn and Rice, and is prepared for immediate use by adding cold milk only. Directions on each package (2 lb and 4 lb sizes). Its delicate flavor and texture cause the cakes to fairly "melt in your mouth".

Now is the Time.

To do the right thing at the right time is wisdom: now is the time to have your eyes examined, that you may know whether or not your sight is impaired, and what kind of glasses, if any, you require. A call at Collier's, 103 Park avenue, will give you expert opinion on this point, without cost to you.

Something New.

Edward White has made a great improvement in his store. He has received six new glass front show cases, made in two sections, with the entire fronts all glass. It is a new idea in cases, and as usual Mr. White is the first to have them in Plainfield.

Evona No More.

Responding to the petition of Evona residents, the ever-obliging Jersey Central has put an end to Evona, which after 12 tonight will be officially known as Clinton Avenue, and the station so labeled.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Rev. Joseph Beers will officiate in the Holy Innocents Episcopal Church, Dunellen, tomorrow morning at 10. There will be Holy Communion after the sermon.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1. Our price 45c and 90c.

"But, uncle, I love my cousin!"

"Get out!"

"Give her to me!"

"Don't bother me!"

"It will be my death!"

"Nonsense! you'll console yourself with some other girl."

"Pray——"

"Never!" he cried: "never! Do you hear what I say!"

And as I looked at him beseechingly and with joined hands he went on:—

"A pretty husband you look like! without a sou, and dreaming of going into housekeeping! A nice mess I should make of it by giving you my daughter! It's no use you insisting. You know that when I have said 'No,' nothing under the sun can make me say 'Yes!'"

I ceased to make any further appeal. I knew my uncle—about as headstrong an old fellow as could be found in a day's search. I contented myself with giving went to a deep sigh, and then went on with the furbishing of a big, double-handed sword, rusty from point to hilt.

This memorable conversation took place, in fact, in the shop of my maternal uncle, a well-known dealer in antiquities and objets d'art, 53 Rue des Claquettes, at the sign of the "Maltese Cross"—a perfect museum of curiosities.

The walls were hung with Marseilles and old Rouen china, facing ancient cuirasses, sabers, and muskets and picture-frames; below these were ranged old cabinets, coffers of all sorts and statues of saints, one armed or one legged for the most part and dilapidated as to their gilding; then here and there, in glass cases hermetically closed and locked, there were knicknacks in infinite variety lachrymatories, tin urns, rings, precious stones, fragments of marble, bracelets, crosses, necklaces, medals and miniature ivory statuettes, the yellow tints of which in the sun took momentarily a flesh-like transparency.

Time out of mind the shop had belonged to the Cornubects. It passed regularly from father to son, and my uncle—his neighbors said—could not but be the possessor of a nice fortune. Held in esteem by all, a municipal councilor, impressed by the importance and gravity of his office, short, fat, highly choleric and headstrong, but at bottom not in the least degree an unkind sort of man—such was my uncle Cornubert, my only living male relative, who as soon as I left school had elevated me to the chief and only clerk and shopman of the "Maltese Cross."

But my uncle was not only a dealer in antiquities and a municipal councilor—he was yet more, and above all, the father of my cousin Rose, with whom I was naturally in love.

To come back to the point at which I digressed:

Without paying any attention to the sighs which exhaled from my bosom while scouring the rust from my long, two-handed sword, my uncle, magnifying glass in hand, was engaged in the examination of a lot of medals which he had purchased that morning. Suddenly he raised his head: five o'clock was striking.

"The council!" he cried.

When my uncle pronounced that august word it made a mouthful: for a pin he would have saluted it bareheaded. But this time after a moment's consideration, he tapped his forehead and added, in a tone of supreme relief:

"No, the sitting does not take place before to-morrow—and I am forgetting that I have to go to the railway station to get the consignment of which I was advised this morning."

Rising from his seat and laying down his glass he called out:

"Rose give me my cane and hat!"

Then, turning toward me, he added in a lowered tone and speaking very quickly:

"As to you—don't forget our conversation. If you think you can make me say yes, try!—but I don't think you'll succeed. Meanwhile not a word to Rose, or, by Saint Barthelemy, my patron of happy memory, I'll instantly kick you out of doors!"

At that moment Rose appeared with my uncle's cane and hat, which she handed to him. He kissed her on the forehead; then giving me a last but eloquent look, hurried from the shop.

I went on scouring my double-handed sword. Rose came quietly toward me.

"What is the matter with my father?" she asked, "he seems to be angry with you."

I looked at her—her eyes were so black, her look so kind, her mouth so rosy and her teeth so white that I told her all—my love, my suit to her father and his rough refusal. I could not help it—after all, it was his fault! He was not there: I determined to brave his anger. Besides, there is nobody like timid persons for displaying courage under certain circumstances.

My cousin said nothing; she only held down her eyes—while her cheeks were as red as those of cherries in May.

I checked myself.

"Are you angry with me?" I asked, tremblingly. "Are you angry with me Rose?"

She held out to me her hand. On that, my heart seething audacity, my head on fire, I cried:

"Rose—I swear it! I will be your husband!" And as she shook her head and looked at me sadly I added: "Oh! I well know that my uncle is self-willed, but I will be more self-willed still; and, since he must be forced to say 'yes,' I will force him to say it!"

"But how?" asked Rose.

Ah! how! That was exactly the difficulty. But no matter; I would find a way to surmount it!

At that moment a heavy step resounded in the street. Instinctively we moved away from each other; I returned to my double-handed sword, and Rose, to keep herself in countenance, set to dusting with a corner of her apron a little statue in its faded red velvet case.

My uncle entered. Surprised at finding us together, he stopped short and looked sharply at us from one to the other.

We each of us went on rubbing without raising our heads.

"Here, take this," said my uncle, handing me a bulky parcel from under his arm. "A splendid purchase, you'll see."

The subject did not interest me in the least.

I opened the parcel, and from the enveloping paper emerged a steel helmet—but not an ordinary helmet, oh, no!—a superb, a monumental morion, with gorget and pointed visor of strange form. The visor was raised, and I tried to discover what prevented it from being lowered.

"It will not go down—the hinges have got out of order," said my uncle; "but it's a superb piece, and when it has been thoroughly cleaned and touched up it will look well—that shall be your to-morrow's job."

"Very good, uncle," I murmured, not daring to raise my eyes to his.

That night on reaching my room, I at once went to bed. I was eager to be alone and able to think at my ease. Night brings counsel, it is said, and I had great need that the proverb should prove true. But, after lying awake for an hour without receiving any assistance, I fell off to sleep and till next morning did nothing but dream odd dreams.

The next day—ah, the next day!—I was no nearer. In vain, with clenched teeth, I scoured the immense helmet brought by my uncle the previous evening—scoured it with such fury as almost to break the iron: not an idea came to me. The helmet shone like a sun; my uncle sat smoking his pipe and watching me; but I could think of nothing, of no way of forcing him to give me his daughter.

At 3 o'clock Rose went into the country, whence she was not to return until dinner time, in the evening. On the threshold she could only make a sign to me with her hand; my uncle had not left us alone for a single instant. He was not easy in his mind: I could see that by his face. No doubt he had not forgotten our conversation of the previous evening.

I went on rubbing at my helmet.

"You have made it quite bright enough—put it down," said my uncle.

I put it down. The storm was gathering. I could not do better than allow it to blow over.

But suddenly, as if overtaken by a strange fancy, my uncle took up the great morion and turned and examined it on all sides.

"A handsome piece of armor, there is no doubt about it; but it must have weighed pretty heavily on its wearer's shoulders," he muttered; and, urged by I know not what demon, he clapped it on his head and latched the gorget piece about his neck.

Struck almost speechless, I watched what he was doing—thinking only how ugly he looked.

Suddenly there was a sharp sound—as if a spring had snapped—and—crack!—down fell the visor; and there was my uncle, with his head in an iron cage, gesticulating and swearing like a pagan.

I could contain myself no longer, and burst into a roar of laughter; for my uncle, stumpy, fat and rubicund, presented an irresistibly comic appearance.

Threateningly, he came toward me.

"The hinges!—the hinges, fool!" he yelled.

I could not see his face, but I felt that it was red to bursting.

"When you have done laughing, idiot!" he cried.

But the helmet swayed so oddly on his shoulders, his voice came from out it in such strange tones, that the more he gesticulated, the more he yelled and threatened me, the louder I laughed.

At that moment the clock of the Hotel de Ville, striking five, was heard.

"The municipal council!" murmured my uncle, in a stifled voice. "Quick! help me off with this beast of a machine! We'll settle our business afterward!"

But, suddenly likewise, an idea—a wild, extraordinary idea—came into my head; but then, whoever is madder than a lover? Besides, I had no choice of means.

"No!" I replied.

My uncle fell back two paces in terror—and again the enormous helmet wobbled on his shoulders.

"No," I repeated, firmly, "I'll not help you out unless you give me the hand of my cousin Rose!"

From the depths of the strangely elongated visor came, not an angry exclamation, but a veritable roar. I had "done it!"—I had burned my ships!

"If you do not consent to do what I ask of you," I added, "not only will I not help you off with your helmet, but I will call in all your neighbors and then go and find the municipal council!"

"You'll end your days on the scaffold!" cried my uncle.

"The hand of Rose!" I repeated. "You told me that it would only be by force that you would be made to say 'yes'—say it or I will call in the neighbors.

The clock was still striking: my uncle raised his arms as if to curse me.

"Decide at once," I cried, "somebody is coming!"

"Well, then—yes!" murmured my uncle. "But make haste!"

"On your word of honor?"

"On my word of honor!"

The visor gave way, the gorget piece also, and my uncle's head issued from durance, red as a poppy.

Just in time. The chemist at the corner, a colleague in the municipal council, entered the shop.

"Are you coming?" he asked; "they will be beginning the business without us."

"I'm coming," replied my uncle.

And without looking at me he took up his hat and cane and hurried out.

The next moment all my hopes had vanished. My uncle would surely not forgive me.

At dinner time I took my place at table on his right hand in low spirits, ate little and said nothing.

"It will come with the dessert," I thought.

Rose looked at me and I avoided meeting her eyes. As I had expected, the dessert over, my uncle lit his pipe, raised his head and then——

"Rose—come here!"

Rose went to him.

"Do you know what the fellow there asked me to do yesterday?"

I trembled like a leaf, and Rose did the same.

"To give him your hand," he added. "Do you love him?"

Rose cast down her eyes.

"Very well," continued my uncle, "on this side the case is complete. "Come here, you."

I approached him.

"Here I am, uncle," and, in a whisper, I added quickly: "Forgive me!"

He burst into a hearty laugh.

"Marry her, then, donkey—since you love her, and I give her to you."

"Ah!—uncle!"

"Ah!—dear papa!"

And Rose and I threw ourselves into his arms.

"Very good! very good!" he cried, wiping his eyes. "Be happy; that's all I ask."

And in turn he whispered in my ear:

"I should have given her to you all the same, you big goose; but—keep the story of the helmet between us two!"

I give you my word that I had never told it but to Rose, my dear little wife. And, if ever you pass along the Rue des Claquettes, No. 53, at the place of honor in the old shop, I'll show you my uncle's helmet, which we would never sell.—From the French of Ferdinand Beissier.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 18. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Some applications of the golden rule.—Luke vi, 27-38.

The "golden rule," as it is commonly called, was a principle of action that Christ laid down for man in the sermon on the mount. It is found in Math. vii, 12, "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do you even so to them." It is a good practical principle rather than a rule. It is reasonable and just that we should treat others as we want them to treat us. The common principle is to treat others as they treat us, but it is easy to see that this is a false principle and an unworthy one. But while this principle is a good practical one it is not the highest that should animate us in our dealings with one another. It is true it would result in great good if it were universally practiced, and yet it is not a particularly lofty principle of action. It is a good rule, but not the best motive. Christ did not mean it to be. This was his first sermon, and all he could do was to lay down some ethical rules, and the great teachings of distinctive Christianity were yet to follow. In Luke's account of the sermon on the mount the golden rule is not given in so many words, but some practical applications are given, and it is to these that our attention is directed.

1. "Love your enemies. Do good to them that hate you." This is the first application Luke makes of this principle, and we can see that it is not an easy thing to do. It is easy to love our friends, but not to love our enemies, and yet if we follow out the golden rule we would do it, for we want all men to love us, and should therefore love all men. We want all to do good to us, and therefore it follows that we should do good to all men.

2. "Bless them that curse you, and pray for them that despitefully use you" (verse 28). This is the same principle as to our words, the former being the golden rule in the heart. It is to bless those who curse us, to pray for the blessing of God upon them and to speak kindly of them to men, no matter how they may abuse us. It is harder to do than the other. There may be inward good feeling, but it is harder to carry it into practical effect, and yet it should be done. We should speak kindly both to God and man of all men.

3. The same rule is applied also to the actions of life and all of them. We are to be benevolent, to be merciful, to be slow in judging, to forgive and in all things to do as we would be done by. But there is only one way to do it, and that is to have the spirit of Christ in the heart. He alone did it perfectly, and to carry it out we must have the same spirit.

Bible Readings.—Deut. xv, 7-10; Prov. xxi, 26; xxv, 1; Ps. xxxvii, 26; Math. v, 39, 44-46; vii, 12; Luke xxiii, 34; Acts vii, 60; Rom. xii, 10-20; I Cor. iv, 12; xvi, 1; II Cor. ix, 1, 12; I Pet. i, 22; ii, 23.

Be Faithful to Your Pledge.

If you are disposed to regard your pledge as an Endeavorer as a burden, you should consider that you have pledged yourself to do only what you were constrained to acknowledge that you ought to do. If there is any question in your mind touching your duty as it is set forth in the pledge, that should have been considered and settled before you assumed the obligations of an Endeavorer. Such a question might be a reason for withdrawing from the society, but cannot justify your neglect while you remain an Endeavorer. As a Christian you can consistently remain an Endeavorer only while you are faithful to your pledge.—Selected.

Endeavor Work In Manitoba.

The Methodist Endeavorers of Portage la Prairie, Manitoba, have undertaken a work which will make their church a most formidable rival of all those places of evil resort which are open every night of the week. They intend to add to the Sunday school library many excellent and standard books and keep it open during the evenings of the week, members of the Sunday school and the Christian Endeavor society always being present to welcome callers and make them feel at home.

In the Lord's Service.

Here I am, Lord. Send me, send me to the ends of the earth; send me to the rough and savage pagans of the wilderness; send me from all that is called comfort in the earth; send me even to death itself, if it be but in Thy service and to promote Thy kingdom.—David Brainerd.

PASKOLA VINDICATED.

Gross Ignorance Exposed.

ITS VALUE AND HEALTHFULNESS FULLY ESTABLISHED.

The results obtained by certain professed chemists in an attempt to analyze Paskola are so far from the truth that we have every reason to believe the perpetrators to be in the employ of rival manufacturers, (possibly people interested in preparations of cod liver oil), whose business has been injured by the merited popularity of Paskola. This suspicion is strengthened by the fact that the unthruthful reports as to the composition of Paskola have been widely circulated through the mails and otherwise. Among the things, the so-called "chemists" have stated is that Paskola was nothing but glucose and hydrochloric acid, the ridiculousness of which assertion will be made clear by the following experiment:

Take two pint bottles and in one place a tablespoonful of glucose and in the other a like quantity of Paskola; fill them with water shake thoroughly and add to each forty drops of muriatic or hydrochloric acid, in order to imitate the acidity of the natural gastric juice. Having previously finely minced a quantity of rare or raw lean beef, chicken, the white of hard boiled eggs or similar foods; put into each bottle one ounce. Immerse the bottles in warm water and carefully maintain the contents at a temperature of 100 to 105 degrees Fahrenheit, frequently shaking in order to thoroughly expose the food to the action of the solution.

In the course of a very short time the contents of the bottle containing Paskola will be seen to undergo a change, and in two or three hours the food will have become entirely dissolved or digested; wherers the contents of the other bottle containing the glucose and acid will show no change beyond a slight difference in appearance.

If you have neither the facilities nor the inclination to make the test for yourself, we have no doubt that your druggist will be glad to try the experiment. The tubes herewith show the results of a test made in our own laboratory, the cuts being from a photograph. No. 1 contained glucose and No. 2 Paskola. What are we to conclude? One of two things: either that the so-called "chemists" are ignorant or dishonest.

Glucose has no digestive properties. This is a well-known fact, whereas Paskola is giving relief to thousands of dyspeptics, a truth attested by the unsolicited testimonials that pour in upon us. The presence of digestive ferments in Paskola cannot be determined by chemical test. No one has ever seen digestive ferments in a pure form, and the only way to determine their presence is by observing the effects which they produce upon food. This is a fact recognized by every authority, and will be found stated in Foster's Physiology and other standard works.

Another thing which these ignorant and jealous rivals have said about Paskola, is that inasmuch as its basis is predigested starch, it is calculated to encourage diabetes.

We cannot better answer this charge than by quoting a paragraph from a report made to Mayor Gilroy, of New York, by Dr. Cyrus Edson, Commissioner of Health for the City of New York, and for the State of New York.

"Pre-digested starch is starch in the exact condition that we find it prepared by the digestive organs for assimilation. It is preeminently a fat-forming, heat-producing food. Under a diet of pre-digested starch or glucose, a man can perform more muscular work than under any other single article of food. Pre-digested starch not only is not injurious, but it is an essential article of food, without which in some form, man cannot enjoy life."

This letter from Dr. Edson was written in answer to an inquiry from the Mayor as to whether or not pre-digested starch was healthful.

Paskola contains a special form of pre-digested starch as well as digestive ferments, and is not alone a fattening food but it aids the digestion of other foods in the stomach, just as you may see in the above experiment. The tired, feeble stomach of the dyspeptic is too week to do its duty. It needs a little help; this help Paskola gives. Its use is at once followed by a sense of well being, strength, vigor and courage. The appetite improves and the sufferer can eat with comfort where before distress followed every meal. Paskola corrects emanciation and the pale, thin sufferers rapidly gain in weight under its use. Consumptives will experience a thousand times more benefit from it than from the use of disagreeable, nauseating cod liver oil, which often does more harm than good. Consumption need not prove fatal, if we can arrest the loss of flesh, for its victims virtually die of starvation.

Send for our interesting pamphlet, and learn about this wonderful preparation. We will gladly mail you a copy free, upon application. The Pre-Digested Food Co., 30 Read street, New York.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

THE WOMAN MASON.

MISS ST. LEGER'S CURIOSITY LED TO HER INITIATION IN THE ORDER.

She Was Caught Peeping, and Had to Choose Between Death and Taking the Fellowcraft Degrees. This Happened in 1735 in England.

There is a legend that tells about the bride who merrily kissed her finger at her husband, after the marriage feast, and then in a spirit of pure fun hid herself in an old chest, hoping that he would find her. A spring lock, however, snapped and fastened her down forever. Long years after the chest was forced open and a skeleton with a betrothal ring on its finger dropped out.

At the Masonic Temple, at the corner of Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue, the officers having found a chest, old and dusty and full of—papers, not bones. They shook the old chest, as the finders of the chest in which reposed the bones of Genevra had shaken it, and a picture dropped out, partly wrapped about with an old manuscript.

The picture, a crude thing, of nearly cabinet size, was the likeness of a woman, dressed after the Elizabethan style, with one finger of an exquisitely rounded arm and hand resting on a Masonic emblem. The face represented a woman, not old, but long past her girlhood days, and told no tale save that she wore the apron of the Masonic order. That was strange enough and set the finders to speculating. Then they remembered that in the hall was the large picture of a woman of similar appearance, about which there was a legend reciting that she was the only woman who had ever been admitted to the order (Mary Ellen Lease, notwithstanding), and that she had reached the second degree.

The picture was that of the Hon. Mrs. Aldworth, the daughter of the Right Hon. Arthur St. Leger, the first Viscount Doneraile, who before her marriage, when she was the Hon. Elizabeth St. Leger, had by a happy, but dangerous coup d'etat, not only gained the second degree of masonry, but a wealthy and devoted husband as well.

Part of the story reads like a transplanted and reversed copy of the story of Captain Smith and Pocahontas. This lithesome maiden who had so wantonly and thoughtlessly invaded the sacred precincts and listened to the sacred secrets was near losing her head for her fun, when the Hon. Mr. Aldworth, who had been detailed to act as one of her guards in an adjoining room, while the brethren discussed the feasibility of cutting off her beautiful but foolish head, became so enamored of her charms and so sorry for her plight that he rushed back to the council, whom he could overhear in their discussion, and pleaded so eloquently for her that they admitted her to fellowcraft.

The manuscript referred to, which details the interesting story, begins thus:

"This lady received—about the year 1735—the first and second degrees of Freemasonry, in Lodge No. 44, at Doneraile, in Ireland. The circumstances connected with this singular initiation were first given publicity in 1807, by Spencer, the celebrated Masonic bibliopole in London. It may be observed before proceeding that the authenticity of all the circumstances was confirmed to Spencer's satisfaction by an eye witness to the transaction."

The story, after reciting that the Masons met occasionally at the house of Miss St. Leger's father, tells how she made a hole in the wall through which she witnessed the work of the first two degrees. She was discovered by the tiler, who, the manuscript says, was soon joined by the members of the lodge present, and luckily, for it is asserted, that had it not been for the prompt appearance of her brother, Lord Doneraile, and his friend, the Hon. Richard Aldworth, her life would have fallen a sacrifice to what was then esteemed a crime. The first care of his Lordship was to resuscitate the unfortunate lady, who had fainted, without alarming the house, and endeavor to get from her an explanation of what had occurred. Having done so, many of the members being furious at the transaction, she was placed under guard of the tiler and another member, the Hon. Richard Aldworth, in the room where she was found.

The members reassembled, and deliberated as to what, under the circumstances, was best to be done. For over two long hours she could hear the angry discussion, and her death deliberately proposed and seconded, but the Hon. Richard Aldworth, impressed by her charms and her sorrow, joined the assembly and pleaded for her life.

At length his good sense succeeding in calming, in some measure, the angry feelings of those who clamored for her life, and so, after much had been said, and many things proposed, it was resolved to give her the option of submitting to the Masonic ordeal, to the extent she had witnessed (Fellowcraft), and if she refused, the brethren were again to consult.

Being waited upon to decide, Miss St. Leger, exhausted and terrified by the storminess of the debate, which she could not avoid partially hearing, and yet, notwithstanding all, with a secret pleasure, gladly and unhesitatingly accepted the offer. She was accordingly initiated.

Mrs. Aldworth, or, as she was appropriately called, Sister Aldworth, lived many years after, but does not seem ever to have forgotten the lessons of charity and fraternal love which she received at her unexpected initiation into the mystic doctrines of the order. Placed as she was by her marriage with Mr. Aldworth at the head of a very large fortune, the poor in general and the Masonic poor in particular had good reason to record her numerous and bountiful acts of kindness.—N. Y. Herald.

Many Roads to Heaven.

"Why should we quarrel about affairs of the world to come?" asked Henry Watterson. "I cannot rid myself of the belief that there are many roads to Heaven." He said he was born a Presbyterian, baptized a Catholic, educated an Episcopalian and married in the Church of the Disciples. He came very near being a doctor of divinity. For the life of me," he continued, "I have never had it in my heart to hate any man because he chose to worship God according to his conscience."

"Oh, why should'st thou be dead when common men
Are busy with their trivial affairs,
Having and holding? Why, when thou had'st read
Nature's mysterious manuscript, and then
Wast ready to reveal the truth it bears,
Why art though silent? Why should'st thou be dead?" —Longfellow.

CROWNS COME HIGH.

One Has $8,000,000 Worth of Jewels. Some of the Gems Used.

Regal crowns are an expensive luxury for the people of those backward countries which still prefer to have kings to presidents. One of the most costly crowns in existence is that of the King of Portugal. The jewels which ornament it are valued at $8,000,000. The crown which the Czar of Russia wears on special occasions is also one of the most precious in the world. The cross which surmounts the crown is composed of five magnificent diamonds resting on a large uncut but polished ruby. The small crown of the Czarina contains, according to authorities, the finest stones ever strung.

The crown of the Queen of England, which is valued at $1,800,000, contains a great ruby, a large sapphire, sixteen small sapphires, eight emeralds, four small rubies, 1,360 brilliants, 1,273 rose diamonds, four pear-formed pearls and 269 of other shapes. In his State clothes, including the crown, the Sultan of Johore wears diamonds worth $12,000,000. His collar, his epaulets, his girdle and his cuffs sparkle with the precious stones. His bracelets are of massive gold, and his fingers are covered with rings which are almost priceless. The handle and the blade of his sword are covered with precious stones.

The most costly insignia of princely dignity, however, are those of the Sultan, or Maharajah, of Baroda, in India. The chief ornament is a necklace of five strings containing 500 diamonds, some of which are as large as hazel nuts. The upper and lower rows consist of emeralds of the same size.

THIS IS IMPORTED.

A Broadcloth Costume Trimmed with Chiffon and Lace.

Though the roughly woven fabrics are all the rage this season, broadcloth is receiving the usual amount of patronage. Some years ago the gown of broadcloth was made severely plain. This year it is trimmed as lavishly as any silk gown.

A winter costume just imported is fashioned of heliotrope lightweight broadcloth. Around the bottom of the organ-pipe skirt, is a trimming of guipure, with the design outlined in jet. The bodice is most elaborate. It is made of the broadcloth, with square-shaped revers of the jetted guipure and a vest of pale blue chiffon. The chiffon is arranged like a double jabot and falls from a yoke on mauve colored velvet.—New York World.

FIT FOR A PRINCESS.

This Bodice Requires Twenty-Five Yards of Chiffon.

It took twenty-five yards of chiffon to make it and yet it was only a bodice after all. But such a bodice! It was more fit for a fairy princess than for a debutante. The chiffon was a delicate pink in color and laid in the finest plaits. An exquisite pearl and silver passementerie formed a deep corselet. The neck was cut square and outlined by a soft fold of the chiffon, here and there caught in wee rosettes.

Nothing could be more graceful than the short sleeve. It was composed of fold after fold of chiffon, one fold peeping out from beneath the other. At the top of the sleeve was a large bow of pink satin ribbon with floating ends. The little bodice fastened invisibly at the back.—New York World.

Ready to Accommodate Richard.

Dirt Pleased Him.

Walter had been on the ocean a day and night, and when land appeared, he said: "Oh, mamma, I am so pleased to see dirt again."

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

SOME SUGGESTIONS THAT IT DON'T COST A CENT TO FOLLOW.

Various Ways in which the Hair Can be Worn, all Tending to Beautify the Owner. Hit and Miss Notes About Costumes and Hats. Seasonable Hints.

The present fashions in coiffures are so varied that almost any style is admissable, providing the hair is first waved in deep, soft waves all around the head, and parted with great care down the front. The one point to be considered in making a selection from the various modes is the shape of the head and the contour of the face. That one which is most becoming is most stylish, according to the methods of the Parisians, who first arrange their hair becomingly and then make it stylish by wearing it so.

American women are accused of not giving enough study and attention to the arrangement of their hair. Instead of making the most of it as an attractive setting especially suited to the face it frames, we twist it into any inartistic shape which happens to be the prevailing mode, without sufficient regard for outline and becoming effect. However, we are so far ahead of English women in all matters pertaining to the hair, we can graciously admit the justice of the criticism.

The ideal coiffure is that which preserves a good outline of the head, with just so much ornament as will serve to best display the hair and bring out the beauty of the face. A woman with a large, prominent nose should never draw her hair tightly back into a knob half way between her neck and the crown of her head, and little women with short necks should never wear the hair low at the back. Any manner of hair dressing which hides the neck is not generally becoming, except to young girls. The modern fashion of parting the hair is an old one revived with the coming in of balloon sleeves and full skirts, and it gives such an old-time appearance to some faces that there is a striking resemblance to the portraits of their great-grandmothers. The fad for side combs of every description, jewelled and plain, is a growing one, and when they are worn close to the face to confine the bang at either side the wearer looks as if she had really stepped out of the picture.

These little combs are worn by young and old. Tucked in anywhere, they are becoming or useful. Tortoise shell, gold and jewelled combs which stand high at the back are in great demand, in fact the coiffure is not quite finished without some ornament. Twists of pearls, flowers, feathers and aigrettes are worn in the hair with evening dresses. The Greek and Empire styles of dressing the hair with Parisian modifications are much worn, and many adopt the 1830 style of full bandeaux over the ears. This is especially becoming to a pretty, oval face which is exactly the right proportions. The hair must be coaxed into fluffy waves with the aid of a crimping iron, and carried loosely back into a soft curly knot, which may be put at any point on the head where it is most becoming.

Silk gowns are the reigning favorites for afternoon dress and chine silks are still the mode, adapted in color for daily wear in winter. A shot blue and black with horizontal stripes or pink roses looks as if it might have been handed down from the past generation.

Evening silks in the style of thirty years ago are the height of modern fashion. A plain color, yellow, rose, or blue, is covered in the weaving with a delicate pattern which resembles honeycomb, and over this are chine flowers.

For real novelties millinery takes the lead. Hats are enormous, and a shape called the "jam pot" crown, which rises from a broad brim, has reappeared. This is encircled by a band of rhine stones or cut steel in a key pattern, and satin rosettes, roses and violets are the trimming. Large toreador hats made of gathered velvet and fully trimmed are still worn, and large velvet hats, with double box plaited brims, trimmed with ospreys and huge satin bows, and three-cornered hats, turned up with narrow fur edges, are among the creations. Brown, black, and green are the favorite colors for velvet hats, and when the brim is covered plain the under side is often of a delicate color, like rose pink or blue. Velvet bows are always large, with loops standing alone, and the one effect which seems most desired is width.

Bonnets of emerald green velvet, trimmed with jet and sable, are the height of fashion, and those who would give the latest touch to their evening bonnet must wear it well back on the head, but not far enough to give it the appearance of falling off.

Chenille, with strands of satin threaded through it, forms a pretty braid of which hats and bonnets are made, and silk beaver hats are in evidence as the season approaches.

Haircloth bustles are advised by some dressmakers, to give the fashionable set-out to the dress in the back. And a flexible whalebone called the "circlet" is used in the bottom of skirts to accentuate the width.—N. Y. Sun.

CITY EDITION, 4 O'CLOCK.

TAXES TOO HIGH NOW.

Already Over 80 Per Cent of the Entire Budget, Yet the Tendency of the Present School Board Policy is to Increase Them Unnecessarily.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—The audacity of some of the trustees of our Public Schools (if correctly reported) in seeking not only to defy public opinion but by their "ipsedixit" declare the law passed last Winter at Trenton unconstitutional, ignoring all these and fastening on an already overburdened taxpayer a mansion, public school, or university, or whatever it may be called, and which by their own estimates may reach $125 000, and which means $150,000 or $160,000, is equaled only by that of the immortal Tweed in the zenith of his power, when he impudently demanded of the citizens of New York, "What are you going to do about it?" It is simply outrageous and the citizens of this goodly city should know exactly where they stand.

In 1887, only seven years since, our total valuation was say $5,000 000, yielding $93 500, and tax rate $1 80. Even for this rate an excuse was found in the low rates of valuation.

Some two or three years since our assessor increased this about 50 per cent, so that the tax rate could be reduced. But what do we have, Mr. Editor? It is true valuation has been increased, giving us for 1894 over $7,000,000, and yielding over $160,000, while the tax rate is $2.22, a total aggregate of over 60 per cent while the tax rate on this enormous increase of assessment is also increased about 25 per cent.

The original intent of the School Law, Mr. Editor, was that a State tax should be levied sufficiently large to give every child in the State a good common school education, leaving it to the parents to prosecute this further, at their own expense. But what do we have in 1894? Of this very large sum of $160,000 our State school tax is $19,000, large enough, one would think, to run the schools. But our very respectable Board of Trustees, not satisfied with this, demand in addition the modest sum of $39 000, making a total of $58,386 for school purposes, or say 83 per cent. of our total tax. This, please bear in mind, is independent of the enormous additional tax that would be imposed upon us by this new university.

Have our long-suffering citizens carefully studied these facts? Verily our worthy trustees have lost their heads.

And now, Mr. Editor, what is our remedy at this particular junction? Undoubtedly to relegate some of these worthy men back as private citizens, and putting in their place some resident taxpayer, and who spends his time in Plainfield, who is unflinchingly opposed to any increase of taxation until the sewerage work is finally completed and we can ascertain exactly where we stand. How can this be done? Simply by cutting loose from party lines and selecting independent men. To this end I would suggest a public meeting of our citizens and the continued agitation of this subject. It occurs to me it is a matter of total indifference to the State of New Jersey, and still less to the National Government, as to whether the Republicans or Democrats or any political party is in power in Plainfield. Deborah Layton, wife of John Layton, died at her home in Brooklyn Monday. Her remains were buried at Madison, Morris County, Thursday, beside her mother, father, and other kindred. Mr. Layton is a brother of Josiah Layton of Plainfield.

A very enjoyable surprise party marked the birthday anniversary of Chas. Farlee at his home on Jackson avenue last evening. The surprise was complete. A supper was served and the guests passed the evening very pleasantly.

Alexander Lusardi and his bride, nee Miss Tillie Zazzilli, sailed at 5 this morning for Europe. A large number of the Italian residents of Plainfield went last evening to Newark where the marriage of Wednesday night was very pleasantly celebrated.

The death is announced in this issue of Rev. Joseph Stockbridge, oldest chaplain in the U. S. Navy. He lived here many years, and was an old friend of Mrs. David C. Green of 916 Park avenue, where the funeral will be held. He leaves a wife and son in Philadelphia. Five of his children were buried in Hillside.

M. J. Coyne of Watchung avenue was much surprised last evening on returning from his store to find his home filled with friends who had unexpectedly gathered for a social time. Naylor furnished music and dancing was continued until 3:30 this morning. Refreshments were partaken of and the guests made up a very merry company.

—The Woman's Relief Corps was inspected last evening by Mrs. Lacey of Rahway, who came to Plainfield in company with Mrs. Rohl and Miss Jennie B. Atwood of Aaron Wilkes Corps, Trenton. Supper was served after a very satisfactory transaction of business.

—The decorations at today's wedding were simple but elegant. The altar was beautifully trimmed with choice foliage, plants and yellow chrysanthemums, it being a chrysanthemum wedding. The bride carried a bouquet of the choice new chrysanthemums—the Coloseum — most tastefully arranged in a unique manner. The hundred lighted candles on the altar shed a mellow light over all. The effect was very beautiful. The floral decorations were as usual under the efficient direction of Miss A. E. Lincoln, the Park Avenue florist.

Local Physicians Puzzled.

South Petersburg, N. Y.—For two months Melvin Church of this town was confined to his bed, suffering with lumbago, rheumatism, and kidney complaint. The regular treatment was prescribed by his physicians without benefit. Dr David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was then used with the most satisfactory results.

In speaking about his case, Mr. Church said: "After taking about two thirds of a bottle, I began to get relief, and when I had taken three bottles I was well and strong."

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy will build up a person suffering from debility quicker and better than any preparation known. For dyspepsia, biliousness, liver complaint, neuralgia and rheumatism, it has again and again succeeded where everything else has failed.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—In reference to the school question, Do you know that the petition sent to Trenton was signed mostly by people who were childless, and had no use for schools, either public or private, or else their children had had the benefit of the "superior" education and graduated, and others sent their children to private schools. And why should not the children have this superior education? It is necessary in these progressive times What would you do, have them finish with the Grammar School? That would mean, children eleven, twelve and thirteen years old would have finished school. What of our future citizens, if such comes to pass? Now, Plainfield can hold up her head and boast of her city, her schools, but if this "superior" education is to be done away with, then she can bow her head in shame! It was a cruel wrong to the city, to have hampered the trustees and stopped the building of a high school. If the building was to have been a primary or grammar school, I could have understood the opposition to have had it built on the Wadsworth property, but a high school would not have been any more detrimental to the neighborhood than is the Seminary. Any man who votes against a liberal education, should not hold public office. Give us for our next mayor one who has the interest of the public at heart, and what is of more interest or important than education? Long may the present Board of Education reign! A WOMAN

[Our feminine friend misunderstands the case. No check has been put, none will be put, in the way of continuing a thorough high-school education in Plainfield at public expense. Had Plainfield the Capitol for a schoolhouse, the high-school education given therein would be no better than the high school education today afforded in the Plainfield Stillman building. The School Board question may be likened to a housewife making a cake. She has the flour, the eggs, the sugar, and the raisins, but only a tin pan to bake and serve it in. She has seen other people exhibit their cake on silver, adorned with paper lace and frosting. She covets the frills. The cake the School Board was baking was the education of the young. They sought to transplant it to a handsomer dish. The people felt they couldn't afford the trimmings, and so vetoed the frosting and the paper lace. The amount of raisins has not been lessened, and the proof is in the eating, not the looks.]

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

Great Underwear Sale!

Having recently purchased an entire stock of Ladies' and Children's Underwear of a Plainfield firm, we are prepared to offer you the GREATEST BARGAINS ever offered in this line, and for one week only we will close out this stock in connection with our own for 25 per cent. lower than any house in the city can buy them for. This is a bonafide, not a catch-penny sale.

25 dozen ladies' red flannel vests, all sizes.....75c, worth $1.35
18 dozen children's " " " .....50c, worth 75c
20 " " white merino vests, all sizes.....25c, worth 50c

We have the pants to match at the same prices.

Toys! Toys! Toys!

We always take pleasure in pleasing the little ones, and have purchased every Toy that has been manufactured. We have them both for boys and girls and nothing would make them happier than a useful Toy. It will be to your interest to price our goods when in our store.

Housefurnishing Goods.

We are happy to say that this department has proved us a grand success. The cause of the success was our LOW PRICES. For this week we offer you the following specials. Porcelain bowl and pitcher 65 and 75c, worth 90c and $1 10; milk pails 10 qt, 27c, worth 40c; 12 qt 33c, worth 45c; a pretty line of bird cages from $1.35 to $1.98. These prices are 20 per cent. lower than any other house. Just received a large and pretty assortment of Glassware suitable for the Holidays.

Coats. Coats.

We can truthfully say that we have sold more coats in the past week than any other house in the city. Why did we do it? Very easy answered—Our styles, prices and workmanship can not be excelled, and the public know a good thing when they see it. We can always save you money if you intend buying a Coat or Cape.

Pink Tea for the Library.

The women of the Scotch Plains Public Library held a pink tea at the Library rooms yesterday afternoon Miss Mead gave a very interesting talk on the work at Hampton Institute. The library rooms were comfortably filled with the elite of the village and Plainfield. Miss Mary Westcott and Miss Abbie Sykes made charming little waitresses. A tidy sum was added to the treasury of the library. The patronnesses were Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Mrs. Warren Ackerman, Mrs. De-Forest Thomas, Mrs Sykes, Mrs. Thomas Paff, Jr., Mrs. Westcott, Mrs. John R Marsh, Mrs. D P. Hall of Plainfield, the Misses Kyte, the Misses Kennedy, Miss Emma Coles, Miss Sykes, Miss Bowman, Miss Nichol, Miss Reinhart, the Misses McCready, the Misses Hollingsworth and others.

—Go to Denton's Hillside Avenue nursery, and enjoy the great free chrysanthemum show.

—Choicest meats, including Jersey pork and poultry, are the housewife's delight at Fred Endress's, 203 Liberty street.

—In a return game on the C. Y. M. L. alleys last evening the Plainfield Bowling Club beat the Lyceums by 79 pins. Score, 1479 to 1400.

—Car No. 4 was temporarily disabled today, and after being repaired was put on again with Superintendent Adelman personally in charge.

—The fair has been a great success, and it ends tonight. Do n't miss the chance of a delightful time with the Juniors. Central Hall is the place, North and Park avenue.

ROBERT WINTHROP DEAD.

He Passed Away Peacefully in Boston Home.

Boston, Nov. 17.—Hon. Robt. C. Winthrop died last night at his Marlborough street residence. His death came suddenly at last, although his condition has been precarious for some time. The last person he recognized was his daughter, to whom he spoke affectionately Thursday noon. When death came, his son Robert C., jr., and the nurse were the only persons present. His death is immediately attributed to an affection of the heart, coupled with his extreme age, Mr. Winthrop being 85 years old last May. For over a year Mr. Winthrop has been unable to lie down and has spent a great deal of his time in his reclining chair.

During the past few weeks the patient has been unable to get any sleep whatever without opiates. Despite his extreme physical weakness during his last days he retained that same dignity and perfect resignation to his condition so characteristic of him through all his life.

Mr. Winthrop was United States senator during 1850 and 1851.

Dr. McCosh Is Dead.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 17.—Dr. McCosh, the famous ex-president of Princeton university, expired at 10 o'clock last night.

The announcement of his death was made by the tolling of the college bell. Dr. McCosh had been failing for the past two months. The death of Dr. McCosh was due to no disease in particular, but he gradual failing of a man of his years. His death was peaceful. Dr. McCosh leaves a wife and two children.

FITZSIMMONS' FATAL BLOW

Con Riordan Probably Killed by the Lanky Pugilist.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 17.—While Bob Fitzsimmons and Con Riordan, his sparring partner, were boxing at H. R. Jacob's opera house last night, Fitzsimmons caught Riordan with a blow on the point of the jaw and the San Francisco pugilist was knocked out. Riordan did not recover consciousness despite the efforts of two physicians, who gave him hypodermic injections and applied an electric battery. Riordan breathed as if in pain and the only evidence of life about him was a twitching of the muscles when the battery was applied.

Fitzsimmons was arrested at the Vanderbilt house and confined in the Syracuse police station. Bail was refused. Fitzsimmons is almost prostrated by the result.

FOUGHT IN HIS COFFIN.

Terrible Struggle of a Man Who Was Accidentally Buried Alive.

Grand Lodge, Mich., Nov. 17.—Elam Musot, formerly a fruit tree agent, who, for about two years, made Grand Lodge his home and headquarters, while on a trip to Alma a little over a year ago was taken ill and supposedly died suddenly. Yesterday his friends decided to take up the body and remove it to Williamstown. When they opened the coffin they found that the body had turned over, and that the hands were clutching the hair, handfuls of which had been torn out. The face was badly lacerated and torn, giving evidence of the desperate struggle the man had made to free himself from his tomb.

Whipped the Tong-Haks.

London, Nov. 17.—A dispatch says that 16,000 Chinese troops are defending Port Arthur. The Chinese fleet, fully armed and equiped, put to sea on Monday. A dispatch from Tokio says: Advices from Fussan, Korea, under date of Nov. 16, states that a battle has been fought between Japanese troops and rebellious Tong-Haks. Capt. Suzuki, with a detachment of Japanese troops met the rebels in large force on Nov. 11, and after some desperate fighting completely routed them. The Tong-Haks lost 186 killed. The number of their wounded is very large. The Japanese also captured a large quantity of ammunition, etc. The Japanese loss was three wounded.

McDonnell's Trial Begins.

Meadville, Pa., Nov. 17.—A jury was finally obtained in the case of Fred McDonnell, charged with the murder of John McCandrew. Rev. Robert Murray, Mrs. Murray and Mrs. Truesdell testified that they saw a young man passing through Mrs. Truesdell's yard from the direction where the body was found. Mr. Truesdell and others pursued and caught McDonnell who claimed that he had been fighting with some other boys over fire-crackers.

TO HELP WOMEN.

That Is Why This Woman Writes.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Few people have any idea of the suffering that oppresses some women.

Pains run rampant through their entire bodies. They suffer secretly as long as they can, and then go all to pieces and don't care what happens.

Yet this misery is easily relieved; thousands of American women proclaim the fact.

The portrait presented here is that of Mrs. J. M. Bender, who lives on the old York Road at Nicetown, Pa. She has been for many years in very poor health.

She had falling of the womb and other forms of female weakness, with headache, severe backache, pains all over her body, and serious kidney trouble.

Her blood was in such a bad state that physicians said she had dropsy. Nearly discouraged she tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to her great surprise it made her a well woman.

She now wishes to tell women all over the world to take the Vegetable Compound and be well. Any druggist has it.

Nothing in all the world has cured so many cases of female weaknesses as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Why don't you try it?

FOR THE PLAIN PEOPLE.

Paine's Celery Compound Makes Men and Women Well Again.

Dr. Shrady, in the Forum, gives some of the big fees that physicians receive from wealthy patients.

For 4 weeks' attendance during typhoid fever the physician to the Prince of Wales received $50,000.

It is the countless homes in moderate circumstances, however, that find it so hard to pay for the frequent doctor's visits; what the plain people want is the very best medicine, yet not beyond their means They have it in Paine's celery compound.

To prepare such a great, popular remedy, that should embody the most advanced ideas regarding disease, and yet be easily within reach of the thousand modest homes where sickness exists, was the life-long ambition of that eminent Dartmouth professor the greatest physician America has produced, Edward E Phelps, M. D., LL. D. Paine's celery compound, that remarkable nerve regulator and blood purifier, was first prepared by Prof. Phelps in the laboratory of the Dartmouth medical school.

Paine's celery compound embodied the sound theory of Prof. Phelps, that only by feeding and rebuilding worn-out, diseased nerve tissues could firm health be restored. This greatest of remedies sets to work at once to store the nerve tissues and the muscular tissues with the means of rapid growth. It urges the excretory organs to cleanse the blood, and fills it with new red corpuscles. There has never been anything like Paine's celery compound for building up the system when tired out, weak and bloodless. It has shown its marvelous power in permanently curing nervous debility and exhaustion, neuralgia, sleeplessness, melancholy, headaches, dyspepsia, rheumatism and disordered liver and blood disease—these many ailments being due to poverty and impurity of the blood or to an undefined state of the nerves.

The most progressive remedy of this century soon made its way into hospitals, homes of physicians and into countless modest households in the large cities, and the happy results during all these years in every city and hamlet in this broad land sufficiently shows its marvelous power over disease of debility and weakness. Physicians advise its use whenever the system is "run down" and as an invaluable general tonic for speedily recruiting the strength of the body.

Mr E. E. Towne, who is one of the best known business men in Springfield, Mass, has been a resident of that city for over 30 years. He has a fine residence in the McKnight district, and is well and favorably known among the best people of the city. He writes:

"I had spent thousands of dollars in hospitals and at different springs trying to cure sciatic rheumatism. Almost every known remedy, both internal and external, was tried, but results were not satisfactory; no cure was effected. Early in 1894 after I had had some temporary relief, I was again taken with very violent suffering, pain night and day. I tried various remedies for two months, but with no help. As another experiment, I commenced taking Paine's celery compound. I began to improve at once before using up one bottle. The pains grew less, my appetite grew better, and I began to get sound and refreshing sleep, and have gained in three months 15 pounds. I have only taken six bottles, but am nearly well. It has done for me in three months what other medicines did not do in years." The example is plain.

TWENTY-SIX CONTESTS

Records Will Be Broken in the Next Congress.

Many Battles, Despite the Republican Landslide, Will Be Fought for Seats in the House of Representatives—Claimants from the North, South, East and West.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Probably the greatest number of contested elections in the history of the United States, will come up before the fifty-fourth congress. Despite the immense majority secured by the republicans upon the face of the returns, the contests will be greater for seats in the house, than ever before known. The majority of them will come from the south, but New Jersey, Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania will also be involved.

It is said at republican headquarters that he size of the republican majority will have no weight in determining the issue of the contests. Where fraud is proved of sufficient extent the seat will be given to the man legally and morally entitled to it. Contests on mere technicalities, it was further stated, will not be encouraged. The republican congressional campaign committee have been advised of the intention of defeated candidates to institutes contests in twenty-six districts in Alabama, Arkansas, Connecticut, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, New Jersey, North Carolina, Texas and Virginia. The latter state heads the list with eight contests.

The contestants from Kentucky, Louisiana, Misouri and Nebraska have not informed the committee of the grounds upon which they intend to make their contests. In all the other districts fraud will be alleged. The Louisiana contestants assert that frauds of all kinds have been perpetrated at the election, including illegal voting, stuffing the ballot box, suppressing and falsifying the returns, and the prevention of voting by force and intimidation. The contests from Virginia will be made in pursuance to a plan that includes the determination of the constitutionality of the present election law in that state. It is said at the committee rooms that the election officers threw out at least 20,000 votes after the election. In the first district alone the number thrown out, supposedly cast for the republican candidates, was 4,000.

The preparation of notice of contest to comply with the requirements of the law, is a difficult and delicate task, and the committee officials say it will be done with the utmost care by the best talent that can be secured in the several states. It is further explained, that the committee, as an organization, will not undertake to prosecute any contest.

The law says that the contestant must give notice in writing to the member to whose seat he claims election, within thirty days after the result of such election shall have been determined, specifying the grounds of suit. The answer to this notice must be made by the member-elect within thirty days, and the testimony in the case must be taken within ninety days from the date of the answer.

The testimony shall be forwarded under seal to the clerk of the house of representatives, who is to notify the parties to appear before him at the capitol within twenty days from the mailing of the letter, and witness the opening of the packages of testimony. If they fail to appear the clerk is to open the testimony and determine what portion shall be printed.

The law further provides that "no payment shall be made by the house of representatives out of its contingent fund or otherwise, to either party in a contested election case for expenses incurred in prosecuting or defending the same." This provision has been in the past more honored in the breach than in the observance. The appropriations have been very largely reduced within the past few years, and when made, are now limited by the amount of expenses which the parties make oath they have incurred. It has been suspected that in former times contests have been inaugurated for the single purpose of securing an appropriation for expenses, but of all the proposed contests brought to the attention of the campaign committee since the election last week, only one has caused a doubt of the sincerity of the contestant in the minds of the committee officials. Which one that is, of course, they do not specify. The notifications of contests are already beginning to come in.

Engineer Milligan Struck.

New London, Conn., Nov. 17.—Chief Engineer R. W. Milligan, U. S. N., was struck by a locomotive at Shaw's cove. He is here as a member of the board to witness the trial of the torpedo boat Ericsson. The locomotive struck him in the small of the back, throwing him headlong down an embankment. Commodore Selfridge with the railroad employes picked up Mr. Milligan, unconscious, and carried him to the switch house, where they revived him.

Killed by the Boiler.

Joplin, Mo., Nov. 17.—The boiler which runs the pump on the Marstolf shaft, at Spring City, exploded and killed three employes, Charles and George Bailey and D. Reed. Parts of the boiler were blown 100 yards and the engine house was torn into kindling wood. Several persons were injured.

Princeton's Secret Practice.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 17.—Walter Cash and W. E. Brownlee coached the Princeton football eleven during their practice The team is practicing behind closed gates. The games with the Pennsylvania state college eleven and the freshmen's game with Andover have both been cancelled.

Two Victims of a Train.

Rutherford, N. J., Nov. 17.—John Anderson, the owner of Anderson's Rutherford and New York express, and William Dougherty, a boy, were instantly killed at the Homestead crossing of the Paterson plank road by an east-bound train on the Northern railroad of New Jersey.

HUNDREDS WERE SLAIN

Awful Butchery of Christian Armenians.

Soldiers Destroyed Twenty-Five Villages—Women and Children Killed Like Cattle—Horrible Scenes in a Church Where Maidens and Brides Had Taken Refuge.

London, Nov. 17.—A correspondent in Varna describes the massacre of Armenian Christians as of equal importance with the Bulgarian butcheries which led to the Russo-Turkish war. He says:

"The trouble began with the refusal of the Armenians to pay taxes on the ground that the Kurdish raids had so impoverished them as to render it impossible. Troops were sent to enforce the payments. The people yielded, but the governor resolved to make an example of them. He ordered the troops to fire on the defenceless populace and they obeyed with alacrity. They only ceased when the residents of twenty-five villages had been killed. Reports say 6,000 were slain. Great Britain sent her consul in Van, Mr. Hallward, to report on the slaughter. The sultan was horrified and he ordered Zeki Pacha, to make his report on the matter at once.

It seems that Zeki's report confirmed Mr. Hallward's, whereupon the governor formulated the grave charge that the latter was inciting the Armenians to revolt. This was submitted to Sir Phillip Currie, who has sent out British officials to make inquiries.

Mr. Hagopian, chairman of the Armenian patriotic association in London, then sent Lord Kimberly, foreign secretary, a letter sent from Bitlis, on Oct 9. Mr. Hagopian, after declaring his belief in the reports of the massacre, submits that, in view of the horrible tortures and persecutions of the Armenians, the time has come to abolish the administration of the porte and substitute a regime approved by the signatories of the Berlin treaty.

The letter from Bitlis gives details of the origin of the disturbances. There was a Kurdish raid on Armenian cattle resulting in a fight in which two Kurds were killed. The friends of the Kurds took the corpses to Moush and declared that the Armenians had overrun the land and were killing and plundering right and left. This furnished the pretext for the massing of the troops.

The letter then describes the horrors of the massacre. It says that on the admissions of the Turkish soldiers, some of whom tearfully protested that they merely obeyed orders, it is asserted that no compassion was hown to age or sex. In one place 300 or 400 women, after having been forced repeatedly to submit to the soldiery, were hacked to pieces with swords and bayonets. In another place 200 weeping women begged at he commander's feet for mercy. The commander, after ordering that they be outraged, had them all dispatched with the sword. Similar scenes were enacted in other places. In one case sixty young brides and maidens were driven into a church and were violated and butchered until their blood flowed from the doors. A large company headed by a priest knelt near the church begging for compassion averring that they had nothing to do with the culprits who killed the Kurds. It was in vain; all were killed. Several attractive women were told they might live if they would recant their faith. They replied:

"Why should we deny Christ? We have no more reason to do so than had these," pointing to the mangled bodies of their husbands and brothers. "Kill us, too."

This was done. The letter says that between 6,000 and 10,000 were killed. Babes were impaled on the same weapons with their mothers. Several soldiers admitted that they had disposed of a hundred victims each. Some families were burned with kerosene in their own houses.

MURDERED THE MAYOR.

Two Men Killed in Another Southern Shooting Affray.

Lula, Miss., Nov. 17.—Jacob W. Harman, mayor of this town, and Henry Lawrence, a leading jeweler, were assassinated on the street to-day by John W. Boyd, overseer of the Van Eaton plantation, and his younger brother Bob.

A year ago Mayor Harman and the elder Boyd had a dispute and several shots were fired. Yesterday afternoon Mayor Harman met John W. Boyd on the street, drew his pistol and beat him over the head with it. To-day the Boyd brothers came into town armed with rifles. As Harman and Lawrence walked up the street to dinner the Boyd brothers confronted them and opened fire. Harman drew his revolver and fired a couple of shots, ineffectually. Both he and Lawrence were killed on the spot. The elder Boyd escaped on horseback, the younger on foot.

Gettysburg Lines Fixed.

Gettysburg, Pa., Nov. 17.—The Louisiana state Gettysburg committee and the members of the United States Gettysburg committee spent the entire day on the battlefield. The line of advance and retreat of Hay's brigade upon the first day was definitely determined. On the cavalry battlefield where Gregg's division drove back Stuart's horsemen, the position of the rifled section of Green's Louisiana battery was fixed.

Firebugs Cause Great Damage.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 17.—A series of incendiary fires occurred last night and this morning, and as a result property valued at $400,000 has been destroyed. Between midnight and 6 o'clock five alarms were turned in for different fires.

Farmer Hewitt Injured.

New York, Nov. 17.—Dudley R. Hewitt, a wealthy farmer of Mystic, Conn., narrowly escaped instant death on the Rector street platform of the elevated railway. He was very badly hurt as it was, and may die from his injuries.

RAPIDLY BREAKING DOWN

MRS. S. BATES TELLS THE STORY OF HER SUFFERINGS.

How She Was Cured By Munyon's Little Pellets After Physicians Had Failed.

Mrs. S. Bates, of Cecil, N. J., adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have been saved from a life of suffering by Munyon's Remedies. She said: "I had suffered greatly with indigestion and stomach trouble. Everything I ate distressed me, I was nervous and fretful and rapidly breaking down. Physicians had failed to help me, nor did any of the many remedies I took relieve me until I began using Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. The result was astonishing. After taking but three doses I felt greatly improved, and after taking one 25c bottle I was entirely cured."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

BETTER TIMES AT HAND

Bradstreet's Report Shows Good Trade Increases.

Figures from All Manufacturing Cities Tend To Restore Confidence—Higher Prices Obtained and Greater Demand for Staple Goods—Orders Are in Plenty.

New York, Nov. 17.—There has been a great improvement in business during last week. Bradstreet's report says: In eastern centres manufacturers of glass, leather, lumber, cottons and woolens, tobacco and agricultural implements, as well as jobbers in general dry goods, hardware, groceries, heavy clothing and shoes, report an increased volume of business, indications of this tendency being corroborated by bank clearings at 45 cities amounting to $1,019,000,000, a gain of 7.6 per cent. as compared with the week before, 1.2 per cent. heavier than in the like week last year. This is the first week in which the volume of clearings has equalled or exceeded $1,000,000,000 since early in January last.

The heavy gain in shipment of shoes from New England manufacturing centres is continued this week with a total of 116,000 cases, compared with 60,000 cases last year.

The favorable change in the movement of prices last week also continues with higher quotations for butter, eggs and hides, wheat 1⅞c. higher, sugar 3-16c., corn 2c., oats ⅝c., lard 1-5c., pork 25c. and coffee ⅜c. Cotton remains unchanged, but leather, some grades of iron, print cloths and wool and lumber at eastern markets are all firmer. The more noticeable declines in quotations are in a shaded price for Bessemer pig iron, and for live cattle and hogs at western markets, where receipts of live grades have been free. Leaders in the wool trade say prices for that commodity have reached their lowest figure, and that the increased demand since election points to an advance.

Great interest is shown in the $50,000,000 5 per cent. government loan. A feeling has, however, developed that it is a temporary expedient and cannot permanently check depletion of the treasury gold. The belief prevails that a radical reform of the currency is the true remedy. Financial authorities think, however, that the issue will be largely over subscribed at better prices than were obtained for the similar issue last February. It is stated that in the awards bidders who take gold from the treasury on legal tenders will be discriminated against in the allotment.

Exports of wheat from the United States and Canada, both coasts, show a sharp spurt, the grand total (flour included as wheat) amounting to 2,909,000 bushels, as compared with 2,689,000 bushels the week before.

Among larger eastern cities Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Buffalo report an improvement in commercial and manufacturing lines. Boston says trade is quiet except for shoes and dry goods. Baltimore announces a volume of orders and holiday and fancy goods in best demand. Aside from an extension of the feeling of confidence in an early improvement in general demand, advices from Cleveland, Cincinnati, Louisville, Omaha, Des Moines, St. Paul and Minneapolis and San Francisco indicate little material change. But there are gains in volumes of goods distributed at Detroit, Chicago and Kansas City and Duluth. At St. Louis, Milwaukee and Portland the end of the season or unseasonable weather has served to help the volume of trade.

END OF THE LEAGUE MEETING.

The Session Adjourned Without Doing Much Business.

New York, Nov. 17.—The delegates to the annual meeting of the National league and American association of baseball clubs were in excellent humor when the meeting was called to order. The claims made by the Philadelphia club had been thoroughly discussed during the night. A resolution was passed allowing Philadelphia to retain twenty-five cents of the fifty paid for grand stand tickets. The delegates then spent several hours carefully considering the documents prepared by the special committees, and adjourned to meet the last Wednesday in February, 1895, at the Fifth Avenue hotel, this city. One document prepared by the special committee is very lengthy. It relates to the men who entered in the conspiracy last summer, while in the employ of the league, for the organization of a new association. They have been dealt with very severely.

More Reading Railroad Trouble.

New York, Nov. 17.—John R. Dos Passos, counsel for the Fitzgerald Reading General Mortgage Bondholders' committee, has announced that a dispatch has been received from Raphael & Sons, of London, authorizing opposition against the Earle-Alcott plan, on the ground that the junior securities were not equitably treated. The dispatch came to L. Von Hoffman & Co., the American correspondents of the Raphaels, and created great interest, as it is believed the Rothschilds are represented in this opposition.

Howard Hodgate Exonerated.

Boston, Nov. 17.—The embezzlement case of the Grand Trunk railway against Mr. Howard B. Howgate, of Roxbury, ticket agent at the Boston office, came up in the superior court and Hodgate was completely exonerated.

Alderman Parks Convicted.

Asbury Park, N. J., Nov. 17.—Alderman Charles Parks, of New York, was convicted in the court of quarter sessions on a charge of keeping a gambling house at Asbury Park.

Four Highwaymen Caught.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 17.—Frank Graham and James Burke, all living in New York, were arrested here for highway robbery. They held up four men at Grant Creek.

Miners Accept the Reduction.

Dubois, Pa., Nov. 17.—At a meeting of Bell Lewis and Yates' miners they decided to accept the reduction of wages to thirty-five cents per ton.

WOMEN IN CONVENTION

Twenty-first Session of Their Great Union.

Miss Frances Willard Opens the Proceedings With a Brilliant Speech. Comments on the Opinions of Newspapers—Danger in the Dissipations of Public Men.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 17.—The twenty-first convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance union was opened by Miss Francis Willard. Delegates from every state in the union were present. In her address Miss Willard said: "The aggregate and systematic self-respect of women is making itself felt against the debasing exhibitions of her form, whether pictured or real, before audiences of immoral men.

"The victory gained by Lady Henry Somerset, Mrs. Ormiston Chant and other white ribbon women in bringing evidence to the London county council which caused it, by a vote of 75 to 32, to refuse liquor and promenade hall licenses, so that prominent places of amusement in London are closed, is, perhaps, the strongest proof that a better day has dawned, and deserves to rank beside the victory of women in Kentucky over the perjured Breckinridge and of women in New York over the tiger of Tammany."

Discussing the Pullman strike and other labor questions, she says: There is no remedy to be found for the workers except organized unity of action, and that labor and capital must combine in adjusting their difficulties. Boards of arbitration and conciliation, will, she thinks, supply the missing link for which we have looked so long, on of both parties.

Miss Sadie Reed, of Indianapolis, presented the report on newspapers. Quoting Napoleon, she said four unfriendly papers were to be more dreaded than a hundred thousand bayonets. The press had been generally friendly, this year, and woman's influence had its effect in the recent elections. She was followed by Mrs. E. B. Ingalls of St. Louis who spoke against the use of tobacco. Mrs. E. V. Emory of Boston spoke on the relation of temperance to capitol and labor. Among other things she said:

"No greater danger confronts this people to-day than that arising from the dissipation of officials high in honor and authority. In a country of unlimited resources, two million of men are existing in a state of enforced idleness and consequent starvation. While it is true that this condition has in a measure been brought about by the use of machinery it is equally true that every one of these idle men might to-day be put upon public works if the government would furnish the necessary funds.

"With these two million of men engaged in wholesome avocations at remunerative wages, the cloud of anarchy which hovers over this country would at once be dispelled. An idle element, especially when spurred by hunger, or incited by strong drink, is always a dangerous element, and how to keep this element within bounds of the law is the problem that demands immediate solution.

"The present attitude of capital and labor is portentious of startling events, and yet these appalling conditions were revealed by prophecy by Lincoln and Garfield, a generation ago, and had the guardians of our liberties been true to their trust, these conditions might have been averted."

Mrs. Francis Leiter talked on physical culture and Mrs. Katherine L. Stevenson delivered an address upon literature.

FORMED A STATE LEAGUE.

New Jersey Women's Clubs Now Have a Federation.

Orange, N. J., Nov. 17.—The convention for the formation of a state federation of women's clubs for the state of New Jersey, which was called by the Woman's club of Orange, met in Union hall, Orange. Thirty-eight clubs were represented. A state federation was formed and the following officers chosen: President, Mrs. Charles B. Yardley, East Orange; vice-presidents, Mrs. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, Mrs. E. L. Mora, Miss Cecil Gaines, of Jersey City; Mrs. S. D Horton, of Cranford and Mrs Benjamin McGrew, of Passaic; recording secretary, Miss Kate Erskine, of Plainfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. G. C. Smith, of Newark; treasurer, Mrs. Augusta Bristol, of Vineland; auditor, Miss Caroline Van Meter, of Salem. Directors chosen were Mrs. J. E. Wardell, of Elizabeth; Mrs. J. H. Sadie, of Bayonne; Miss Sue Taylor, of East Orange; Mrs. Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth; Mrs. Harrison Crane, of Passaic; Mrs. M. Bailey, of Newark; Mrs. A. W. Butler, of Montclair; Mrs. Alexander King, of East Orange, and Mrs. C. C. Sleesman, of Bayonne.

Another Murder and Suicide.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—J. J. Higgins, an electrician, killed Mrs. Katie McLaughlin at her home, 322 west Monroe street, and committed suicide. Higgins, who had boarded with Mrs. McLaughlin for a long time, was asked to leave the house. He shot Mrs. McLaughlin four times. Higgins walked up the street but returned on the opposite side of the street, and fired four bullets into his head.

TRUTH IS MIGHTY.

Moses Gage Shirley, the Poet Cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy—Words that Show a Poet Can On Occasion Use Vigorous Prose.

MOSES GAGE SHIRLEY, THE POET.

That Moses Gage Shirley, of Goffstown, N. H., is a popular poet, the world knows. That he is a great poet is evidenced by the fact that he is endorsed by that master of poets, James Whitcomb Riley, and such eminent men as Gov. Wm. E. Russell of Massachusetts, and Mayor Knowlton of Manchester, N. H. His book "Everyday Rhymes," has made him famous.

The poet personally is a genial gentleman who talked interestingly to the writer concerning himself.

"I am very well indeed, now," he said, "but some time ago I was troubled badly with weak nerves and kidney and liver complaint I took that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and it completely cured me.

"As a nerve strengthener and blood purifier it is unequaled, and richly merits its great success as the grandest of medicines.

"I advise everybody ailing to use it, and I take every opportunity to recommend it. It will certainly cure."

Our great writers, our illustrious statesmen, our most eminent physicians and best known society people, use and recommend this grandest of medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It occupies a position among the sick and ailing far above any other remedy ever discovered. No other remedy cures like it, no other medicine begins to have such a long array of wonderful cures. Day after day prominent and well-known people publish their testimonials and recommend this remedy because it cured them and they desire to point out the road to health to others who may be suffering from nerve weakness, over-worked brains, tired-out bodies, nervous debility, insomnia, dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism or some other affection which causes nervousness, weekness and prostration.

Prominent persons whom everybody knows would not thus give their names to the public and advise people to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy if they did not know from their own experience that the medicine cured, and that it will cure others if they use it. We can only say, try it and prove for yourself that it will do just what these well-known people say it will.

Why waste time in trying uncertain and untried remedies, when here is a physician's prescription, a discovery made by the greatest living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City. If you take this medicine you can consider yourself under Dr. Greene's direct professional care, and you can consult him or write to him about your case, freely and without charge. This is a guarantee that this remedy will cure, possessed by no other medicine in the world.

CHAPTER I.

A certain March night of this present "waning age" had settled down upon the woods and the park and the parapets of Ambrose Towers. The harsh stable clock struck a quarter to ten. Thereupon a girl in light evening attire and wraps came through the entrance hall, opened the front door and the small wrought-iron gate beyond it which led to the terrace, and stepped into the moonlight. Such a person, such a night and such a place were unexceptionable materials for a scene in that poetical drama of two which the world has often beheld; which leads up to a contract that causes a slight sinking in the poetry, and a perceptible lack of interest in the play.

She moved so quietly that the alert birds resting in the great cedar tree never stirred. Flitting across its funereal shadow over many yards of turf, as far as to the Grand Walk, whose pebbles shone like the floor-stones of the Apocalyptic city, she paused and looked back at the old brick walls—red in the daytime, sable now—at the shrouded mullions, the silhouette of the tower, though listening rather than seeing seemed her object in coming to the pause. The clammy wings of a bat brushed past her face, startling her and making her shiver a little. The stamping of one or two horses in their stalls surprised her by its distinctness and isolation. The servants' offices were on the other side of the house, and the lady who, with the exception of the girl on the terrace, was its sole occupant, was resting on a sofa behind one of the curtained windows. So Rosalys went on her way unseen, trod the margin of the lake, and plunged into the distant shrubberies.

The clock had reached ten. As the last stroke of the hour rang out a young man scrambled down the sunk fence bordering the pleasure-ground, leaped the iron railing within, and joined the girl who stood awaiting him. In the half light he could not see how her full underlip trembled or the fire of joy that kindled in her eyes. But perhaps he guessed from daylight experiences, since he passed his arm round her shoulders with assurance and kissed her ready mouth many times. Her head still resting against his arms, they walked towards a bench, the rough outlines of which were touched at one end only by the moon's rays. At the dark end the pair sat down.

"DEAR JIM, YOU ARE NOT GOING TO BE VEXED."

"I cannot come again," said the girl.

"Oh?" he vaguely returned. "This is new. What has happened? I thought you said your mother supposed you to be working at your Harmony, and would never imagine our meeting here?" The voice sounded just a trifle hard for a lover's.

"No, she would not. And I still detest deceiving her. I would do it for no one but you, Jim. But what I meant was this: I feel that it can all lead to nothing. Mother is not a bit more worldly than most people, but she naturally does not want her only child to marry a man who has nothing but the pay of an officer in the line to live upon. At her death (you know she has only a life interest here) I should have to go away unless my uncle, who succeeds, chooses to take me to stay with him. I have no fortune of my own beyond a mere pittance. Two hundred a year."

Jim's reply was something like a sneer at the absent lady: "You may as well add to the practical objection the sentimental one, that she wouldn't allow you to change your fine old crusted name for mine, which is merely the older one of the little freeholder turned out of this spot by your ancestor when he came."

"Dear, dear Jim, don't say those horrid things! As if I had ever even thought of that for a moment!"

He shook her hand off impatiently and walked out into the moonlight. Certainly as far as physical outline went he might have been the direct product of a line of Paladins or hereditary Crusaders. He was tall, straight of limb, with an aquiline nose, and a mouth fitfully scornful. Rosalys sat almost motionless watching him. There was no mistaking the ardor of her feelings; her power over him seemed to be lessened by his consciousness of his influence upon the lower and weaker side of her nature. It gratified him as a man to feel it; and though she was beautiful enough to satisfy the senses of the critical, there was perhaps something of contempt interwoven with his love. His victory had been too easy, too complete.

"Dear Jim, you are not going to be vexed? It really isn't my fault that I can't come out here again! Mother will be downstairs to-morrow, and then she might take it into her head to look at any time into the schoolroom and see how the Harmony gets on."

"And you are going off to London soon?" said Jim, still speaking gloomily.

"I am afraid so. But couldn't you come there too? I know your leave is not up for a great many weeks?"

He was silent for longer than she had ever known him at these times. Rosalys left her seat on the bench and threw her arms impulsively round him.

"I can't go away unless you will come to London when we do, Jim!"

"I will; but on one condition."

"What condition! You frighten me!"

"That you will marry me when I do join you there."

The quick breath that heaved in Rosalys ebbed silently, and she held on to the rustic bench with one hand, a trembling being apparent in her garments.

"You really—mean it, Jim, darling?"

He swore that he did; that life was quite unendurable to him as he then experienced it. When she was once his wife nothing would come between them; but of course the marriage need not be known for a time—indeed must not. He could not take her abroad. The climate of Burmah would be too trying for her; and, besides, they really would not have enough to live upon.

"Couldn't we get on as other people do?" said Rosalys, trying not to cry at these arguments. "I am so tired of concealment, and I don't like to marry privately! It seems to me, much as I love being with you, that there is a sort of—well—vulgarity in our clandestine meetings, as we now enjoy them. Therefore, how should I ever have strength enough to hide the fact of my being your wife, to face my mother day after day with the shadow of this secret between us?"

For all answer Jim kissed her, and stroked her silky brown curls.

"I suppose I shall end in agreeing with you—I always do!" she said, her mouth quivering. "Though I can be very dogged and obstinate, too, Jim! Do you know that all my governesses have said I was the most stubborn child they ever came across? But then, in that case, my temper must be really aroused. You have never seen me as I am when angry. Perhaps, Jim, you would get to hate me."

She looked at him wistfully with wet eyes.

"I shall never cease to love you desperately as I do now!" declared the young man. "How lovely you look, little Rosalys, with that one moonbeam making your forehead like pure white marble! But time is passing. You must go back, my darling, I'm afraid. And you won't fail me in London? I shall make all the plans. Good-by—good-by!"

One clinging, intermittent kiss, and then from the shadow in which he stood Jim watched her light figure passing the lake, and hurrying along in the shelter of the yew hedges towards the great house, asleep under reaching deeps of sky and the vacant haze of the round white moon.

CHAPTER II.

When clouds are iron-gray above the prim drab houses, and a hard east wind blows flakes of dust, stable straws, scraps of soiled newspaper and sharp pieces of grit into the eyes of foot passengers, a less inviting and romantic dwelling spot than Eaton place can hardly be experienced.

But the prince's daughter of the Canticles, emerging from her palace to see the vine flourish and the pomegranates bud forth with her beloved, could not have looked more unconscious of crime than Rosalys Ambrose, as she came down the steps of one of the tall houses of the aforesaid highly respectable place of residence. Her cheeks were hotly pink, her eyes shining, her lips parted. Having once made up her mind, "qualms of prudence, pride and pelt" had died within her passionate little heart. After to-day she would belong absolutely to Jim, be his alone, through all the eternities, as it seemed; and of what account was anything else in the world? The entirely physical character of his affection for her,

AFTER TO-DAY SHE WOULD BELONG TO JIM.

and perhaps of hers for him, was an unconjectured element herein which might not render less transitory the most transitory of sweet things. Thus hopefully she stepped out of the commonplace home that would, in one sense, be hers no more.

The raw wind whistled up the street, and deepened the color on her face. She was plainly dressed in gray, and wore a rather thick veil, natural to the dusty day; it could not, however, conceal the sparkle of her eyes; veils, even thick ones, happily, never do. Hailing a hansom, she told the driver to take her to the corner of the Embankment.

In the midst of her preoccupation she noticed as the cab turned the corner out of Eaton place that the bony chestnut horse went lame. Rosalys was superstitious as well as tender-hearted, and she deemed that some stroke of ill-luck might befall if she drove to be married behind a suffering animal. She alighted and paid off the man, and in her excitement gave him three times his fare. Hurrying forward on foot she heard her name called, and received a cordial greeting from a tall man with gray whiskers, in whom she recognized Mr. Durrant, Jim's father. It occurred to her for a second that he might have discovered the plot and have lain in wait to prevent it. However, he spoke in his usual half-respectful, half-friendly tones, not noticing her frightened face. Mr. Durrant was a busy man. Besides holding several very important land agencies in the county where Rosalys lived, he had business in the city to transact at times. He explained to Miss Ambrose that some urgent affairs he was supervising for a client of his, Lord Parkhurst, had now brought him up to London for a few weeks.

"Lord Parkhurst is away?" she asked, to say something. "I hear of him sometimes through his uncle, Col. Lacy."

"Yes. A thorough sailor. Mostly afloat," Mr. Durrant replied. "Well—we're rather out of the way in Porchester terrace. Otherwise my wife would be so pleased if you would come to tea, Miss Ambrose? My son Jim, lazy young beggar, is up here now, too—going to plays and parties. Well, well, it's natural he should like to amuse himself before he leaves for Burmah, poor boy. Are you looking for a hansom? Yes? Hi!" and he waved his stick.

"Thank you so much," said Miss Ambrose. "And I will tell mamma where you and Mrs. Durrant are staying."

She was surprised at her own composure. Her unconscious father-in-law elect helped her into the cab, took off his hat, and walked rapidly away. Rosalys felt her heart stand still when she drew up at the place of meeting. She saw Jim, very blooming and very well dressed, awaiting her, outwardly calm, at any rate. He jumped into her vehicle and they drove on city-wards.

THE HORSE CAME BACK.

But the Buggy Was Found Far Away, and the Harness Is Gone.

Miss Maggie Voorhees, daughter of A. F. Voorhees of Greenbrook road, near Dunellen drove to town Saturday evening to go shopping. She stopped in front of Mrs. Reynolds's house on East Second street, near Madison avenue, and left the sorrel horse and the buggy in front.

After she had called on Mrs. Reynolds she went down town and returned to the house at 7:30. The rig was all right when she entered the house.

When she came out to go home she found that the horse and carriage had been stolen. Tracks in the mud showed that the rig had been turned and driven towards Dunellen. W. J. Nelson of West Front street drove home with Miss Voorhees and set out with her father to find the stolen rig. New Market and Scotch Plains were searched and the police in all the towns in this part of the State were notified by 'phone.

Mr. Voorhees returned home at 3 yesterday morning and found the horse, tired and weary, standing by the barn. He cared for the abused animal and then began to wonder where the harness and the buggy were. He went out to look for them today.

The owner found the buggy at the corner of Central avenue and Randolph road at 11:30 this morning. The harness and the blankets were missing.

The Festival of Nations.

Only one week more, and the new Y. M. C. A. Building now so bare and lifeless will be changed as if my magic into a scene of animation, and brightness, and life. Everyone knows what is going on there, and that the "Festival of Nations" will be the greatest thing of the kind Plainfield has ever seen. Everyone does not realize, however, how much time, and thought and hard work it means from the ladies who are getting it up They need every possible help that can be given, if Plainfield's beautiful new building is, after all, to be furnished as it ought. Everyone in Plainfield, directly or indirectly, reaps the good that such an institution brings to our city, and ought to feel an interest in helping on the work most generously. There is but one week left in which to send in contributions, and not a day of this should be lost. There will be a place in the Fair for every kind of a donation that could possibly be offered, whether of fancy work, cookery, household utensils, bric-a-brac, toys or groceries; and the more and the oftener you send, the better will it be for the Y. M. C. A., whose needs are the needs of Plainfield's young men.

Remember that all contributions must be sent to the chairmen of the different booths by the coming Saturday night, and on Monday to the Y. M. C. A. Building.

Joining in the Work of Progress.

Cornelius O'Reilly, owner of that desirable plot of land at the corner of Somerset street and Jackson avenue, opposite the public school, visited Plainfield Saturday. His friend P. A. Emmons showed him around the borough, and Mr. O'Reilly was astounded at the growth. Before leaving he signed a contract with P. Kelly to lay a bluestone walk on the Somerset street side of the lot, which will be a decided improvement over the present board walk.

Capt. Martin a Representative.

The mail vote for officers of the New Jersey Division L. A. W. was canvassed last week, and the result was found to be as follows: Chief Consul, Robert Gentle of Elizabeth; Vice-Consul, R. R. Chiswell of Paterson; Secretary-Treasurer, J. C. Tattersall of Trenton; Representatives—W. G. Norwood, Paterson; J. W. Dickinson, Newark; F. L. C. Martin, Plainfield; W. T. Holmes, Jr., Vineland; Frank Evelynd, Jersey City; W. H. Stauffer, Asbury Park.

Mud Cushioned His Fall.

While on his way to church yesterday morning, Alexander Willett of Craig place caught the toe of his shoe under the rail of the Somerset street car track at the corner of Craig place, and fell his full length in the three inches of soft mud for which that thoroughfare is famous. Fortunately, he was uninjured, though his clothes were a sight.

Stopped by a Pole.

Nicholas VanWinkle's team ran away on Somerset street early Saturday evening. Near Coddington avenue the horses took different sides of a telephone pole and were brought to a full stop. The pole of the wagon was smashed and the harness was broken.

A FATHER'S COMPLAINT.

Rev. Edward Love's Treatment by the School Board.

HE THREATENS SUIT FOR DAMAGES.

Says They Permitted a Charge of the Gravest Nature to Stand Unjustly Against His Son—Gives a Full History of the Case.

In regard to his proposed suit for damages against Superintendent of Schools H. M. Maxson, Rev. Edward Love of East Ninth street said to a Daily Press reporter when interviewed:

"The cause of the suit is that I understood Mr. Maxson to state before the Board of Education at its meeting that my son Alfred had stolen his father's letters and broken the United States mail. This is the outcome of a trouble that extends back a few weeks. Alfred is in the High School in Miss Whitney's class, connected with which are two other teachers.

"Some three weeks ago the teacher of the Latin class, Miss Delano, requested the class to come back in the afternoon. Of course they were not bound to return, as the school work closes at 1; but as the class was backward most of the pupils returned. About 5 in the afternoon the teacher told Alfred that he could be excused, and told him to leave the school building at once, not to loiter about, but to go straight home.

"He went to the hall and was standing there with his wheel waiting for another young man with whom he had an engagement, when Miss Delano entered the hall. She told him that she considered it a direct case of disobedience. She reported this and Alfred was suspended for three days. Mr. Maxson wrote a letter to me explaining this, and the letter did not reach me as soon as it might, owing to the following reason:

"Alfred has been in my employ for two years under salary, and frequently with my knowledge and direction has opened my mail and made proper arrangement thereof. This was left entirely in his hands during my recent trip to Europe. He opened this letter from Mr. Maxson, and knowing that I was under rather heavy cares at the time and believing that I would be very indignant, kept this a few days and then gave it to me, telling me that he had thought it was better not to give me this until the school matter had blown over.

"I then called on Mr. Maxson in answer to his letter and gave my reason for not replying earlier, that I had not received the letter. I said I was sorry that my call had been deferred and both myself and wife explained the matter at length. Furthermore, I told him that this arose from Alfred's best part, his disposition not to worry his father, the same spirit that prompted him some time ago to conceal the fact that his collar-bone had been broken.

"Some few days after this Mr. Travell called Alfred roughly out of the cloakroom, thinking he was one who had made a disturbance there. Mr. Travell became convinced that Alfred was not the one at fault, and apologized. He said, however, something about Alfred's not being desirable in the High School, and that if he found a case against him he would be more severe than with the other scholars. Such a case was soon found.

"On the following Monday, Alfred was in the yard during recess when a young man named Serrell said to him: 'I am going to post a letter for Miss Bass. Go along with me?' Alfred said that he was afraid that he would get in trouble, but the Serrell boy told him that they would get back in time, and so he agreed to go. Serrell jumped the fence, and Alfred followed. They went to the post office and were back a few minutes too late to get in line. As soon as Alfred reached the room Miss Bass asked him where he had been. He said he had been with Serrell to the post office with the teacher's letter.

"Miss Bass then told him to report to Mr. Travell, and he was left waiting a long time while Mr. Travell talked with Mr. Maxson. Then Mr. Travell told Alfred that he was suspended indefinitely and that he should report to the principal at the end of a week.

"Feeling that there was something wrong, and that under the circumstances it was not best to have my son in the High School, I wrote to Mr. Maxson, saying that I withdrew Alfred from school pending an appeal to the Board of Education. I appeared before the Board at the last regular meeting and made by complaint. I urged that the first offense was, if an offense at all, a very small one, and that it was an impertinence on the part of the teacher to order my son to leave the building and order him home; that if it was an offense it was amply covered by a reprimand; that the matter of going to the postoffice was not a serious matter and could have been met with a reprimand. I urged that this mode of punishment was destructive to the very purpose for which we send our sons to the High School; that if suspended for nine days of three weeks, all chance of good standing in the class was gone; that this punishment was foolish and unjst.

"My request of the Board was that they advise Mr. Maxson to remit those suspensions and count them as not existing. Mr. Maxson in reply said that he had reduced his statement in his defense before the Board to writing. Among other things he stated was that Alfred's progress in the school had been very unsatisfactory, and hinted that his stay there was wasted time.

"I asked him how that could be in the light of the only report that Alfred had received for the quarter since entering the High School, which was a report considerably above the average of the class, even after the deductions, which had been made from his earned standing through the suspensions. Mr. Maxson replied that he had not seen Alfred's report. I then asked him how he dared state anything to that Board derogatory to my son's standing when he denied having seen the report. I asked if it was conceivable that Mr. Maxson was not aware of my son's standing.

"Further on in his report occurred, as well as I can remember, the following statement referring to his having written to me concerning Alfred's suspension: 'Then Alfred stole his father's letters and broke the United States mail'.

"Stung with such a cowardly and grave charge, I at once said I could not permit Mr. Maxson to read further without a protest. Then turning to the superintendent of schools, I said 'you lie and you know it. Then Mr. Maxson turned with a sneer and said 'Well, I'll put abstract if that word pleases you better'. I again said, 'You lie and you know it'

"The Board, like Gallio, 'who cared for none of these things', simply said through its president 'Now, Mr Love, let Mr. Maxson get through'. The Board allowed a charge of the gravest nature to be made against the son of a respected citizen without asking proof or making a protest. I was next told by the president that careful consideration and justice would be done in the matter of my appeal. I then bade that worshipful body 'good evening'.

"I expected a report from the Board, but I received none until I demanded it in writing, addressed to Dr. Probasco. In answer to this, one week afterwards, the doctor called at my office and said that the Board had considered the matter and stood by Mr. Maxson.

"What he meant by standing by Mr Maxson, he did not fully explain. Whether he simply meant in the matter of the suspension or included the slander I do not know.

"Dr. Probasco also came several times to see me in regard to the anticipated slander suit. I told him that I was busy and had placed the affair in the hands of my attorney. I would take further steps in a few days."

Y. M. C. A. Contributions.

Among the contributions to the Y. M. C. A. Fair, are generous donations from the following business firms:

Boice, Runyon & Co. have donated coal, with which the fires were started last week in the new building, and they will keep the furnaces supplied with coal until the fair is over.

Thorpe & Ivins have donated all the lumber which will be used in the construction of booths for the Festival of Nations.

Langhorne is securing photographs of all the clergymen in the city and will make a large donation of pictures, which will be sold in the booths for the benefit of the building fund.

J. Wesley Johnson, whose home is in Plainfield, has offered to fill 500 orangee to deck the orange tree from his silverware establishment in New York city.

We hear of generous donations from firms and individuals of time, labor, artistic paintings, beautiful embroideries, skilful handicraft, enticing sweets, delicious viands for the restaurant, and practical gifts for that famous "Catch-All", the American Country Store.

Organized a Card Club.

A number of the young people of Plainfield met Friday night at the home of George P. Smith on Central avenue for the purpose of forming a card club. The following officers were elected: President—Volney F. Green; Vice-President—Miss Lillian Schoonmaker; Secretary—George P. Smith; Treasurer—Allan Taylor.

Among those who were present at the meeting were Miss Lillian Schoonmaker, Miss Clara Long, Miss Florence Serrell, Miss Elsie Jobes, Miss Priscilla Emmons, Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., Volney F. Green, Allen Taylor, George P. Smith, Clifford M. Crane and Seymour Smith.

Good Music a Feature.

Special music, vocal and instrumental, will be a feature of the young people's Christian Endeavor meeting tonight in Trinity Reformed Church. Visitors are cordially invited. Sunday-school Superintendent E. E. Anthony will lead the meeting.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A CHIP IN THE GONG.

IT INTERFERES WITH SOUNDING THE ALARM.

Small Fire Causes Considerable Excitement, and Gives the Firemen Some Sunday Evening Exercise.

A small fire made trouble for the department last night. It started in a small outbuilding in the rear of White's block on West Front street at 10. Edward Vail pulled Box 12. The house-gongs rang, but a small chip had caught in the armature of the whistle's mechanism and the general alarm was not sounded.

Chief Doane, assistant Murray and the driver dashed down Fifth street with the carriage-gong ringing, when they just escaped a bad collision at the corner of Madison avenue. A man driving a closed carriage down that avenue held up his horse when he heard the bell and the chief's wagon kept on. Just as the firemen reached the avenue the man hit his horse and started across their path.

The horses' heads struck and the wagon swung together. One spoke was taken from a wheel on the chief's carriage. The driver who was at fault hurried to Arlington avenue and disappeared.

The fire was easily extinguished after a line of hose had been laid through an alley. The cause is unknown. The damage may be $30. There was no insurance. The chip was taken from the gong, and the recall sounded as usual.

A PLAINFIELDER IN IT.

C. M. Ulrich Embarks in a Coal-Distributing Enterprise.

The Pennsylvania Coal Distributing Company has just been incorporated to deal in coal, masons and builders materials, oil, hay, grain, farm produce, and fertilizers; the company will also make contracts with transportation companies for the sale of coal and other materials; capital, $100,000; incorporators—Samuel M. Davis and Jacob K. VanDeVoort of Weston; George W. Judson of Jersey City; John J. Reynolds of Finderne; Frank D. Wilsey of New York, and Chas. M Ulrich of this city.

RECEIVER OF CHEESES.

Councilman See Acquires Another Title in the Legal World.

President William G. E. See of the Plainfield Common Council has been made permanent receiver of the American Lactose Company of 300 Greenwich street, N. Y., and South Plainfield, by Judge Truax of the Supreme Court, and is authorized to sell all the company's real estate and personal property. He has been carrying on the cheese factories of the company for four months, but the business was not profitable enough to continue, on account of the dry weather and decrease in the supply of milk. The receipts were $4,155, expenses $4 145, profit $10. The liabilities are $24 478, and estimated assets $20,028. The company operated eight cheese factories in New York and the South Plainfield plant.

Plainfield Council's Royal Treat.

Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, will bring to Plainfield next Thursday evening artists of national reputation for finished and artistic work. The character of the entertainments given by this council in the past has evoked the praise of both press and people, besides creating a desire for further endeavors in the same direction. The present concert is the outcome of numerous requests made of the council, and it is now proposed to offer a rare programme of choice and varied attractions. The success of the entertainment is already assured, and the capacity of the Casino will doubtless be taxed to the utmost.

The programme:

AN OIL-KING WAR.

Waring Brothers of Plainfield Bring Suit.

FIGHTING THE STANDARD OCTOPUS.

Suits to Recover $2,300,000 from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company—Cases Pending for Many Years—Alleged Discrimination in Favor of the Standard.

Waring Brothers & Co. of Plainfield are suing to recover $2,300,000 from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for the recovery of alleged excess of freight charges, said to have been levied in the interest of the Standard Oil Company. The summons was served fifteen years ago, but the statements and affidavits have just been filed. The other case, just argued in the State Supreme Court, is of more recent origin, and has for its object the prevention of the sale of an independent pipe line to the Standard.

Richard S. and Orville T. Waring are brothers and partners. They have filed the papers in two suits. The statement in the first sets forth that between November 30, 1873, and March 1, 1875, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company received from the Warings at various stations in the vicinity of Pittsburg 467 774 barrels of oil for transportation to Philadelphia, the freight charged to be the same as those levied on other shippers of oil, which at the time is said not to have exceeded 25 cents a barrel.

Nevertheless, the Waring Brothers say they were compelled to pay $1.75 per barrel, and the excess of this sum over the reasonable charges amounted to about $679,299. This sum the railroad company undertook on March 1, 1876, (recites the statement of the Warings), to pay when requested. But the defendants, although so requested, to pay the sum due on June 1 of the same year, refused the payment to the alleged damage of the plaintiffs in the suit of $800,000.

An affidavit by Richard S. Waring states that rival shippers (the Standard and affiliating corporations) were favored by "secret manipulations of freight, secret methods of rebates and the like", and he puts the alleged excessive charges at not less than $220,000, although he admits the exact amount is known only to the railroad company, to whose books he naturally cannot get access.

The statement of the second suit, begun in 1880, sets forth that the Warings had invested $1,000,000 in the oil business, and were making $200,000 per year, and employed the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to ship the oil at the same rates as those levied upon its competitors. Yet the railroad company, say the Warings, together with other Standard corporations and alliances, formed an alleged conspiracy by which the Warings were to be "worsted" on freight rates.

In pursuance of this alleged conspiracy rates were charged the Warings, so they say, at least four times as great as to other shippers, or $2 per barrel on 600,000 barrels, and out of these presumably unlawful charges the railroad company is said to have paid to the "co-conspirators" named above large sums of money to the end that the Warings would be driven out of the business. For this alleged plot the Warings demand damages in the sum of $1,500,000.

Emmanuel Revival.

A series of revival services are now being held in the Emmanuel Baptist Church, Fillmore avenue, by Rev. J. A. Johnson of Virginia, and G. W. Foster of Orange. There will be preaching every night of this week, Saturday night excepted.

—The C. Y. M. L. will open the Diocesan Union bowling tournament here tonight at a game with the Catholic Institute of Newark.

—A driver hurrying to catch the 8:28 train last evening started to go to the freighthouse by way of the lane to Park avenue. He turned too short, and the rig went over on its side. The harness was broken, but no other damage resulted.

—Wm. and David Arthur, who were arrested in North Plainfield by Chief Marshal Pangborn Saturday for having stolen doors in Woodbridge, have retained Attorney George DeMeza to defend them. Judge Cutler represents the plaintiff. The trial comes off this afternoon in Woodbridge.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A MASQUERADE BALL.

This Will Be the Most Brilliant Social Event Ever in Plainfield.

SCHOLASTIC WEDDING.

Plainfield's School Superintendent Suggests a Rational Union of Two Important Studies.

"Geography and History Combined" was the subject of Superintendent Maxson of Plainfield in the Union County Teachers Institute in Elizabeth last week. The old-time custom of teaching each subject as distinct from every other, was exposed in all its faultiness. According to the Psychological Law of the Association of Ideas, those ideas which stand isolated in the mind are weak and quickly forgotten; whereas by discovering points of connection with other ideas, and thus associating them closely together, both are intensified and rendered a more permanent possession of the mind.

Geographical facts are much more easily understood and remembered when they are vivified by being made the ground of some historic event, or their relation as cause or effect in national life is shown. For instance, take the names of our rivers and cities beginning with "Saint". In Canada, St. Johns, St. Lawrence, etc.; in the west of the United States, St. Paul, St. Louis; and in Florida, St. Johns, St. Augustine, St. Marys. These places mark the lines of the early occupancy of North America by Catholic settlers from France and Spain. In the Old World, St. Petersburg, Constantinople, Alexandria, embalm the names of the greatest men of their day.

It was the speaker's opinion that at some early day, geography, as geography, and history, as history, would give place in our schools to a combination study which would embrace both subjects.

THE TROLLEY LINE.

Protest Against Express Cars, and Plea for Local Transit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—When the big traction syndicate's agents come to this town, meaning business, they will want the earth in Plainfield's streets without limit or qualification; and they will doubtless express surprise if it is not granted them at once, with the grateful thanks of the community thrown in.

In very truth what benefit would accrue to Plainfield from the running of express cars and freight cars and combination cars over a line that simply parallels the Central Railroad, deporting from it at no point between Dunellen and Fanwood more than a few rods? It would be merely a duplication of present facilities, the one propelled by steam and the other by electricity.

Instead of a benefit it would in some respects be an injury. It would encumber some of our busy streets. It would, through occupation of our best trolley territory, render unprofitable, if not impossible, lines that we must have in order to have a comprehensive and satisfactory system of rapid transit. In districts lying away from the Central Railroad, rapid transit would, in other words, be postponed, if not altogether defeated, by the coming of a company which is willing to accomodate that portion of the town only already equipped with good facilities of inter-communication.

North Plainfield under the guidance of Mayor Saunders had the good fortune to secure rapid transit at right angles to the Central Railroad. Unless Plainfield secures similar right-angled lines, the building of the future, as in the past, will either hug the Central Railroad, or else it will follow the line that the foresight of Mr. Saunders secured for the borough.

The New York and Philadelphia Company wants to use our streets, and gather shekels from our people. It offers nothing of value in return—not one thing. Is it unreasonable then to ask that it build the rectilinear lines which, as a part of its own system, it can profitably operate? We refer to the Netherwood line, and the line leading towards, if not to, South Plainfield.

We say, with emphasis, this should be made the condition of the use of the streets of the people of Plainfield. And the Voters Who Walk should be very sure that their ballots say as much when they go to primaries now or to the polls next month. ONE OF THE WALKERS.

—The Plainfield Bowling Club will play a scrub team tomorrow evening.

CUPID SPOILED IT.

Jimmy Carstone Married the Widow Harpinger, But Married in Vain.

Over in Linthicum the postmaster died a short time ago, and while such an event is about as extraordinary as a resignation from such a source, still the people of that village would have survived the dispensation without much worry but for subsequent correlated happenings.

The postmaster had been a worthless sort of a fellow, whose only claim for the position was that he was the father of eight helpless children and was too lazy to work. After his accession to office his wife presented him with a ninth pledge of her love; so, when he died, the larger taxpayers of the community concluded it would be more economical to let the government support the widow than to have her a charge upon the county. Consequently they busied themselves in her behalf, drawing up a petition which they caused to be numerously signed and forwarding it in haste to their congressman.

All might have been well for the widow but for old Jimmy Carstone; a relic of the Mexican war, whose many acquaintances had utterly wearied of maintaining him in chronic inanition and who had decided to work him off upon the post office department. As a result of this contest of interest feeling ran high. Jimmy and his partisans were denounced as most unfeeling wretches who were seeking to take bread out of the mouths of the widow and fatherless, while Widow Harpinger's forces were roundly charged with lack of patriotism in opposing the gallant veteran of a glorious war. This order of things, or disorder rather, continued for many weeks, until the community was completely torn up. Small boys scratched and bit over it, families divided upon it, and wives threatened to separate from their husbands; good deacons so fell out that they refused to speak to one another upon the street. The pastors of the two village churches voted themselves a long vacation and took it, in order to avoid becoming irremediably lost in the contention.

Petitions and counter petitions were forwarded to Washington and the congressman was driven nearly crazy by the mail he received from Linthicum. He replied in piteous entreaty, urging upon the warring factions to come to peace if they would save the party from utter ruin.

Jimmy Carstone, having all the leisure in the world, deliberated greatly and much over the situation, with the result that he finally decided upon a magnificent coup; at least he so regarded it, for he chuckled very audibly for many minutes afterward with the greatest satisfaction. Giving his scant hair an extra touch or two with his brush and regretting he had not a Sunday-best suit, he deliberately called upon his fair rival.

"Widdy Harpinger," he began bluntly and in a most businesslike manner, thar's but one way outen this yere muss. You an' me must get married."

"Laws, Mr. Carstone," simpered the widow, "an' Luke Harpinger on'y been dead lessen two month."

"Widdy, this yere gover'ment haint erwaitin' fur nobody. Folks is so sot that the only way ter harmonize is fur us ter come together."

Jimmy was not eloquent but he was very earnest, with the result that on the following morning he and the widow walked over to 'Squire Benson's office, where they were quickly made man and wife. Every one was delighted at the diplomacy of Jimmy and the happy issue out of the snarl; so a merry surprise party organized that evening and burst upon the bride and groom.

While thus assembled and all were pretending to listen to a long story from Jimmy concerning the heroic and prominent part he took in the battle of Churubusco, a boy brought in a telegram for 'Squire Benson, who had been master of ceremonies. The sender was the congressman and the message read:

"Despairing of harmony between factions have named Peter Haggerty postmaster."

Jimmy is now trying to get an attorney to institute divorce proceedings, as his wife promptly upon receipt of this intelligence betook herself and nine children to the poorhouse.—Chicago Tribune.

Was Supplying the Deficiency.

In his youth and inexperience it occurred to him that he might with profit address a few inquiries to the small brother of the being he adored.

"What did sister say," he asked, "when she was told I was waiting for her?"

"She said," answered the child, simply, "that she hadn't the face to come down, but she's trying to fix one up now."

And with that he smiled sweetly as little folks are wont to do when they have stabbed people to the heart.—Detroit Tribune.

Some Nature Hints.

There was a tender light on the girl's face as she stood looking at the sunset. The young man who was supposed to be enjoying the view with her, but who was in reality lost in rapturous contemplation of her, almost feared to breathe lest he should disturb the ecstasy of the moment for her. By and by she sighed a deep sigh of utter contentment and turned to him: "Thank you so much for bringing me to this lovely place," she said. "I know now exactly what shade of blue goes with crimson, and I have the plan of a stunning afternoon gown in my mind."—N. Y. World.

THE LOGIC OF TRADE.

Goods Purchased Abroad Are Paid For With the Products of Our Labor.

A correspondent in Chicago sends us the following paragraph, which he has clipped from The Tribune of that city:

"Mr. Lincoln said once: 'If the United States has $40 and needs a ton of iron and buys it in Europe, it has the ton of iron, but has parted with the money. If that sum of money is spent for a ton of iron made in this country, then we have both the iron and the $40.'"

He tells us that he has not been able to find this in Mr. Lincoln's writings, and that he has applied to the Chicago Tribune for the citation without getting any response, and he wants to know what we think about it.

It makes no difference whether Mr. Lincoln ever said what is here ascribed to him or not. The greatest men have made egregious blunders on economical questions. George Washington was a believer in continental money when it was first issued and thought that people who made difficulties about taking it ought to be hanged. He changed his mind afterward. What Mr. Lincoln is reported to have said in this paragraph is not true. When we buy a ton of iron abroad, we do not pay for it with money. We pay for it with our goods, the products of our labor. It is only the balance of trade that is settled with money. Sometimes this balance is for us, and sometimes it is against us. Therefore the real question is whether we get more for the products of our labor by buying a particular thing abroad than we could by making it at home. Of course this glib paragraph is equally applicable to all other articles of import as to iron. Let us see how it would read as to some of the others: "If the United States has $10 and needs a chest of tea and buys it in China, it has the chest of tea, but it has parted with the money. If that sum of money is spent for a chest of tea grown in this country, then we have both the tea and the $10." The growing of tea in this country is only a matter of expense. The same may be said of coffee. It is only a question of hothouses and labor.

This principle is equally applicable to other countries also. We have no patent on it. British philosophers might say, and, in fact, did say before the repeal of the corn laws: "If Great Britain has £10 and needs a ton of wheat and buys it in America, it has the ton of wheat, but has parted with the money. If that sum of money is spent for a ton of wheat grown in this country, then we have both the wheat and the £10." In short, the idea embodied in the paragraph quoted would put an end to commerce and tie up all the mercantile shipping in the world. It would show that mankind, from the dawn of history till now, has been laboring under a tremendous delusion on the subject of trade, and that the great commercial cities of the world, Tyre, Carthage, Venice, Amsterdam, London and New York, were and are making a great mistake in not filling up their harbors and stopping all ingress and egress, except perhaps for passengers with the very smallest allowance of baggage.—New York Post.

Yorkshire Will Pay More For Wool.

The Sydney Mail has been discussing the probable effect of an American demand upon the prices of Australian wools. Hitherto buyers from this country have been taking no scoured wool at all and have selected the best qualities of Australian grease wool in order to import as little dirt as possible consistently with getting the lowest rate of duty. Now that both greasy and scoured wools are free they are quite likely to buy only the scoured in order to avoid paying freight on dirt. This leads the Manchester Textile Mercury to reflect that "the conclusion of the whole matter seems to be that the boon of free wool granted to the States implies dearer wool for the Yorkshire manufacturer. The American manufacturer will not be sorry to hear that Yorkshire has to pay more for its wool."—Journal of Commerce.

How Christian Endeavor Grows.

At the Cleveland convention the total enrollment of Christian Endeavor societies in the world was 33,679. The enrollment Oct. 6 was 35,079, a remarkable net increase in three months.—Secretary Baer's Report.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR BRIEFS.

The Galesburg (Ills.) District union awards each year a banner to the society that does the best all around work during the year.

Of the 25 Disciples' churches in the maritime provinces, ten already have Christian Endeavor societies, six having been organized this last year.

The Chinese national convention was truly cosmopolitan. It included American, English, Scotch, German, Japanese and Chinese delegates.

At the annual Christian conference held at Petersham, New South Wales, by the Petersham and District Ministerial association the "interval meeting," held just before the evening service of the first day, was devoted to a Christian Endeavor rally, led by Rev. Alexander Miller, president of the colonial union.

Joplin (Mo.) union has doubled its number of societies since June 1, having organized three new ones in the city and one in an adjoining town.

The Chambered Nautilus.

This is the ship of pearl which poets feign
Sails the unshadowed main.
The venturous bark that flings
On the sweet summer wind its purpled wings
In gulfs enchanted, where the siren sings
And coral reefs lie bare,
Where the cold sea-maids rise to sun their streaming hair.

Its webs of living gauze no more unfurl.
Wrecked is the ship of pearl,
And every chambered cell,
Where its dim dreaming life was wont to dwell,
As the frail tenant shaped his growing shell,
Before thee lies revealed—
Its irised ceiling rent, its sunless crypt unsealed.

Year after year beheld the silent toil
That spread his lustrous coil.
Still, as the spiral grew,
He left the last year's dwelling for the new.
Stole with soft step its shining archway through,
Built up its idle door,
Stretched in its last found home and knew the old no more.

Thanks for the heavenly message brought by thee,
Child of the wandering sea,
Cast from her lap, forlorn!
From thy dead lips a clearer note is born
Than ever Triton blew from wreathed horn!
While on my ear it rings,
Through the deep caves of thought I hear a voice that sings:

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The Ad. Man.

You may talk about your editors, who sit in easy chairs
And try to boss the whole machine and put on lots of airs,
And seek to make the people think it's what they have to say
That keeps the business on the move and makes the paper pay,
But don't you never think it, for the whole truth simply is
The editor's not in it with that huge conceit of his;
For there's only one essential in the whole newspaper plan—
Success depends alone upon the advertising man.

—Nixon Waterman.

Lucile.

Lucile
Had acquired that matchless, unconscious appeal
To the homage which none but a churl would withhold—
That caressing and exquisite grace—never bold,
Ever present—which just a few women possess
From a heartful repose, undisturbed by the stress
Of unquiet emotions, her soft cheek had drawn
A freshness as pure as the twilight of dawn.
Her figure, though slight, had revived every where
The luxurious proportions of youth, and her hair,
Once shorn as an offering to passionate love,
Now floated or rested redundant above
Her airy, pure forehead and throat, gathered loose,
Under which, by one violet knot, the profuse
Milk white folds of a cool modest garment reposed,
Rippled faint by the breast they half hid, half disclosed.
But her simple attire, thus in all things revealed
The fine art which so artfully all things concealed.

Some faces show
The last act of a tragedy in their regard.
Though the first scenes be wanting, it yet is not hard
To divine, more or less, what the plot may have been,
And what sort of actors have passed o'er the scene.
And whenever I gaze on the face of Lucile,
With its pensive and passionless languor, I feel
That some feeling hath burnt there—burnt out, and burnt up
Health and hope. So you feel when you gaze down the cup
Of extinguished volcanoes. You judge of the fire
Once there by the ravage you see—the desire,
By the apathy left in its wake, and that sense
Of a moral, immovable, mute innocence.

—Owen Meredith.

The Wife's Because.

It is not because your heart is mine—mine only
Mine alone;
It is not because you chose me, weak and lonely,
For your own;
Not because the earth is fairer, and the skies
Spread above you
Are more radiant for the shining of your eyes,
That I love you!
It is not because the world's perplexed meaning
Grows more clear,
And the parapets of heaven, with angels leaning,
Seem more near,
And nature sings of praise with all her voices
Since yours spoke,
Since with my silent heart that now rejoices
Love awoke.

Nay, not even because your hand holds heart and life
At your will,
Soothing, hushing all its discord, making strife
Calm and still;
Teaching Trust to fold her wings nor ever roam
From her nest;
Teaching Love that her securest, safest home
Must be rest.

But because this human love, though true and sweet—
Yours and mine—
Has been sent by love more tender, more complete,
More divine,
That it leads our hearts to rest at last in heaven.
Far above you
Do I take thee as a gift that God has given—
And I love you!

—Adelaide Procter.

The Deaf Mute.

The silent! Those who cannot hear
The joyous, thrilling song of bird;
Whose closed ears have never heard
The tones of those they hold most dear;

Whose lips are mute, who cannot share
Together love's sweet low toned words;
Whose souls have n'er been waked or stirred;
By cheerful sounds of morning air.

Alas, for them, who are denied
Expression's dear and sweet relief;
Whose joy unsung and unsobbed grief
Within their pent up bosoms hide.

—L. M. Gregg.

Presumption.

A grain of sand that fain would stay
Resistless ocean's power;
A drop of rain that dares to say,
"I am alone the shower;"
A firefly claiming through the wold
The source of light to be;
A little mind that seeks to hold
And gauge infinity.

In a Country Practice

I

Dr Best, the old professor and king of the medical school was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced slight young student who stood before him. The young man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before, he had graduated at the top of the class and as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellows as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr Best was a New York physician of wide reputation and had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges both because it was his own college and because the few weeks he gave to his lectures consisted, save one short the only vacation that he could

WHEN CONGRESS MEETS

Tariff Fight To Be Continued as Bitterly as Ever.

Supplemental Tariff Bills To Be Pushed Actively—Sugar Will Be a Special Mark for Attack—Fourth Class Postmasters Protest Against Existing Systems.

Washington, Nov. 19.—When the senate reconvenes on the first Monday in next month, unless the programme mapped out by certain senators should be rearranged, there will probably be a renewal of the clash on the tariff question.

Senator Harris states that he intends to push the supplemental tariff bills for action as soon as possible after congress convenes (which probably means immediately after the holiday recess). This is in accord with the statements he made on the floor of the senate at the time these so-called "popgun" tariff bills were referred to the finance committee. The bills relating to free iron ore, coal and barbed wire came back from the finance committee, practically as they went there, but the bill placing sugar on the free list was pigeon-holed and a substitute was reported, placing a uniform duty of 40 per cent. on all sugars, thereby doing away with the differential one-eighth duty that operates to the advantage of the refiner, and the discriminating one-tenth duty that operates against the German exporter.

Democratic senators, not among those classed as "conservatives," express doubts as to the desirability of attempting to pass any of the tariff bills now on the senate calendar at the next session.

One of these senators says he appreciates the fact that there are leading men in his own party who, aided and abetted by republicans, will use every effort to prevent the present sugar schedule being amended and that to attempt it would result in nothing more than the consumption of valuable time that would be needed in the consideration of measures upon which political lines would not be drawn and upon which the country is demanding action by congress.

To make sugar free, in view of the letter of Secretary Carlisle, and, in view of the small receipts under the new law so far, this senator insists, would be utterly impossible. And to seek to change the sugar schedule in any way, he thought, would be equally unwise as it would open up anew the tariff debate and start a flood of debate, that, once unloosened could not be checked.

As a result of First Assistant Postmaster General Jones' request in his annual report for legislation to prevent the boycotting of minor postoffices, the postoffice department has received a large number of letters from postmasters who say they have suffered to a great extent by the system. The compensation of postmasters of the fourth-class is based mainly upon the cancellation of postage stamps upon matter actually mailed at their offices. Owing to political differences or other personal feeling, the compensation of postmasters is sometimes seriously curtailed by mailing letters on the cars, or sending them to an adjoining postoffice, thereby reducing the postmaster's salary. This is carried to a grievious extent in some communities and is such an interference with the usual and regular disposition of mails that in the judgment of First Assistant Postmaster General Jones it calls for legislation by congress.

The executive committee of the American Bimetallic league have called a silver conference to be eld at St. Louis, Nov. 27, at which the present situation will be fully discussed and the policy to be hereafter pursued by the friends of the free coinage of silver will be decided upon.

THE EARTHQUAKES IN ITALY.

Whole Villages Reported To Have Been Destroyed.

Rome, Nov. 19.—Reports of disasters caused by the earthquakes in southern Italy are still meagre, but they suffice to show that there has been great loss of life. Procopia, a village of 1,200 inhabitants in Reggio di Calabria, as been obliterated. Virtually all the buildings were thrown into ruins. The number of deaths is not known, but in one church 47 were buried alive under fallen walls. The last authoritative report was that the list of dead was well above 60. In another village of the same province eight persons were killed outright by falling buildings. The damage to property has been enormous. Troops and officials are going to the help of suffering districts. King Humbert has sent several donations from his private purse.

Two Italians Asphyxiated.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Joseph Satali, 47 years old, and a man named Caslindi, aged about 40 years, Italians, were found unconscious at 162 Sackett street, where Satali kept a shoe shop, from the effects of escaping gas. Both were removed to the Long Island hospital, where it was said that their condition was critical. It is supposed that the men while under the influence of liquor turned the gas on accidentally after they had extinguished it.

Cardinal Gibbons Goes to Rome.

Rome, Nov. 19.—The state department of the vatican learns that Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, will embark for Europe on Dec. 2, and imbark for Europe on Dec. 5, and immediaely after landing at Genoa Europe two months and will attend the consistory.

Railway Men Starving.

Denver, Nov. 19.—After a careful canvass a committee has reported that 215 families of American Railway union men are on the verge of starvation, and 400 unmarried men in consequence of the blacklist enforced by the railways against the men who struck last summer.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

A number of the High School boys practiced basket ball Friday afternoon on the Willow avenue grounds. Two sides were chosen by J. V. Rittenhouse '97 and Nathan Lane, Jr., '94, and after a long and exciting contest the side captained by Rittenhouse won by the score 18 to 16. A second team composed of the smaller High School boys is being organized, J. V. Rittenhouse will be captain of it. Practice in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium has been begun. The first team of the High School will probably play four games at the Y. M. C. A. fair, one with the High School scrub team, one with a team from Leal's School, one with the North Plainfield School team and one with a team composed of Y. M. C. A. boys not attending school. Candidates for the High School first are requested to report to the manager, Charles B. Morse '95. J. V. Rittenhouse will receive applications for the second.

A declamation was given this morning in Assembly Hall by Henry B. Drake '95.

The Senior Class held their regular weekly newspaper report.

There was a meeting of the Senior Class todyy at recess to discuss the class Thanksgiving Day spread. After a long discussion, it was decided not to have any Thanksgiving Day spread. Class day exercises sometime during June will probably take its place. Edgar I. Serrell resigned as vice-president of the class, his successor has not yet been elected.

Basketball practice was continued in the new Y. M. C. A. gymnasium this afternoon. The boys are becoming quite interested in the game and quite a number attend practice. The makeup of the High School team has not been decided on as yet as there are a large number of candidates for it.

NORTH PLAINFIELD SCHOOL NOTES.

The trial examination for the scholarship in the Plainfield Manual Training School, offered by John G. Dalziel took place last week. The examination consisted of tests in freehand drawing and definitions. Those who contested for the scholarship were James K. Arnold, Jr., John H. VanWinkle, Jr., William Lolzeaux, Charles Everett, William DeCamp and R. P. McCullough. After a close examination of the papers, Mr. Dalziel decided that James K. Arnold, Jr., of the Junior Class, had prepared the best paper, and that John H. VanWinkle, also of the Junior Class came next.

The library is again in working order, and books are being regularly distributed. Instead of putting the library under the charge of the boys, it has been decided to put it in the hands of the girls this year. The librarians are Miss Maud French, Miss Ada Woolston and Miss Lillian Pope.

The regular weekly debate in the Junior Class took place Friday afternoon. The subject debated was "Which has done most for civilization: the carpenter, or the blacksmith?" After a very close debate, Miss Petrie decided in favor of defenders of the blacksmith.

The Ninth and Tenth grades played the Seventh and Eighth grades a game of football Friday afternoon on the Summit avenue grounds. After a rather one-sided game, the Seventh and Eighth eleven won by the score of 26 to 0. Raymond Carroll and Herbert Richardson of the Plainfield High School did the brilliant playing for the winning side, while Herbert Moore distinguished himself on the losers.

A number of visitors attended the morning exercises Friday. Among them were familiar faces from the classes of '93 and '94. Plainfield High School also was represented.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The fair accounts will be settled at the meeting of John Hand Camp, S. of V., tonight.

—Friendship Lodge, No. 4, Daughters of Rebecca, is growing steadily. Dr. L. S. Pocock has brought in 35 propositions during the past few months. Six initiations will be made at the next meeting.

—Thomas Ransom, who while despondent committed suicide in Somerville Saturday, was a comrade of Winfield Scott Post, and that organization will assemble tomorrow morning at 8 in their rooms to attend his funeral.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1. Our price 45c and 90c.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

J. W. Coddington went South last night.

Miss Florence Frazee of Newark is the guest of Miss Marguerite Coriell of Church street.

Theodore Lister of Philadelphia is the guest of his brother, Charles C. Lister of North avenue.

A daughter was born last Wednesday to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shultise of 26 Summit avenue.

Randolph Giddis has gone on a hunting expedition to Mountain Grove, Penn., and expects to get plenty of game.

Miss Anderson of New Brunswick spent Sunday at the home of her uncle, Councilman E. H. Bird and wife, Elm place.

The new addition on Mrs. C. P. Leggett's house is completed. Ground will soon be broken for the erection of a new barn.

William Nicholson, formerly an employe of Charles C. Lister of North avenue, has gone to Allentown to accept a new position.

Dr. L. S. Pocock of Noah Dove Encampment will go tomorrow to Trenton to attend the grand encampment as a representative of Plainfield.

Gotfried Herold, who formerly resided in Plainfield, but now a resident of Brooklyn, spent Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Windham, Arlington Hotel, North Plainfield.

Mrs. Baldwin of Newark, president of a W. C. T. U., spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Vanderbeek of First place. She is on the way to the South, where she will remain during the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morse of Franklin place gave a dinner party Saturday evening to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day. The party was a family affair, as the guests were all relatives resident in the vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Emmons of 15 Jackson avenue, entertained sixteen guests Thursday evening at euchre. Refreshments were served, and all had a good time. The next similar gathering of the party will be at James Buckle's, 59 Westervelt avenue, Friday evening, Nov. 30.

Cards are out for the wedding of Miss Myra Rivers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Flournoy Rivers, to Tiemann Newell Horn of Plainfield, Lieutenant of the Second Regt. of Artillery, in the Church of the Messiah, Pulaski, Tennessee, Wednesday afternoon, November 28. Mr. and Mrs. Horn will be at home at Ft. Riley, Kansas, after Jan. 1.

A Firm Believer.

"The Bible, if I remember right," said Mr. Hungry Higgins, "says that six days a man shalt labor, and do all his work."

"Guess you are right," assented Mr. Weary Watkins, wondering what was coming next.

"Well, I allow that I have done as much as six days' work in my life, and if I don't read the text wrong that is all the work a man is permitted to do. It says 'do all thy work, don't it?'"

Nobody Helped Him.

A story of Scotch honesty comes from Dundee. A small boy had taken the prize for an exceptionally well drawn map. After the examination the teacher, a little doubtful, asked the lad:

"Who helped you with this map, James?"

"Nobody, sir."

"Come, now, tell me the truth. Didn't your brother help you?"

"No, sir; he did it all."

Prof. Virchow's Answer.

Professor Virchow was asked by an inquisitive American recently at what hour he was accustomed go to bed.

"When my day's work is done," he answered. "It may be 1 o'clock or 2 or 5, but it's my rule not to sleep until I have finished what I have to do.

In spite of this irregularity of habit, Professor Virchow at 72 is a very energetic and active man.

A Ten Thousand Dollar Watch.

Attorney-General Hensel, of Pennsylvania, whose home is at Lancaster, sometimes astonishes his friends by showing what he calls his ten thousand dollar watch. Mr. Hensel and some others at Lancaster subscribed to the stock of a watch factory established there some years ago, and the manager of the factory made and gave to each of the subscribers a handsome gold watch. The factory afterward failed, and the subscribers have only the watches to show for their money.

Ganisquaw's Name to Change.

James E. Kelly, the young sculptor whose statues have given him a name, is a member of the Seneca tribe. His Indian cognomen is Ganisquaw, meaning a pale face without wife, but, as it is announced that he is about to have a young lady change her name for his the Senecas will have to give him another also.

[illegible] for Art.

One afternoon when a perfect gale of wind was raging, a Brooklyn gentleman, in feeble health, was struggling to reach his home, aided by his wife.

Just as they reached the corner of a street a huge tin chimney pot was torn from the roof of a house by the power of the wind and dashed to the ground just in front of the feeble gentleman and his wife.

"Good heavens!" cried the gentleman, "that was a narrow escape for us."

"If it had struck us it would have killed us," she replied.

The two stopped for a moment to examine the chimney pot—more dangerous in a high wind than a bombshell—but just as they were scrutinizing it a window near by was opened, a female head was thrust out and, in a shrill tone, she shouted:

"You needn't think you're going to carry that off, 'cause it b'longs to my house!"—N. Y. Mercury.

A Charming Romance.

He could not explain her indifference. Sometimes he thought she was trying to conceal the love she had for him, and sometimes he thought she hadn't any.

"You are heartless," he said to her one evening in the twilight shadows.

"Yes," she admitted trembling, "some one has taken it away from me."

Upon this he rushed away and purchased a large and elegant engagement ring.—Detroit Free Press.

The Bargain Habit.

"Is that picture just like the original?" she inquired.

"Precisely," replied the art dealer, "excepting that it has been reduced."

"Oh, has it been reduced?" she exclaimed. "I'll take it before somebody else gets it, then. Send it to my house with the bill."—Washington Star.

Spoken from the Heart.

"There is one sign that should be placed over every letterbox in the country."

"What is that?"

"Post no bills."—Pearson's.

REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:
I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.
I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.
JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:
For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.
So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.
I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.
PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

Great Underwear Sale!

Having recently purchased an entire stock of Ladies' and Children's Underwear of a Plainfield firm, we are prepared to offer you the GREATEST BARGAINS ever offered in this line, and for one week only we will close out this stock in connection with our own for 25 per cent. lower than any house in the city can buy them for. This is a bonafide, not a catch-penny sale.
25 dozen ladies' red flannel vests, all sizes.....75c, worth $1.35
18 dozen children's " " " .....50c, worth 75c
20 " " white merino vests, all sizes.....25c, worth 50c
We have the pants to match at the same prices.

Toys! Toys! Toys!
We always take pleasure in pleasing the little ones, and have purchased every Toy that has been manufactured. We have them both for boys and girls and nothing would make them happier than a useful Toy. It will be to your interest to price our goods when in our store.

Housefurnishing Goods.
We are happy to say that this department has proved us a grand success. The cause of the success was our LOW PRICES. For this week we offer you the following specials. Porcelain bowl and pitcher 65 and 75c, worth 90c and $1 10; milk pails 10 qt. 27c, worth 40c; 12 qt 33c, worth 45c; a pretty line of bird cages from $1 35 to $1 98. These prices are 20 per cent. lower than any other house. Just received a large and pretty assortment of Glassware suitable for the Holidays.

Coats. Coats.
We can truthfully say that we have sold more coats in the past week than any other house in the city. Why did we do it? Very easy answered—Our styles, prices and workmanship can not be excelled, and the public know a good thing when they see it. We can always save you money if you intend buying a Coat or Cape.

AS THE PRESS ADVISED.

No Democratic Ticket in the Local Campaign.

After mature consideration the Democrats of the City of Plainfield have decided that they consider it inexpedient and unwise to run a ticket in the present municipal campaign. We reach this decision after looking over the field in all its bearings. Though we deem it just to say that we are as much attached to the principles of the Democratic party as ever, and are as anxious to have its exponents placed in City, State or Nation as ever in our political history, we are still partisans for principle.

Finally, Democrats, though defeated in the recent election, we are by no means crushed; we say "stand firm", and our enemy will find us in coming contests as of old, a solid phalanx contending for tariff reform, equal laws and justice.

THE COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE.

Not So Very Much Money in It, After All.

(From The Elizabeth Journal)

The Union Democrat of Rahway has something interesting to say about the County Clerk's office. As Judge Hyer has had considerable opportunity to know the aggregate of court costs and expenses, which form a large proportion of the County Clerk's fees, he may be said to speak with authority on this matter of the County Clerk's net salary.

Mr. Howard will take personal charge of the office, and we understand will, for a time at least, retain the present able deputies, E. D. Moffett and Mr. Norman, for the responsible duties devolving upon them.

In this connection it may not be out of place to disabuse the minds of many people of the idea that the office of County Clerk is one of great emolument and an easy berth generally. It no doubt affords a good income for the incumbent, but all that is credited to the office does not go into his pocket, as he has to pay out of it his deputies, clerks, copyists, and various other expenses, and then for the responsibilities he has to assume his pay is none too great. Some may think it is a mere clerical position, but it is much more, as he has to be responsible for all transactions in his office, and we know of cases where clerks have had to pay out thousands of dollars for some error in the matter of searches and other transactions where the transfers of property have been affected and buyers and sellers damaged by such errors. In our own county, we are told, that some years ago a deputy (now deceased) who assumed the responsibility in that department, made an error which cost him about $10,000, and which necessitated the loss to him of his property to make it good to the injured party. Hence it will be realized that such a responsible office should carry with it more than the ordinary remuneration for work where such great responsibilities do not exist.

"It is a pleasure to sell Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Stickney & Dentler, druggists, Republic, Ohio, "Because a customer after once using it is almost certain to call for it when again in need of such a medicine. We sell more of it than of any other cough medicine we handle, and it always gives satisfaction." For cough, colds and croup, it is without an equal. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TOO LATE.

Why is it all men crave for wealth?
Ah, wealth untold
Is good enough, yet is not health
Worth more than gold?
And as each day, that ne'er returns,
But joins the past,
Comes, and goes by, the rich man toils
Hard at his task.

No time for thought, or anything
But just his wealth.
Can he be dreaming life's for aye?
Now fails his health,
And death comes in and beckons him away.
Pleasures ne'er spent
Are lost, for this rich man
Spent not, nor lent.

Good that were in his hands to do
He left undone,
Forgetting in his race for wealth
Life's setting sun!
His thoughts all lay in how to make
Old dollar seven;
And then, too late, he found for gold
There's no demand in Heaven.

SHE FURNISHED DETAILS.

Stared Out of Patience, a Young Woman Rebuked Her Fellow-Passengers.

She sat in the corner of a Broadway cable car nearest the gripman. She knew that she was the cynosure of all eyes among the passengers, and she felt the situation keenly. It was of no use to affect unconsciousness, for the color came and went with the rapidity of the gripman's going, giving the lie to any such affectation, and she knew it. Every block the car traveled added to the attention she attracted, and the tittering became more and more audible. She had but one course open to her, and she took it so quickly that the well-dressed men and women passengers who had been amused at her appearance were surprised.

"I know that you are all looking at me," she said, suddenly sitting forward in her seat so as to command a full view of the car, "and I know that you are all thoroughly enjoying yourselves at my expense. I'm glad of it, and for fear you will lack important details when you describe me to your relatives and friends, I'll give them to you myself. To begin with, the style of this bonnet, which amuses you so much, was copied from one worn by my grandmother and her grandmother before her.

"The pattern of this dress dates back so far that I can leave it entirely to your imagination without the slightest fear of you antedating its time. The brooch, which is, as you will speak of it when you go home, as large as a small-sized teacup, has been in the family since its earliest representatives landed on Plymouth Rock, and this gingham umbrella has a history that would keep your metropolitan humorists busy for a year and be worth its weight in gold as a fecund source of inspiration. The basket speaks for itself, and needs no further description.

"I forgot to mention that these cotton gloves have officiated at fifteen family weddings and ninety-six christenings, to say nothing of outside events, which might be classified as remote and occasional. My age, of course, is immaterial, as you'll each have your different versions, but a hint even on this may be useful; therefore keep it between thirty and sixty, and favor me all you can. If there is any other little detail about my personality you would care to know, just mention it and I'll make it clear.

"You see I've read a great deal, and know the interest you city people take in these things, and I should feel real put out if you failed to grasp particulars for the want of a little enlightenment. And then you are so polite that, although from the country and without your opportunities of getting up in good breeding, I naturally try to do my best to emulate you in matters of courtesy."

By this time those among the passengers who were not buried behind friendly newspapers found objects of the greatest interest to observe on the street, and the speaker waited vainly for a reply. Finally she settled back in her corner with a sigh, and said in a disappointed tone:

"That's the worst of detail; it always detracts from the main object."—N. Y. Herald.

The Tailor's Apology.

A tailor living in Swinemunde-strass, after receiving a "sound cudgeling" has had likewise to apologize in the "agony" column of a Berlin newspaper.

The advertisement is as follows: "I herewith declare that the journeyman blacksmith, Herr Karl X., is a very honorable man—most honorable; and I take this opportunity of withdrawing the most defamatory charges I made against him. Herr Karl X. has already given me a good thrashing for the said slanderous words. But Herr Schiedsman (the interceder) informs me that Herr Karl X. will not do so again if I state in a public newspaper that he is an honorable man, and put a thaler in the poor box."—London Daily News.

ALEXANDER'S FUNERAL

The Last of the White Czar.

Imposing Ceremonies at the Russian Capital—The Whole City in Mourning—Great Sorrow Apparent on All Sides—The Wedding of Nicholas II. Will Be Quiet.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 19.—The final honors were paid to Alexander III. in the fortress this morning at 10 o'clock. The services were most impressive and touching. The last opportunity to view the remains of the dead czar was offered yesterday. He lay in state in the palace and was viewed by thousands. The day was raw and foggy. A rain almost as fine as mist had fallen intermittently and the streets were slippery and dirty with a thin layer of mud. In the morning it was impossible to see more than half way across the great Alexander square. Nevertheless the crowd waiting to see the dead czar's face moved slowly along the side of the square nearest the palace. It was a crowd of thousands, yet so large is the open space before the imperial palace that from the opposite side they appeared only as an instinct black mass.

Opposite the entrance to the palace two squadrons of cuirassier guards, about sixty feet apart, sat motionless on their horses. The even, unbroken lines of eagled helmets glittered faintly through the mist, but they did little to break the monotony of the scene. Hundreds of carriages were in the waiting column. On foot were persons of all classes, the heavily booted peasants, the girls and women from a distance with their flaunting caps and colored gowns, and the officers and rich traders of the capital. They all but filled the open space before the palace, leaving only a narrow lane to the courtyard. As the grand dukes, generals and high noblemen passed, the officers in the throng saluted and the others uncovered respectfully—almost reverently. From the palace roof above the courtyard gateway the imperial yellow standard with the black eagles floated languidly at half-mast.

As the great bell of St. Isaac's sounded the hour of noon above the clatter of smaller clocks, the cuirassiers moved slightly as if in preparation for a change of programme. Soon fourteen mounted trumpeters emerged from the courtyard. Behind them four heralds in black velvet and white lace and Charles I. hats with long feathers rode on horses richly caparisoned and led by grooms in black cloaks with white fur collars. A trumpeter and a herald took position in front of each squadron. The horsemen bared their sabres, faced about toward the palace, and, after three fanfares, a groom handed a large white scroll to a herald from one of the squadrons. The herald then read in a loud voice that the final honors would be paid to Alexander III. Monday in the fortress, the service beginning at 10:30 o'clock. The four trumpeters led the four heralds back to the palace. The squadron wheeled and rode away, the one to escort a trumpeter and herald through the arch opposite the palace and up the Great Morskoi street, the other to escort a trumpeter and herald past the admiralty building and out toward St. Isaac's. The heralds went through the city the whole afternoon proclaiming before all the cathedrals and in all open spaces that Alexander III. would be buried on Monday.

The last state service before the funeral was held in the fortress cathedral at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Representatives of foreign rulers had places near the imperial family. Clifton P. Breckenridge, the new American ambassador, represented President Cleveland. Services were held simultaneously in all the churches of the capital.

The Prince of Wales and the King of Denmark placed wreaths on the dead czar's bier in the afternoon. Prince Bismarck sent a wreath of forget-me-nots.

The French sent more mourners than any other foreign nation. A grand popular service was held in the cathedral in the evening.

It is reported that the czar has ordered that his wedding shall not be celebrated with the usual pomp. Princess Alix's trousseau, made in Darmstadt and Paris, has been altered since Alexander III's death. The bridal robe of white satin, inwrought with precious stones, has been rendered less striking by the abundant use of crape, and twelve mourning gowns have been added to her outfit. Many elaborate costumes which were prepared before the tragedy of Livadia could be foreseen have been laid aside. The rooms which have been refitted in the Winter palace for the Princess Alix are those which were occupied by the wife of Nicholas I.

It is said that Nicholas II. has summoned Miljoutin, ex-minister of war, and a confidential adviser of Alexander II., to aid him in reforming the Russian ministry. Privy Councillor Durnovo, it is said will retire from the ministry of the interior to make way for M. de Plewe; Dr. Witte will retain the finance portfolio, and the Grand Duke Sergius will become governor-general of St. Petersburg. These changes will be made immediately after the funeral.

An Actor Killed.

Chester, Pa., Nov. 19.—Charles Smith, a member of "The South before the War" dramatic company, was killed yesterday on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad as the company were leaving for New York. He was standing on the rear platform of the car and when a connection was being made he was jostled off and crushed between the bumpers. He was 35 years of age and lived at Louisville, Ky. His remains are now at the coroner's office.

Murderous Italian Arrested.

Denver, Nov. 19.—Saturday night the denizens of "Strangler's Row" were startled by screams from No. 1330 Twentieth street. The police rushed into the house and found Marie Andrews struggling with an Italian. He had his hand closed tightly about her throat and fought savagely. In his possession the police found a dirk and a pistol.

W. C. T. U. STORMS CLEVELAND.

Susan B. Anthony, the Veteran Suffragist, Enthusiastically Greeted.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 19.—From nearly every pulpit in this city yesterday the voice of an earnest woman was raised in the cause of temperance. The congregations were large. In the afternoon at Music hall an evangelical meeting was conducted by Miss E. W. Greenwood, evangelistic superintendent of the National W. C. T. U. The annual sermon was delivered by Rev. J. W. Bashford, president of Wesleyan university. Rev. Anna Shaw of Boston, who preached in Unity church in the morning, presided at the gospel suffrage meeting meeting late in the afternoon. The centre of attraction was Susan B. Anthony, president of the National Womans' Suffrage association. She is 73 years old and for fifty years has led the movement for the enfranchisement of the women of America. When Miss Anthony was introduced the immense audience rose to its feeet and greeted her with long continued applause and waving handkerchiefs. She predicted the overthrow of the monster intemperance when the ballot is put in the hands of the mothers, wives and daughters of the land. The speaker predicted that universal suffrage was bound to come and pointed with pride to the action of the last Ohio legislature in giving to women the right to vote on educational matters.

COOK GANG SHOW FIGHT.

Cherokee Bill Fatally Shot by the Sheriff's Posse.

Muskogee, I. T., Nov. 19.—Deputy Marshall McGill and a posse had a fight yesterday morning with three of the Cook gang.

One marshall was wounded, Cherokee Bill was fatally shot and his horse killed. The two others of the gang were arrested.

Cherokee Bill is the fiercest one of the gang and is one of its main supports. The government has set a price of $250 on his head. Two suspects were brought in and put in jail during the afternoon. The citizens here raised a fund of $1,000 to put a force in the field to assist in the capture.

A heavy force of officers are out on a secret hunt, but it is not known where they went. United States Attorney Jackson received a letter from Bill Cook threatening to kill him if he does not let up on them.

Dr. McCosh's Funeral.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 19.—The funeral of Dr. McCosh will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at Marquand chapel. The faculty will attend in full academic dress. The students will accompany the hearse from the late residence of Dr. McCosh to the chapel. After the services the students will form in line again and march to the cemetery. President Potter will preside at the services and addresses will be made by Dean Murray and Dr. Henry Van Dyke, and Rev Dr. John Hall will offer prayer. The pallbearers will be eight members of the faculty, former pupils of Dr. McCosh.

Chinese Preparing for Battle.

London, Nov. 19.—The Central News correspondent in Tien-Tsin says: "The Chinese fleet is at Wei-Hai-Wei. It includes five ironclads, which are preparing for battle. Col. von Hanneken, the commander-in-chief of the Chinese army, is organizing in Manchuria several forces of Chinese guerillas, who already have begun to harass the Japanese and to threaten their line of communication. If the Chinese defense of Port Arthur be successful, the entire Japanese army may winter on the Yalu.

Among the number are A. C. Edwards, champion of England; Luigi Colombo, champion of Italy; Adrien Guerry, champion of France; Mr. Verheyen, champion of Germany and Lucien Lesna, champion of Switzerland.

A Monument To Gov. Curtin.

Bellefonte, Pa., Nov. 19.—At a meeting of Gregg Post, with Gen. James A. Beaver as chairman, John C. Miller, S. H. Williams, James Harris and W. T. Fitzgerald were appointed a committee on the Curtin monument. The Centre county veteran club starts the fund with a subscription of $500, and the commitee is now ready to receive aid from any and all soldiers' organizations in the state that wish to assist in memoralizing the "old war governor" in marble.

Supposed Suicide.

Nashua, N. H., Nov. 19.—A bundle of clothing, including a suit of clothes for a man, was found on the bank of the Nashua river. In the pocket of the pantaloons was found a note partially destroyed, on which was written: "Friends, good bye. I have taken my life. Frank Roberts." No such man is known here and no trace of the has been discovered in the water The clothing is badly worn. The affair is being investigated.

Fatal Shooting in New Mexico.

Albuquerque, N. M., Nov. 19.—At Magdalena, south of this city, E. D. Horn, of the Mercantile firm of Horn, Creighton & Graves, and Scott Reed, a cowman, got into a quarrel and commenced shooting at each other. Both are dead. Horn was a peaceable man Reed was quarrelsome and had killed several men.

The Figaro's Editor Dead.

Paris, Nov. 19.—Francis Magnard, editor of the Figaro, is dead. Francis Magnard was born in Brussels in 1837. He became connected with the Figaro in 1865, and at the age of 39 was made editor-in-chief. He wrote voluminously for magazines and published several books.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

Catarrh of the Nose, Throat, and Stomach—Life Made Miserable by Headaches, Pain and Cough.

Lida McCandless, No. 1230 South Thirty-fifth street, Philadelphia, in conversation with a reporter, said: "I had a very bad case of catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach, with frequent headaches, pain under the shoulder blades and a horrible cough. I had to keep my mouth constantly open day and night to breathe, and felt as miserable as one possibly could. I was advised to try Munyon's Catarrh Cure. I am happy to say that from the beginning I felt relieved and continued to grow better until now I am entirely well. I am so thankful that this remarkable remedy was ever discovered, and hope others will take advantage of my experience."

Have you Catarrh? Are you willing to investigate a treatment that cures Catarrh by removing the cause? If so ask your druggist for a 25c bottle of Catarrh Tablets. The Catarrh Cure will eradicate the disease from the system, and the Tablets will cleanse and heal the affected parts and restore them to a natural and healthful condition.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

ANOTHER MASSACRE

The Turks' Slaughter of Innocents Continues.

Two Thousand More Christian Armenians Mowed Down in Cold Blood—The Ruthless Mosiem Shows No Mercy—Fugitives Seek Safety in Russia.

London, Nov. 19.—A dispatch to the Times from Vienna says that a letter has been receive there from Smyrna, reporting that Zeki Pasha, a Turkish marshal, with a detachment of Nizams and a field battery, massacred two thousand Armenians at Sassun.

The bodies of the dead were left unburied and their presence has caused an outbreak of cholera. Many Christians are reported to have fled by secret paths across the Russian frontier.

"So far," adds the Times, "there has been no official confirmation of this News, but if it is true, it is time the powers share in the responsibility by their failure to enforce article 61 of the Berlin treaty, which imposes on them the duty of seeing that the porte takes measures to protect Armenians.

"The latter declare that they hope for nothing from Europe, but that they still have confidence in Great Britain. Numerous appeals have been made by the Armenians to the British foreign office.

"The last appeal received says that the Armenians do not wish to see more of their territory annexed by Russia, but if Great Britain is unable to help them they will be compelled to look to Russia, under whose yoke they would be better off than under the yoke of Turkey."

A dispatch from Constantinople to the Standard says that in response to the protest made by Sir Philip Currie, British ambassador to Turkey, the porte has unreservedly withdrawn the charge against Mr. Hallward, British consul at Van, of inciting the Armenians at Sassan and elsewhere to revolt.

The charge grew out of the investigation by Mr. Hallwood into the Armenian massacres and his report to the British ambassador. The governor of Bitlis, who is seriously involved in the outrage, made the charge, it is said, for the purpose of revenge.

The sultan has decided to send a commission composed of three members of his military household and one civilian to Sassun for the purpose of making an impartial inquiry into the outrages on Armenians.

The latest news is to the effect that many of the Armenians who were supposed to have been killed fled from the soldiery and are now returning.

A dispatch to the Daily News from Constantinople says that the energetic action of Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador to Turkey, has caused consternation among the members of the Turkish government. Everything has been done to keep secret the facts of the outrages. Information from various sources tends to prove that the Sassan affair was most serious.

Armenia is another Poland. Russia, one of three owners of each dismembered country, equally autocratic and intolerant in both, is the cruelest of Poland's rulers and the mildest of Armenia's. So much more unfortunate is Armenia than Poland.

The history of Turkish Armenia is one long record of atrocious misgovernment and licensed outrage.

England and other European countries have interfered in a perfunctory way time and again, and the sublime porte, who in this country would be called a sublime liar, has diplomatically conceded promises of reform not reform, and even promises of restitution not restitution, the same invariably followed by more massacres.

England has, of course, done most of the interceding and most of the harm. Russia would put an end to Turkish oppression, and to the Turk himself, for that matter, if only for selfish reasons, were it not for the dog-in-the-manger attitude of Britain, which is called Great—relief for Armenia being one thing and Russian advance quite another thing in continental politics, if not in fact.

Mohammedan persecution is the equivalent of Mohammedan loyalty. The sultan's chief concern, aside from his harem, is Mohammedan disaffection—the revolutionary spirit which has been spreading of late years through Arabia, Syria and Albania. The insurrectionary feeling must be put down summarily or dissipated by indulgence in some direction not threatening to Turkish sovereignty. The cheapest and safest plan from the sublime standpoint is to give it vent at the expense of the Christians. The Arnaut robber and the Kurdish brigand know well enough that they will be pardoned if they only let Turks and foreigners alone. When popular feeling demands a wholesale sacrifice the Turkish authorities put down an Armenian uprising. That's the technical name, the official euphemism, when a whole village or more is to be exterminated. Governmental connivance in such cases is carried to the point that the Cristians who escape by accident and are subsequently captured are convicted and executed, or executed and convicted, as ringleaders of the revolution.

The last massacre was simply more violent, more extensive and less plausibly licensed than the others of recent occurrence.

The Armenians are a notably intellectual people, great agriculturists in their own country, with a bent toward trade and the arts. The credit of their merchants is proverbially good.

Armenia is seeking relief, not along incendiary lines, but through a bloodless and diplomatic revolution—through the intervention, that is, of the Christian powers of Europe.

Cigar Dealers His Victims.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 19.—Cigar dealers and other small merchants in the western part of the state have been imposed upon by a clever swindler, who is traveling under the guise of a collector. His plan is to ascertain the amount his would-be victim owes certain victims and he then generally secures something on account. The last firm whose collector this sharper has personated is Bradley, Smith & Co., of this city.

THE SHARON MYSTERY SOLVED

Emerson Osborne Confesses He Committed the Crime.

Sharon, Pa., Nov. 19.—The mystery surrounding the recent assault on Mrs. John Jack of Kilgore has been partly solved by the confession of Emerson Osborne, a prominent member of the Sandy Lake U. P. church. Mrs. Jack about three weeks ago disappeared from her home, and was found three days later in a hollow log half dead. She said she had attempted to take her own life by beating her head with a stone.

This did not satisfy the authorities, and they arrested Osborne. Yesterday he broke down and confessed all, saying he had made the assault, and, thinking Mrs. Jack was dead, had placed her in the log to cover up his crime.

Osborne is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Jack, and, it is alleged, she is making every effort to shield him. Her object in so doing cannot be surmised, unless it be a desire to save the family from disgrace through further investigation and publication of the outrage. Mrs. Jack is the daughter of ex-Sheriff Fleming Smith, and all parties are prominently connected.

ASPHYXIATED IN A CHURCH.

The Pastor Falls from the Pulpit and Many Women Prostrated.

East Liverpool, O., Nov. 19.—Last night half a dozen of the congregation of the Second Methodist Episcopal church were made seriously ill, the result of partial asphyxiation from escaping gas, inhaled during the morning services. Last week plumbers were at work in the church and left a defective fitting in the natural gas pipes. The church was well filled Sunday morning. Toward the close of the service several became sick and left the church. No one knew the cause, as the gas is odorless. When Rev. R. F. Sears attempted to step from the pulpit, he fell full length. He was carried home. Mrs. Randall and two daughters fell in the aisle and were assisted home. Several others were prostrated and fell at he church door, while every person in the church was more or less seriously affected. Rev. Mr. Sears, Mrs. Randall and her daughters, are not yet out of danger

Wrote His Own Obituary.

Minneapolis, Nov. 19.—After the suicide of Editor James Liddell at Lyons, Iowa, on Saturday, it was discovered that he had written a brief but accurate description of his throwing himself in front of the railway train, stating that he had contemplated it for a year. He even added a display heading. The press of the Times was stopped and the article inserted. He drew a check in favor of his mother and another for his partner, covering funds in the bank, with a brief note commending his mother and sister to the care of friends, then committed suicide, simply tired, worn and weary. Absolutely no cause is assigned. He was always cheerful and genial.

Stabbed His Wife's Uncle.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 19.—George T. Fry, jr., a young journalist, is charged with stabbing his wife's uncle, Col. J. M. Lanier, in his own place of business. Eye-witnesses say Fry was drinking and approached Col. Lanier with a long dirk hidden in his sleeve. Then with a curse he made two sweeps of the blade and the wounded man fell with wounds in his back and temple. Fry surrendered to a policeman. The occurrence was the culmination of serious family differences. Fry was admitted to bond, but he claims Lanier struck him first, and then he stabbed him with a pocket knife.

Daly's Property Man Is Here Again.

New York, Nov. 19.—Henry W. E. Elliot, the man arrested, tried and finally deported by the immigration authorities some few weeks ago for having come to this country under contract to Augustine Daly as head property man, returned yesterday on the American line steamship New York. Elliott declared to the inspector, who questioned him, that he came to this country as an immigrant, had no position in prospect and was not under contract with any individual or company. He complied with all the regulations of the immigration authorities and was not detained.

French Success in Africa.

Paris, Nov. 19.—Col. Monteil, the commander of France's last African expedition, telegraphed from Grand Bassam, West Africa, Saturday that Benona was taken by the French on Nov. 16. The village and the enemy's position were destroyed. The French force did not lose a man, killed or wounded.

Want To Abolish the Lords.

Dublin, Nov. 19—Mass meetings in Cork and Longford passed resolutions favoring the abolition of the house of lords and demanding an amended land bill. Timothy Healey, Edward Blake and William O'Brien were the speakers.

Conrad Uhl To Marry Miss Bechtel.

London, Nov. 17.—Conrad Uhl, who keeps a large hotel on Unter den Linden, in Berlin, has gone to New York to marry Miss Bechtel, daughter of the well-known Staten Island brewer.

FLASHES FROM THE WIRE.

William T. Thelia, general auditor of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, is dead of apoplexy at his home at Mount Washington, Md. He was 59 years old.

The fan and boiler houses connected with the Delaware & Hudson Coal company's breaker near Parson's, Pa., were destroyed by fire late Saturday afternoon. Loss, $20,000. Origin unknown.

By the mistake of a flagman two freight trains collided near Hamet's Ferry, Pa., on the Lehigh Valley railroad Sunday morning. The engineer and fireman of the west-bound train were seriously injured.

The grand jury of Pettis county, Mo., has returned nine indictments against J. C. Thompson, the fugitive cashier of the First National bank of Sedalia. In five cases he was charged with forgery and in the others with grand larceny.

Reports from the northwest say the first great cold wave of the winter swept down from Manitoba about noon Sunday and the mercury dropped rapidly to below zero. The wave is about the most rigid experienced so early in the season since 1883.

BISMARCK CONSULTED

Chancellor Hohenlohe To Visit the Prince.

The Visit Planned by The Emperor. Bismarck's Weighty Influence Needed by the New Cabinet—Premier Crispi of Italy Arranging To Meet Prince Hohenlohe.

Berlin, Nov. 19.—Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe left Strassburg for Berlin yesterday. He will stop in Stuttgart and Dresden to confer with the ministers and sovereigns in those capitals. No definite arrangements have been made for his visit to Bismarck. Just what e expects to do in Varzin or Freidrichsruh is not known although in official circles he is not supposed to be seeking Bismarck's advice as to the ministerial policy. The emperor planned the visit, it is believed, not so much to get Bismarck's political views as to please the German people with an act of courtesy to their old idol. The Koelnische Zeitung says:

"Without attaching high political import to the interview, we feel that the meeting would bear good fruit. It would remove a stone of stumbling from the way of many well meaning Germans who have found it difficult to harmonize their loyalty to the government and their veneration of Bismarck."

Although the semi-official press represents the prospective visit to Bismarck as a mere act of homage, it will be more. Prince Hohenlohe will aim probably to secure Bismarck's support or toleration of his policies at home and abroad. As Bismarck maintains relations with the most powerful German courts, he is able to influence their decisions. He therefore can help the new cabinet materially, for Prince Hohenlohe's tour of conciliation has relieved but slightly the strain between Berlin and Munich and Carlsruhe, and the Prince Regent Luitpold and the Grand Duke of Baden are far from convinced that the theatrical fall of Caprivi was either necessary of expedient. Moreover, Bismarck's opinions of the agrarian programme will help the government round the sharp corners of its new protective policy.

All doubts as to the fate of Caprivi's commercial policy has been set at rest by an utterance from Von Hammerstein, the new minister of agriculture. In a telegram to Freiherr von Schorlemer-Alst, the conspicuous agrarian and clerical, he said: "I mean to fight honestly for the agricultural interests and I shall reckon upon the support of the clerical party."

The Kreuz Zeitung comments: "Freiherr von Hammerstein knows obviously what German agriculture requires to renew its prosperity. He will find means to enhance the value of the products of German soil."

Dr. Koch's refusal to take the ministry of justice is attributed to his opposition to the new agrarian policy and his desire to remain at the head of the imperial bank, where he can watch and check the demands of the favored agrarian bimetallists. The Kreuz Zeitung has prepared the way for the silver raid on the government by declaring: "The ministry will not meet the expectations of the agricultural interests unless the measure raising the price of cereals be combined with international currency reforms. There must also be a measure to assist the sugar industry by an increase of the export premiums."

Premier Crispi of Italy is arranging to meet Prince Hohenlohe. The principal subject of the interview will be the change in Germany's attitude upon toward England and its bearing upon the Anglo-Italian understanding. The emperor is intent upon an agressive colonial policy which will increase German's possessions abroad and in this he is encouraged by Prince Hohenlohe. Nothing positive is known as to Germany's course toward the reported rapprochement between England on one side and Russia and France on the other. The whole European press agrees that such a rapprochement would alter entirely the position of the triple alliance and might even disrupt it. All must remain uncertain, however, until the ministry of Nicholas II. be finally constituted. The last report is that M. de Giers will retire and Lobanoff or Schouvaloff become chancellor, thus filling an office which has been left vacant since Prince Gortschakof's death.

It is certain that the German foreign office has had no cordial feeling for Lord Rosebery since it checked his little plan to gobble part of the Congo state.

Dr. Miquel, Prussian minister of finance, said in an interview concerning the new chancellor:

"Public opinion makes a great mistake in regarding Prince Hohenlohe as a frail, shaky old man who is dependent upon others. He has, in fact, great mental vigor and vivacity and is possessed of a thorough independence, which is in many respects the result of his high positions in society. Owing to his recognized social position he probably will exercise a greater influence over the emperor than Prince Bismarck was able to retain in the latter part of his official career."

It is reported that the new governor of Alsace-Lorraine will announce the suspension of the exceptional laws immediately after entering office. The cordial farewell to Hohenlohe in Strassburg is said to have convinced the emperor that the time had come for abating the restrictions.

The Nordeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said that China's collapse was due to the weakness of hand and head manifested by those who governed with socialistic absolutism from Pekin. The Vorwaerts replys:

"What is now happening in China is a repitition of the history of Prussia where a disorganized despotism, in which the people had no voice to control the destinies of the state, led to the defeat at Jena. Events in China contain a warning for Germany."

Dr. Stefanson of Reydiavik, Iceland, was deputed some time ago to invite the emperor to visit the island next summer. The emperor's reply is that he feels that he could not go to a place where he must be isolated so long from news of state affairs, on account of the lack of telegraphic communication with Iceland.

AN ORDINANCE

concerning the Construction, Maintenance and Repair of Sidewalks.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Section 1. That all sidewalks shall have a width not less than one-fifth of the entire width of the street and all sidewalks hereafter laid shall be raised, from the curbstone line to the side of the street adjoining, in the proportion of five inches in ten feet, unless otherwise specially directed by resolution of the Common Council, provided that this section shall not apply to sidewalks whose width has previously been established by ordinance.

Sec. 2. That all sidewalks in said city shall be well and sufficiently repaired and maintained at the expense of the abutting land owners, so as to be even on the surface and so laid and constructed as freely to shed water and for the width of at least four feet free from turf, grass, weeds, stubble and other foreign substances.

Sec. 3. That within that portion of said city described as follows, viz:—beginning with the intersection of the northeasterly side line of Norwood avenue with Green brook and running thence along said northeasterly side line of Norwood avenue continuing along northeasterly side line of Richmond street to its intersection with the centre line of Watchung avenue; thence in a straight line to the intersection of the easterly side line of Ninth street with the southerly line of Third place produced; thence along said easterly side line of Ninth street and the same line produced to its intersection with the southwesterly side line of Plainfield avenue; thence with the southwesterly side line of Plainfield avenue northwesterly to Green brook and thence along Green brook to the point or place of beginning; also on both sides of Watchung avenue from Richmond street to Woodland avenue; both sides of West Front street from Plainfield avenue to Grant avenue; and both sides of East Front street from Richmond street to Farragut road; both sides of Central avenue from Ninth street to Randolph road; in all cases in which sidewalks are not already constructed of blue stone flagging, sidewalks shall be constructed at the expense of the abutting land owners, and unless otherwise specially permitted by resolution of the Common Council, shall be composed of blue stone flagging, smooth and even on the surface, and properly laid in one course under the direction of and on such lines as shall be given by the Street Commissioner, and the flags shall not be less than four feet long and not less than two feet wide and not less than one and one-half inches thick in the thinnest part. And within that portion of the City of Plainfield described in this section, in all cases in which sidewalks are not already curbed with stone, cement, concrete, hard and durable substance, said sidewalks shall, when ordered by resolution of the Common Council, be curbed at the expense of the abutting land owners, and unless otherwise specially permitted by resolution of the Common Council shall be curbed with blue stone or ironolithic, not less than four inches thick in the thinnest part and sixteen inches in depth, smooth and even on the surface and laid in one course under the direction of and on such lines as shall be given by the Street Commissioner. That all return curbs shall have a radius of six feet, no piece to be less than three feet two inches in length.

Sec. 4. That within that portion of the said city not embraced within the foregoing limits described in Section 3, in all cases in which sidewalks are not now constructed in the manner hereinafter provided in this section, sidewalks shall be constructed at the expense of the abutting land owners, when ordered by resolution of the Common Council, and unless otherwise specially permitted by resolution of the Common Council, said sidewalks shall be composed of bluestone flagging as specified in Section 3, or crushed stone not less than six inches deep, thoroughly rolled and compacted, or cement not less than one-half inch in thickness, laid on at least four inches of concrete, said bluestone flagging, crushed stone or cement and concrete to be made smooth and even on the surface and properly laid in one course under the direction of and on such lines as shall be given by the Street Commissioner, and said sidewalks to be so laid for the width of not less than four feet, and in case bluestone flagging is used, the flags to be not less than two feet in width and not less than one and one-half inches thick in the thinnest part.

Sec. 5 It is hereby made the duty of the owners of land abutting on the sidewalks of said city to comply with the preceding sections of this ordinance under the direction and supervision of the Street Commissioner. The Street Commissioner is hereby authorized to serve notices in writing upon the owners or occupants of said lands requiring the necessary specified work to said sidewalks to be done by said owners or occupants within a period of thirty days from the date of service of such notice, and shall file with the City Clerk a list of the names of parties on which notices have been served; if any of said lands are unoccupied and the owner cannot be found within the city, the said notice shall be mailed, postage prepaid, to his or her postoffice address if the same can be ascertained; in case such owner is a non-resident of the city and his or her postoffice address cannot be ascertained, then the notice may be inserted for four weeks, once a week, in the official newspapers of the city.

Sec. 6. That in case the owner or occupant of such lands shall not comply with the requirements of the notice specified in the preceding section, said Street Commissioner shall file in the office of the City Clerk due proof of the service or publication of the aforesaid notice and thereupon the Common Council may by resolution order the required work to be done and paid for, and proceedings to be taken to perfect a lien for the costs thereof and to enforce payment of the same pursuant to the statute in such cases made and provided.

Sec. 7. That Sections 1, 2, 3, 4, of an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance Relating to Streets and Sidewalks and Encroachments Thereon", and the ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance Concerning the Construction, Maintenance and Repair of Sidewalks", and the amendment of said last named ordinance approved August 4th, 1890, be and the same are hereby repealed.

Sec. 8. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances which were repealed or abrogated by any ordinance hereby repealed, shall continue to be so repealed and shall be deemed abrogated.

Adopted by the Common Council Nov. 5, 1894.

Approved by the Mayor Nov. 10, 1894.

A. GILBERT, Mayor.

Attest—J. T. MacMurray, City Clerk.

CHAPTER II.—CONTINUED.

"You are only ten minutes late, dearest," he said. "Do you know, I was half afraid you might have failed me at the last moment?"

"You don't believe it, Jim!"

"Well, I sometimes think I ought not to expect you to keep engagements with me so honestly as you do. Good, brave little Rosalys!"

They moved on through the press of struggling omnibuses, gigantic vans, covered carts, and foot-passengers, who darted at imminent risk of their lives amid the medley of wheels, horses and shouting drivers. The noise jarred Rosalys' head, and she began to be feverishly anxious.

The church stood in the neighborhood of a great meat market, and the pavement was crowded by men in blue linen blouses, their clothes sprinkled with crimson stains. The young girl gave a shiver of disgust. "How revolting it must be to have a butcher for a husband! They can't have hearts like other men * * * What a gloomy part of London this is to be married in, Jim.

"Ah—yes! Everything looks gloomy with the east wind blowing. Now, here we are! Jump out, little woman!"

He handed money to the driver, who went off with the most cursory thoughts of the part that he had played in this little excursion of a palpitating pair into the unknown.

"Jimmy, darling; oughtn't you, or one of us, to have lived here for fifteen days?" she said, as they entered the fine old Norman porch, to which she was quite blind in her preoccupation.

Durrant laughed. "I have declared that I did," he answered, cooly. "I hope in the circumstances that it's a forgivable lie. Cheer up, Rosalys; don't all of a sudden look so solemn!"

"I HAVE DECLARED THAT I DID," HE ANSWERED, COOLLY.

There were tears in her eyes. The gravity of the step she was about to take had begun to frighten her.

They had some time to wait before the clergyman condescended to come out of the vestry and perform the ceremony which was to unite her to Jim. Two or three other couples were also in the church on the same errand; a haggard woman in a tawdry white bonnet hanging on to the arm of a short, crimson-faced man, who had evidently been replenishing his inside with gin to nerve himself to the required pitch for the ordeal; a girl with a coarse, hard face, accompanied by a slender youth in shabby black; a tall man of refined aspect, in very poor clothes, whose hollow cough shook his thin shoulders and chest, and told his bride that her happiness, such as it was, would probably last but the briefest space.

Rosalys glanced absently at the beautiful building, with its Norman apse and transverse arches of horse-shoe form; and the massive curves and cushion capitals that supported the tower end; the whole impression left by the church being one of singular harmony, loveliness, and above all, repose—which struck even her by its great contrast with her experiences just then. As the clergyman emerged from the vestry a shaft of sunlight smote the altar, touched the quaint tomb where the founder of the building lay in his dreamless sleep, and quivered on the darned clothes of the consumptive bridegroom.

Jim and Rosalys moved forward, and the light shone for a moment, too, upon his yellow hair and handsome face. To the woman who loved him it seemed that: "From the crown of his head even to the sole of his foot there was no blemish in him."

The curate looked sharply at the four couples; angrily, Rosalys fancied, at her. But it was only because the east wind had given him an acute toothache that his gaze was severe and his reading spiritless.

The four couples having duly contracted their inviolable unities, and slowly gone their ways through the porch, Jim and Rosalys adjourned to a fashionable hotel on the Embankment, where in a room all to themselves they had luncheon, over which Rosalys presided with quite a housewifely air.

"When shall I see you again?" he said, as he put her into a cab two or three hours later on in the afternoon.

"You must arrange all that, Jim. Somehow I feel so dreadfully sad and sinful now, all of a sudden! Have I been wicked? I don't know!"

Suddenly her tone changed as she met his passionate gaze, and she said, very low, with a lump in her throat:

"O my dear, darling! I care for nothing in the whole wide world, now that I belong to you!"

CHAPTER III.

The London weeks went by with all their commonplaces, all their novelties. Mr. Durrant, senior, had finished his urgent business, and returned to his square and uninteresting country-house. But Jim lingered on in town, although conscious of some subtle change in himself and his view of things. He and Rosalys met whenever it was possible, which was pretty frequently. Often they contrived to do so at hastily-arranged luncheons and teas in the private rooms of hotels; sometimes, when Mrs. Ambrose was suddenly called away, at Jim's own rooms. Sometimes they adventured to queer suburban restaurants.

In the lapse of these weeks the twain began somehow to lose a little of their zest for each other's society. Jim himself was conscious of it before he had yet discovered that something of the same disappointment was dulling her heart too. On his own side it was the usual lowering of the fire—the slackening of a man's passion for a woman when she becomes his property. On hers it was a more mixed feeling. No doubt her love for Jim had been of but little higher quality than his for her. She had thoroughly abandoned herself to his good looks, his recklessness, his eagerness; and now that the sensuous part of her character was satisfied, her passion also had burnt itself down. But beyond, above, this, the concealment of her marriage was repugnant to Rosalys. When the rapture of the early meetings had died away she began to loathe the sordid deceit which these involved; the secretly dispatched letters, the unavoidably brazen lies to her mother who, if she attached overmuch importance to money and birth, yet loved her daughter in all good faith and simplicity. Then once or twice Jim was late at their interviews. He seemed indifferent and preoccupied. His manner stung Rosalys into impatient utterance at the end of a particular meeting in which this mood was unduly prominent.

"You forget all I have given up for you!" she cried. "You make a fool of me in allowing me to wait here for you. It is humiliating and vulgar. I hate myself for behaving as I do!"

"The renunciations are not all on your side," he answered caustically. "You forget all that the loss of his freedom means to man!"

Her heart swelled, and she had great difficulty in keeping back her tears. But she took refuge in sullenness.

"Unfortunately we can't undo our folly!" she murmured. "You will have to make the best of it as well as I. I suppose the awakening to a sense of idiocy was bound to come sooner or later. But—I didn't think it would come so soon. Jim, look at me! Are you really angry? Don't for God's sake go and leave me like this!"

He was walking slowly towards the great iron gate leading out of Kensington Gardens; a dogged cast on his handsome countenance.

"Don't make a scene in public, for heaven's sake, Rosalys!"

Feeling that he had spoken too brutally, he suddenly paused, and changed:

"I am sorry, little woman, if I was cross! But things have combined to harass me lately. Of course we won't part from one another in anger."

Jim glanced at her straight profile with its full underlip and firmly-curved chin, at the lashes on either lid, and the glossy brown hair twisted in coils under her hat. But the sight of this loveliness, now all his own, failed to arouse the old emotions. He simply contemplated her approvingly from an artistic point of view.

JIM GLANCED AT HER STRAIGHT PROFILE.

They had reached the gateway, and she placed her hand on his arm.

"Good-by. When shall we next meet? To-day is Tuesday. Shall it be Friday?"

"I am afraid I must go out of London on Thursday for a day or two. I'll write, dear. Let me call a hansom."

She thanked him in a cold voice again, and with a last handshake and a smile that hovered on sorrow, left him and drove away towards Belgravia.

Once or twice later on they met; the next interview being shorter and sadder perhaps than the last. The one that followed it ended in bitterness.

"This had better be our long good-by, I suppose?" said she.

"Perhaps it had. * * * You seem to be always looking out for causes of reproach, Rosalys. I don't know what has come over you."

"It is you who have changed!" she cried, with a little stamp. "And you are by far the most to blame of us two. You forget that I should never have contemplated marriage as a possibility! You have made me lie to my mother, do things of which I am desperately ashamed, and now you don't attempt to disguise your weariness of me!"

It was Jim's turn to lose his temper now. "You forget that you gave me considerable encouragement! Most girls would not have come out again and again to surreptitious meetings with a man who was in love with them—girls brought up as you have been!"

She started as in a spasm. A momentary remorse seized him. He realized that he had been betrayed in speaking as no man of kindly good feeling could speak. He made a tardy, scarcely gracious apology, and they parted. A few days afterwards he wrote a letter full of penitence for having hurt her, and she answered almost affectionately. But each knew that their short-lived romance was dead as the wind flowers that had blossomed at its untimely birth.

FOUGHT TO THE LAST.

THE WARINGS WAGED PLUCKY WAR WHEN OTHERS WEAKENED.

Interesting Condition of Affairs Revealed by the Latest Phase of Their Effort to Get Square with the Standard Oil Trust.

No explanation can be secured for the long silence in the cases of Orville T. Waring of Plainfield and his brother, against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the great Standard Oil fight which was reported exclusively in The Daily Press of yesterday. During that silence there has been quite a change in the composition of the legal firms in the cases. Mr. Shiras is now a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Mr. Hampton is dead, and Mr. Dalzell, who seldom appears in court, represents the Pittsburg district in Congress. Marcus A. Woodward now has charge of the case for the Warings.

An examination of the old appearance dockets of 1879 and 1880 shows that Geo. Shiras, Jr., was one of the counsel for the Warings and the firm of Hampton & Dalzell for the railroad company. The summons was filed and served, and no further steps were taken until a week ago last Thursday, when a new entry was made as follows: "October 4, 1894, statement and affidavit filed".

Inquiry conducted among oil men reveals an interesting condition of affairs prevailing when these Waring suits were first instituted, conditions not made clear by the legal statements and affidavits filed in court. Twenty years ago, as now, Pittsburg was the natural centre of the oil business of the United States. The Allegheny Valley, connecting Pittsburg with Oil City, 132 miles away, had practically no freight traffic independent of oil, for the carrying of which it was really constructed. Thousands of Pittsburgers were engaged in handling and refining oil and in the manufacture of barrels and tin cans in which to transport it. The east bank of the Allegheny River, from Forty-fifth street to Waring Station, was lined with works, which refined the bulk of the oil used in America. In the city proper there were from 200 to 300 brokers engaged in oil speculation, and millions of Pittsburg capital was invested in various ways. The iron mills and machine shops were kept busy turning out iron for oil tanks and band hoops, also pumps, engines, etc. At the time, in estimating the prosperity of Pittsburg, the iron and oil business divided the honors.

Oil men not affiliated with the Standard attribute the loss of this trade to railroad influence. In the panicky year of 1872 the Allegheny Valley Railroad Company got into difficulties (assisted by the Pennsylvania and the Standard, so their enemies allege), and it ended in a ninety-nine-year lease to the Pennsylvania.

Prior to 1872 the Warings enjoyed the same freight rates as other shippers of oil. They owned the Vesta Oil Works, the largest in America, also the Cosmos, both located at Waring Station, on the Allegheny Valley, while they also possessed the finest oil-producing field in the "oil region", which was then located about Oil City and south to Parker. They shipped immense quantities of oil via the Allegheny Valley to their refineries about Pittsburg, where about 1,000 men were employed at good wages. So if there was any discrimination in freight rates, as charged, it affected the Warings on over 100 miles of preliminary transportation, independent of reshipments in the refined shape.

The Warings say their troubles began with the lease of the Allegheny Valley, and continued in the manner outlined in the statements filed in court and as described yesterday. The Warings were one of a very few firms who fought the alleged discrimination to the last. The great majority gave up the unequal contest early.

When the Standard finally secured supreme control, it gave the Pennsylvania Railroad Company "a dose of its own medicine", as an oil man put it, by removing its refineries to the seaboard, transporting the crude petroleum thence through underground pipe lines, thus putting an end to the railroad transportation of crude oil. Now the investment of money in oil about Pittsburg is confined to the producing fields, and the ruins of the few refineries remaining thereabouts are covered with grass.

The Warings are possessed of the necessary amount of energy and cash to make these suits interesting and they are commended for their brave stand against the monopoly that sought to oppress them.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES TONIGHT.

Convention Delegates Should Be Selected Pledged to the Popular Platform, Against School Board Autocracy.

The city convention delegates to be chosen at the ward primaries tonight should be men whose standing is known to be in favor of Mayor Gilbert's and the people's policy on the School Board question.

It would invite a citizens ticket on the School Board issue, to appoint delegates whose nominees for School Board would favor continuation of the present School Board policy.

A citizens ticket means Republican defeat.

That School Board issue must be met, and met now.

The present opportunity is too rare to be wasted.

It must be a change of policy, surely—of men, if need be.

TAKES HALF THE TAXES.

Yet This Autocratic Board Persists in Its Star-Chamber Methods.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—I have read several communications from taxpayers in your valuable paper, and also articles of The Press itself, about the Board of Education If there is anything wrong with the Board, why not tell us what is the matter? It is not like the Common Council—an open meeting, at which all citizens can be present and hear what is going on. I find, however, from my tax bills that more than half the amount I pay in tax is received by that Board, of whose routine business the public can know very little. Would it not be better if the Board met with open doors the same as the City Council?

ANOTHER TAXPAYER

HOW ABOUT SALARIES?

Will the Board Explain Why Teachers Get Little and Their Superintendent Much?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—While settling the question about the new members who are to be elected to the Board of Education, I think some other questions might be raised. I would take it a favor if The Press would give us a statement of the various salaries paid to the teachers. It has seemed to me that the salary paid to the superintendent is out of all proportion, for the duties rendered by him to the public, in comparison with the salaries of other hard-working teachers. If he is paid too much, and they too little, this ought to be rectified.

APPORTIONIST

SNARED.

A North Plainfield Liquor Dealer Arrested for Sunday Selling.

Jacob Hipp, who has long been under suspicion of offending against the license laws, was arrested this forenoon on complaint of Marshal Pangborn for alleged Sunday liquor selling. He was released on his own recognizance to appear tomorrow morning at 9.

The Gym. at "The Midway."

The advertising posters of "The Midway", appeared in all parts of the city yesterday, warning all friends of the Y. M. C. A. that the inauguration of the mammoth fair is only a week away. It is announced that a series of games of basket-ball will take place in the spacious gymnasium each evening beginning at 9, except on Wednesday and Saturday when play will be called one hour earlier. On Wednesday evening there is likely to be a crowded house to witness the battle between a team chosen from Leal's football squad and the representatives of the Orange Y. M. C. A. Thomas Schaefer, a swinger of Indian clubs and twirler of batons, who stands in the first rank, will also appear on Wednesday evening in his specialties.

Throughout the fair-week a shooting-gallery will be in operation in the gymnasium, and two concerts a day will be rendered by an ingenious and mechanical orchestra.

They Are Sure Shots.

Dr. F. C. Herbert and Doc Voehl are back from their hunting expedition in Mariboro, Monmouth County. They put in three days tramping in the woods and lowlands, and record a total of 101 rabbits. They captured no birds, but got all but one of the rabbits started.

COUNCILMAN FISK.

HIS RENOMINATION WAS A FOREGONE CONCLUSION.

Third Ward Republicans Have a Harmonious Gathering and Fill Out Their Part in the Coming City Election.

The Third Ward Republican meeting was held in the Casino last evening, thirty-five attending. Roger F. Murray called the meeting to order; F. E. Marsh was made chairman, and ex-City Clerk O. B. Leonard clerk. The other officers elected were: Judge, John W. Murray, Jr.; inspectors, B. Frank Coriell and Amos Moffett.

Chairman Marsh stated the object of the meeting and called for nominations for a member of the Common Council from the Third Ward. Charles J. Fisk was put in nomination by David E. Titsworth. E. N. Erickson seconded the nomination and moved that the secretary cast the ballot. The chairman said this could not be done, and Harry C Runyon was then asked to cast the ballot.

For constable, Amos Moffett was renominated.

For justice of the peace, Roger Murray nominated F. A. Pope who received nine votes and J. O. Nodyne had fourteen and was declared the nominee.

For delegates to the city convention the following were elected: H. M. Stockton, E. R. Pope, B. F. Coriell, W. T. Kirk and J. W. Murray, Jr.

In all, there were fourteen nominations, but over half of them declined the nomination.

Members of the Republican City Executive Committee were re-elected as follows: Wm. T. Kirk, R. F. Murray and F. E. Marsh.

The following were named as a committee to fill vacancies: Messrs. E. N Erickson, John W. Murray, Jr., and Harry C. Runyon.

The meeting was like a happy family reunion.

SONS OF VETERANS.

A New Brunswick Delegation Samples Plainfield's Hospitality.

John Hand Camp No. 28, Sons of Veterans, was favored with a friendly visit by a delegation from Kearney Camp No. 20 of New Brunswick, at their meeting last evening. A very pleasant time was passed in a social way, and the geniality of the visiting brethren was a marked feature.

During the evening Camp 20 exemplified a muster, their work being exceedingly meritorious, and the impression left with Camp 28 was that they stand second to none in the State. Excellent speeches were made by a number of the visitors, including First Sergeant Joseph Cahill, Captain J. H. Payton, Wm. Smith; and Wm. Danbury gave two recitations, "Sheridan's Ride" and "Seven Pines", that were heartily enjoyed.

Brother Snyder gave an exhibition of the army bugle calls, and showed a proficiency in this difficult work. He is located at Fort Wadsworth with the U. S army.

Those in the party were: Captain J H Payton, First Lieutenant J. Hardy, First Sergeant J. Cahill, Sergeants E Hardy and Robert Britton, Corporals G. Danbury and A. Crossly, and Privates Wm Danburry, Wm. Smith, G. TenBroeck, G Churchwood, Wm. Schuck and C. Schuck.

The visitors left for home about midnight much pleased with their trip.

Mission Family Gathering.

A very pleasant entertainment was given by the members of the Third Street Mission last evening. It was called a family gathering, and the members and their friends gathered in large numbers. Edwin Brady was master of ceremonies, and announced the following numbers from an informal programme:

Instrumental duet, cornet and piano, W. Frazee and Miss Crane; banjo duet, Messrs. Crane and Wagner; recitation, D. M. Gardner; recitation, Miss Crane; duet on ocarina and organ, Mrs. J. Flack and Mr. Gardner; violin solo, R. W. Barnes.

The entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by those present, and at the close refreshments were served in abundance.

Wanted—An Organ.

In a pretty part of Jersey, away in the country, is a school to which come many bright and interesting pupils. The children have a bright sunny school room, but there is one thing which mars the enjoyment of school life, there is no chance of musical training, because there is no organ or piano, nor anything to aid the children with their singing. Seventy-five dollars will buy an organ, and will not some music-loving people of Plainfield donate either a second-hand organ or the money? It would be an influence felt forever in those children's lives, and the good accomplished would be inestimable. If any one will make a Thanksgiving offering in this way, kindly address The Daily Press office.

WASHINGTON HELD.

SPRINGS TELLS THE STORY OF THE SHOOTING.

Horace Is Held in $500 for the Action of the Grand Jury—George Henry Goes His Bail.

The case of Simon Springs against Horace Washington came up yesterday afternoon at 5 in the station house before Junge Moore.

Craig A. Marsh appeared for Washington, and W. A. Coddington for Springs.

The evidence submitted by Springs was that last Saturday night Washington met Springs and offered him $2 to go to Fanwood and help him carry a trunk back to Plainfield. The latter accepted the proposition and they started on the journey When within 300 feet of the township line Washington took a revolver out and deliberately shot his companion, the ball going through his left cheek. Springs asked him what he was doing, whereupon he fired again, this time missing his aim. Springs then took to his heels and escaped.

The case, as stated above, was heard yesterday and after some length the Judge held the accused in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Springs in his statement, which was an excellent one, said the assault was uncalled for as both supposed to be friends. He also said there was no trunk in Fanwood, and why he enticed him there he could not tell.

Washington was not put on the stand, and was held in $500 bonds for the action of the Grand Jury.

George Henry of East Third street furnished bail for Washington.

Health Culture Wednesdays.

"Open your mouth, and shut your eyes, and I will give you something to make you wise."

This old nursery jingle has been too closely adhered to. In these progressive times we are wise in keeping our mouths shut, and opening our eyes and ears to learn all we can about the foods we use.

Mrs. Etta Morse Hudders lectures on "The Chemistry of Food", "The Choice and Preparation of Food", "The Regulation of Flesh", and "The Early Life and Training of Children."

These valuable lectures are a part of the course on Health Culture which has been so well attended and enthusiastically enjoyed by a large class of ladies and children of Plainfield during the past few weeks on Wednesdays at 2 p m., in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A.

Narrow Escape From Shooting.

William Bain and Henry Brown, colored, were out gunning near Campbell's Club House on Monday. They went into the club house for some lunch, and one of them stood his double-barreled shotgun in a corner of the room. Harry Campbell went to look at the gun, and in raising it the hammer struck a chair discharging the load. The shot just scaled his nose and punctured the soft hat he wore, besides knocking down some six feet of the ceiling.

Suggestions.

The butcher that has good fresh meat to sell, hangs it where it can be seen. Fresh "Jersey" pork suggests sausages; sausages suggest buckwheat cakes; buckwheat cakes suggest Heckers Buckwheat, and those who use it have good cakes and good digestion. How does this apply to you?

Has a Good Patent.

REPLY TO WILHERE.

Says the Judge Kissed the Blarney Stone.

DENIES THE JUDGE'S STATEMENTS.

Then He Proceeds to Discuss Some Things the A. O. H. Orator Omitted to Include in His Speech.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Judge Wilhere has been here and spoken. His reported address contains some truth, and much buncombe. Evidently the Judge has kissed the blarney stone. But he omitted some things from that address. The Judge admits that the Catholic governments of the Old World threatened this government during "The War", and that Lincoln invoked the aid of the sainted Hughes to intercede with them to keep "hands off". Later on this learned Judge praises Catholic love for the institutions of liberty—the forepart and rearpart of the judge's argument, like the Kilkerny cats, chew each other. The Catholics of the Old World represented the attitude of the Catholic Church towards American institutions, and not the Catholics in this country at that time. And those representative Catholics in the Old World, who bossed the Catholics in America, were so hostile to the Union, that Lincoln prayed Hughes to intercede for us. Where is that representative Catholic love for the Union during '61 and '63? The Judge kills his own argument. He implies that Hughes succeded, and therefore, Catholic patriotism saved the country. Anyone familiar with the history of that period, knows that the Czar's "Hands off", kept the Catholic powers, as well as England, from recognizing the Southern Confederacy. We will give the credit to the Czar, not Hughes. This Judge rings the changes on Catholic love of liberty as represented in our institutions. He conveniently forgot to mention the Catholic conspiracy, blessed of the Pope, with Napoleon III at the head, to found in Mexico, a Catholic empire to check the growth of American spirit and institutions. (Let the reader see Scribner's Magazine, June, 1894) This fact smites the Judge's argument between the eyes. He dilated on the extreme patriotic service given to this country by Catholics—all honor to the patriotic, living or dead! But—let us look at some facts. The assassin of Lincoln was a Jesuit Catholic. All who were subsequently executed for complicity in that dastardly, cowardly crime, were Catholics—how strange! Did the conspiracy in Mexico, which the Pope blessed, which Catholic Napoleon fathered, have anything to do with the assassination of Lincoln? We wait for Judge Wilhere to answer. Father Chiniquy affirms, "I come fearlessly before the American people, to say, and prove, that President Abraham Lincoln was assassinated by the priests and jesuits of Rome. The day of the murder of the President, it was told at 6 p. m. three or four hours before it took place, in the Roman Catholic villiage of St. Joseph, Minnesota, by the Roman Catholic priests. I present here to the world a fact of the greatest gravity, and it is so well authenticated, that it can not allow even the possibility of a doubt". Chiniquy has never been disproved. Is this Catholic service to the country?

The Judge surpassed himself in comparing the patriotism of Catholics with others; buncombe soars and evaporates, facts count. The official war records show that during the war the proportions of desertions were as follows: American-born, 5 per cent.; British (Protestant), 7 per cent.; German, 16 per cent.; Irish (Catholic), 72 per cent. Facts count. On the score of general patriotism, the Judge needs to revise his figures. He emphasized the general loyalty of Catholics to our government during those days of awful perplexity. Had he said there were exceptional cases of loyal Catholic patriotism he would have spoken the truth. Who instigated the riots in New York and Boston in '63? Who sacked the colored orphan asylum, and hung negroes to lamp posts, and defied the government? Was not the Irish Catholic vote in the past generation cast almost solid against the slave, and in favor of his master? The Judge may be a young man; he may not remember some things—but, facts count. Was this Catholic service to our government in those stormy days? The Judge enlarges about the brave Catholic soldiers that marched through Northern streets to the war—all honor to them! But he forgets to mention the brave Catholics who marched through Southern streets to fight for the Confederacy; perhaps the Catholics in the Southern army outnumbered those in the Northern army. Facts show that the preponderance of Catholic influence was not all on the side of the Stars and Stripes The Judge refers to the brave Catholic war generals—all honor to them—they deserve their laurels.

But—Brownson in his Quarterly Review says, "If the Pope should curse the government of the United States, every consistent orthodox Roman Catholic would thereby be absolved from his allegiance to it". If these honored Catholic soldiers were good orthodox Catholics, had Napoleon been successful, and the Pope so ordered, would they have forsaken the Stars and Stripes?

The Duke of Richmond, formerly the Governor of Canada, when he last visited Montreal, was invited to a dinner, where he made a speech of which the following is an exact copy. He said:

"The government of the United States ought not to stand; and will not stand; but it will be destroyed by subversion and not by conquest. The plan is this: to send over the surplus population of Europe; they will go over with foreign views and feelings, and will form a heterogeneous mass, and in the course of time will be prepared to rise and subvert the government. The Church of Rome has a design upon that country. Popery will in time be the established religion, and aid in the destruction of the Republic. I have conversed with many of the sovereigns and princes of Europe, and they have unanimously expressed these opinions relative to the government of the United States, and their determination to subvert it."

This is the language of a Roman Catholic; and before coming here to falsely accuse others of pulling down the flag, let Judge Wilhere write an explanation of the above Catholic love of American institutions, and Catholic fidelity to the flag. Until we hear from the Judge,

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

The regular weekly drill of the cadet corps was postponed on account of the cold weather. There will be no more drills this year except on specially warm days.

The Senior class is making preparations for another pronouncing match.

Arrangements have been made for another game with the eleven of the North Plainfield Public School. They still think it possible to defeat us. Next Thursday afternoon has been set as the time for the match. The game with the New Brunswick High School Cadets has been postponed indefinitely.

Quite a number of candidates for the first High School basket-ball team appeared yesterday afternoon at the gymnasium in the new Y. M. C. A. building for practice. After a short preliminary game there was a contest between five of the first team and six of the second. After an exciting game, in which some of the smaller boys covered themselves with glory, the first team won by a score of 11 to 5. George P. Smith '98, threw the goal from the field for the first team and J. V. Rittenhouse '97, for the second.

Smith is almost sure of a position on the first team, probably as a forward. George A. Horne '95, who has of late been also playing forward, has developed into a fine guard, in which position he will probably play in the match. Henry B. Drake '95, is another candidate for guard, although it may be deemed best to play him at centre or wing. F. Wilbur Cornwell '96, makes a fine wing on account of his quickness and agility. Sydney Titsworth '97, is also well fitted for that position. The two doubtful positions are at present the left forward and the centre. Arthur B. Crane '97, made a very fine centre, but unhappily, he will be unable to play in any of the match games.

NINETY-FIVE.

Two Held, One Discharged.

The Arthurs of North Plainfield who were charged with stealing doors and sashes at Iselin, were given a hearing in Woodbridge yesterday afternoon at 2, before Judge Newton. After the plaintiff rested his case the Judge refused to allow the defense to swear a witness. The only resource left was a cross-examination of the State's witnesses.

Walter Arthur, Jr., was discharged and the father and youngest son were held for the next term of the Quarter-Sessions at New Brunswick.

The plaintiff was represented by Judge Cutter of Woodbridge, and the defense by George W. De Mezz who will represent them in the higher court.

The Brotherhood Entertainment.

The advance sale of tickets for the entertainment which Holy Cross Brotherhood will give in the parish building Thursday evening, has already exceeded any previous sale for these performances. A programme of rare good nature, melody, mirth, farce and fancy, will be presented. A special feature will be a comic play, done by clever players, in the course of which will be introduced, by courtesy of DeWolf Hopper, the popular comedian, mirthful scenes from his operas "Panjandrum" and "Dr. Syntax". Tickets for the entertainment are on sale at Barker's pharmacy.

Mr. Ira P. Wetmore, a prominent real estate agent of San Angelo, Texas, has used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in his family for several years as occasion required, and always with perfect success. He says: "I find it a perfect cure for our baby when troubled with colic or dysentery. I now feel that my outfit is not complete without a bottle of this Remedy at home or on a trip away from home. A ROMANCE SPOILED.

The Bicyclist Discovered That the Fascinating Lady in Bloomers Was His Cook.

A cycling romance was easily spoiled, and so was a cycling costume, in one of the pleasantest suburbs of South London. One Sunday morning as a gentleman was wheeling his way along his favorite country lane, he gradually overtook a lady bicyclist attired in the rational costume which, for a wonder, became her well. Elegantly cut, faultlessly finished, the fair rider's attire, from hat to gaiters, spoke the lady—so far, at least, as style went—and the critical spectator was fast becoming a convert to the aesthetic claims of the new fashion, when the fair rider wobbled, hesitated and was lost in a ditch at the side of the road. Quickly he rushed to her assistance, helped her to her feet and dusted her carefully down, the while she thanked him in stammering accents for his courtesy. That voice! he thought where had he heard it before? and he lifted his eyes to her. Of course he had heard those tones — they were his cook's. He forgot all about the damaged bicycle, flung himself on his own trusty steed, and fled home to his wife.

Inquiries showed that the errant domestic had a friend in service whose mistress was a bicyclist, and in the absence of her employers from town she had allowed the cook to borrow both bicycle and costume wherewith to cut a dash. But the turn of the wheel brought nothing but woe to its unhappy devotee. There was immediately a vacancy for a cook in that suburban villa.—London Telegraph.

Desperate.

It is probable that few musicians ever became famous without wishing, at one time or another, that they might find a refuge from the reputation which precedes them wherever they go. At one time the celebrated composer, Verdi, went to the watering place of Montecatini for a much-needed holiday. In one of the apartments assigned to the veteran musician stood a grand piano of splendid tone. Verdi removed the score of "Il Trovatore," which had been laid on the rack by way of compliment, locked the instrument, and called for the son of his host, to whom he said, in solemn tones: "Lead me to the spot which overhangs the steepest precipice." On reaching the summit, the maestro, who was almost exhausted from fatigue, flung the key of the piano into the abyss, saying, with energy: "Now I have done something to secure rest and quiet. On the day of my departure I will send a locksmith to provide the piano with a new key, but while I am here let it remain as it is."—Youth's Companion.

Her Forethought.

Standing in silence by the ship's rail they watched until the shores of her native land were lost to sight.

Fondly the prince looked into the face of his bride.

"Darling," he tenderly asked, "do you look to the future with any feeling of uncertainty?"

"No. See!"

To prove her trust, she showed him the return trip ticket she had purchased.—Puck.

WHEN THACKERAY WAS ANGRY.

The Sailors Who Intended to Play a Trick Changed Their Minds.

Once upon a time the daughters of Thackeray saw that good man thoroughly and heartily angry—angry to the point of profanity. It was during their Italian journey, when they were returning to the ship in Genoa harbor after a day on the shore. "We had to be on board at a certain time," Mrs. Ritchie says, in her Macmillan paper, "so that we engaged a carriage and drove quickly to the quay, where the convicts clanking in their chains were still at work. A boat was found, rowed by some sailors, who certainly did not wear chains, but who were otherwise not very unlike those industrious convicts in appearance. The bargain was made, we all five entered the boat, and as we were getting in we could see our great ship in the twilight, looking bigger than ever, and one rocket and then another going off toward the dawning stars. 'They are signaling for us,' said one of our companions; 'we shall soon be on board.'

"We had pulled some twenty strokes from the shore by this time, when suddenly the boatmen left off rowing. They put down their oars, and one of them began talking volubly, though I could not understand what he said. 'What's to be done?' said one of the young men to my father. 'They say they won't go on unless we give them fifty francs more,' and he began shaking his head and remonstrating in broken Italian. The boatmen paid no attention, shrugging their shoulders and waiting as if they were determined never to row another stroke. Then the steamer sent up two more rockets, which rose through the twilight, bidding us hurry; and then suddenly my father rose up in the stern of the boat where he was sitting, and, standing tall and erect, and in an anger such as I had never seen him in before or after in all my life, he shouted out in loud and impatient English: 'Curse you, go on!' a simple malediction which carried more force than all the Italian polysyllables and expostulations of our companions. To our surprise and great relief the men seemed frightened; they took to their oars again and began to row, grumbling and muttering. When we got on board the ship they told us it was a well-known trick the Genoese boatmen were in the habit of playing upon travelers, and that they would have sent a boat for us if we had delayed any longer."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HER HALLOWEEN EXPERIMENT.

As a Result the Engagement Will Be Announced Shortly.

"Oh, Emma," said Ethel, sweetly, to her particular chum, "I have something to tell you, dear."

"And I am quite sure that it must be something very nice, judging by your radiant face," replied Emma. "Tell me what it is. I'm just dying to hear."

"First tell me something."

"Well?"

"Did you ever work a halloween charm to find out who is to be your husband?"

"No, but I've heard of such things. You don't mean to say that you have done anything of the kind?"

"Yes. Was it naughty of me?"

"Oh, I don't say that, until I have heard what you did. Was your spell successful? Did you actually see a man's face?"

Ethel nodded her pretty head vigorously.

"Oh, who was the man? But no! Tell me the story just as it happened. How did you work your enchantments?"

"Well, it had to be done precisely at midnight, you know."

"So I understand."

"The charm is this: You take a ripe red apple, and you eat it standing in front of a mirror, finishing it just as the clock strikes the witching hour of midnight."

"How perfectly creepy."

"And the light must be turned down very low, almost out, you know."

"O, you brave girl! I wouldn't have dared do anything like that."

"And just as the clock strikes the last stroke of the midnight hour, the face of your future husband appears in the mirror, over your shoulder."

"You went through all that, did you?"

"Yes."

"And did you see a face?"

"I did, just as clear as anything."

"Whose was it?"

"Jack Bellefield's."

"No."

"Yes."

"How do you account for his face appearing in the mirror instead of some one else's?"

"I think it was because Jack was behind me at the time. He's going to get the engagement ring in a day or two."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

LOST HALF HIS SOUL.

The Buddhist Priest Was Terror-Stricken by His Portrait.

Crowds of people assembled as we arrived at the inn, just before sunset, and among others I spotted the fine head of an old Buddhist priest. After a long confabulation and a few strings of cash, which passed from my pockets into his hands, I was able to induce him to sit for his picture, and I dashed off a sketch in oils before he had time to change his mind. Unfortunately the large crowd that had gathered around, especially the women folks, seemed to scold him and talk angrily at him for his silliness in sitting, owing to the strange notion that prevails in China and, in fact, nearly all over the east, that if an image is reproduced a soul has to be given to it, and that the person portrayed has to be the supplier of it at his own expense. The venerable old Buddhist priest, who was nursing his "cash" on his lap while being immortalized on a wooden panel, and had a curious twinkle in his eye, resisted bravely for some time and sat like a statue, but finally had to give in.

"You will die," cried an old woman at him. "I saw your soul coming out of you and go into the picture. I did, really, I saw it with my own eyes."

"So did I," cried a hundred other voices in a chorus.

By the time the priest had got up they had half convinced him that at least half his soul had really gone out of him; but had the soul gone or not, he would go and take the cash for safe keeping to his home first and complain and ask for the restitution of his lost property afterward. He was a sensible man. So was I, and knowing what was coming, the moment he had gone I went into the room and packed the sketch safely, then took another clean panel and smeared it with the scrapings of my palette to show him instead in case he would come back and wish the picture destroyed. Twenty minutes had not elapsed when he was back again, of course without the "cash," holding his stomach and complaining of internal agonies.

"I am going to die," he cried, the moment he saw me; "you have taken away half my soul!"

"Certainly I have," said I, sternly. "You did not expect me to give you all that 'cash' for less than half your soul did you?"

"Oh, no! but I wish it back, as I feel so bad now without it."

"All right," said I. "I shall go into the room and destroy the image I did of you. Will you then be satisfied?"

"Yes."

Here the other panel smeared with palette scrapings was produced, after making pretense at destroying it with a knife, and never in my life have I seen an expression of relief to equal that of the priest. He had not felt half his soul so much going out of him, but he certainly felt it coming back again. He could swear by it. He was now perfectly well again.—Fortnightly Review.

The Model Servant.

Rev. Dr. Berle, of Boston, says that he had a Swedish girl doing housework in his family, and she announced not long ago that she wished to return on a visit to her native land. "And will you work for me when you come back?" he asked. The girl did not seem to understand, and said: "Are you disatisfied with me?" "Why, no," replied the clergyman. "I only thought that you might not want to come back, and that I might have to engage some one else." "I have always been taught," was the reply, "that when a girl goes to work in a family she is to remain there until she is married." "Such a unique, such an original character," says Dr. Berle, in telling the story, "is beyond my comprehension."—Rochester Herald.

A DETECTIVE'S STORY.

He Had an Assistant Who Could Not Resist Temptation.

"Do you know that the 'hold-up' of a train in Virginia recalls to my mind a similar occurrence that took place when I was a young man in the business up near Pittsburgh at a station named Greensburgh?" said a well-known railroad detective. "The details are very similar. The train was successfully held up; the express car robbed of a good round sum, and the robbers made a break for Pittsburgh after crossing the Conemaugh river, near which the robbery occurred. I received the details of the robbery in Pittsburgh from my superior officer a short time after it occurred, and something told me they would use the Conemaugh to cover up their tracks.

"I had an assistant at the time who lived on the outskirts of Allegheny City, at one of those little summer places. There was a telegraph office at the place, and I at once telegraphed him to be on the lookout for the men, and that I would see him in the morning. At the same time I took another route so as to cover as much ground as possible. The details of my assistant's movements that night I gathered from him two years later in the Cook county jail, Chicago.

"It seems that he was in the telegraph office when my message was received, and in a few minutes was on his way toward the river. It was pitch dark, but he kept on until he reached a point in the road that led through a considerable stretch of woodland. He had stopped to take his bearings when he heard a wagon coming up the road at a furious rate of speed. He left the road and sought refuge behind a good-sized tree. The wagon came up and passed on but only about a dozen yards. He made out the forms of five men as the wagon went by, and he was in the act of following them when the wagon stopped. Again he darted back into the woods and saw the robbers, for so they proved to be, lug out a good-sized box and drag it into the woods. Hastily digging a hole they buried the box, and, after marking several surrounding trees, hurried back to the wagon and continued their rapid driving toward the city.

"My assistant, after assuring himself that the men were well out of the way, hastily dug that box up and loaded himself with currency. On reaching home he found he had something like seventeen thousand dollars, and the temptation was too strong for him. He decided to keep it. He lived in his old home for nearly a year, and was shrewd enough not to use any of the money. Then he left for Chicago and shortly afterward bought quite a farm in southern Illinois. About the same time I arrested a man for breaking into a freight car.

"This fellow was far gone with consumption and I took him to the hospital. There he confessed to me that he was a member of the gang that had held up the express messenger a year and a half before, and the result of the burying of the treasure in the woods. I went out on the road and found the telegraph operator, who told me of the quick delivery of the message I had sent. I put two and two together and decided to follow up my assistant. After considerable trouble I located him and decoyed him into Chicago. There I put him under arrest and bluffed him into a confession. I recovered twelve thousand dollars, and the president of the company, John Hoey, gave me a percentage that amounted to twenty-five hundred dollars.—"Washington Star.

Dr Best, the old professor and king of the medical school was talking eagerly to a pleasant-faced elegant young student who stood before him. The young man had taken his degree and received his diploma only the day before; he had graduated at the top of the class and as Dr. Best had said to one of his fellows, as they sat together signing the diplomas, he was the only man in the class who really had a genius for his profession.

Dr Best was a New York physician of wide reputation and had kept his professorship in the medical school of one of the small inland colleges both because it was his own college and because the field work, for his lectures covered, gave him almost the only vacation that he could Exploding Powder Mills Cause Awful Havoc.

Two Unfortunate Employes Are Instantly Killed and Portions of Their Bodies Scattered Far from the Scene—Several Injured—Buildings Demolished.

Farmingdale, N. J., Nov. 20.—An explosion that shook every house in the neighborhood and made the residents feel that an earthquake had visited the place, was felt here shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday. One of the large out-houses of the Phoenix Powder works in which was stored hearly a ton of rifle powder, was blown high in the air and the two men working therein were killed outright. They were George Disbrow and Edward W. Sharp. What is left of their bodies lies in the small undertaking estabishment of Halstead Wainwright.

The Phoenix Powder works are located about a mile east of the town. The president of the company is Wm. H. Taylor of New York and the stockholders are principally wealthy men of that city. One of the numerous out-houses was blown up a year or two ago, but fortunately no one was injured. Powder, in its manufacture, goes through at least fifteen different processes and a separate house is required for each. The buildings are at least two hundred yards apart, so that in case one explodes there is little danger of any of the other meeting the same fate. A row of a dozen buildings on the main road leading from Hamilton to Farmingdale marks the houses of the employes, about thirty in number.

Disbrow and Sharp were working in the coining mill where the powder, after being pressed into cakes, is ground into rough powder preparatory to going to the glazing mill where the finishing touches are put on, the men are required to wear shoes without nails and all their clothing must be changed before going into any of the mills. Disbrow and Sharp would have been through their work in a little while. Their load of powder was nearly ready to be taken to the glazing mills.

Suddenly there was an explosion that shook every house within two miles of the coining mill and when the smoke cleared away there was hardly anything left of the building but a lot of debris.

Sharp lay thirty feet from the wrecked building. Both legs had been blown off at the knee and his face and body were fearfully cut. He presented an awful appearance. Disbrow was found in a ditch one hundred and twenty-five feet away. He was mashed to a pulp and his entrails were blown out Warren Snyder, who is employed in the packing house, was washing up when the explosion occurred. The flying glass cut his head fearfully. He was removed to his home and medical aid was summoned. Although badly injured he will probably recover. Thos. White and Daniel Voorhees were in the glazing house. Both were knocked down and received painful injuries.

A minute after the explosion the whole town was running toward the scene. Superintendent Laflin would not allow them within two hundred yards of the wrecked mill, fearing another explosion.

Sharp was married and leaves a wife and three children, the latter are sick and in a dangerous condition. He was 35 years old. Disbrow was 22 years old and unmarried. Coroner Herbert will hold an inquest to-day.

Five Killed in a Wreck.

Pittsburg, Nov. 20.—A disastrous railroad accident occurred at Larimer in which four or five coal miners and probably more lost their lives. The train wrecked consisted of sixteen carloads of coal. It was just pulling out from the new Larimer mines, and on board were a number of miners. As it was crossing a trestle the axle on the second car broke, the balance of the cars piling up in a heap, which resulted in the breaking of the trestle and the whole mass of cars and human being went down with a crash into the creek below. The miners were returning from work. The exact number cannot be learned positively. The unfortunate ones who went down in the wreckage are undoubtedly dead.

Stolen by Gypsies.

Mattoon, Ill., Nov. 20.—Miss Ella Parse, who was last week restored to her parents after remaining a captive in the hands of a band of wandering gypsies for fifteen months, has been recaptured by the same band and spirited away. The Parse family reside near the northern limits of the city. Ella is a handsome girl of 16. In August, 1893, a band of gypsies camped near the Parse homestead and Ella's beauty attracted the gypsy chief, Will Beaton.

Gov.-Elect Hastings' Cabinet.

Philadelphia, Nov. 20.—It is semi-officially announced that Gov-elect Hastings' cabinet has been decided upon as follows: Secretary of the commonwealth, Frank Reeder, of Easton; attorney-general, Henry Clay McCormick, of Williamsport; adjutant-general, Thomas J. Stewart, of Norristown, and private secretary, Louis E. Beitler, who is now private secretary to Mayor Stewart of Philadelphia.

Killed at the Dinner Table.

Sing Sing, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Mary Sheehan, the daughter of John Sheehan, shot and instantly killed her brother William Sheehan during a quarrel at he dinner table here. William had called Mary hard names. Mary was arrested and held to await the action of the grand jury.

Murderously Assaulted His Wife.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 20.—James Butler, a negro, 21 years old, murderously assaulted hs 18-year-old wife, Mabel, at their home in the old Gorham homestead on Sockannosset hill, one mile from Knightsville. He discovered that she had been unfaithful.

There's nothing SO GOOD AS Cottolene

The new vegetable shortening. Wherever introduced, it drives lard from the kitchen, and indigestion from the household.

It has been tried by every test, and has met every requirement.

It is as much superior to lard as the electric light is to the tallow-dip.

The only question now is, will you give your family the benefits which its use bestows?

There's nothing LIKE Cottolene

In composition, in healthfulness, in flavor, or in economy.

Its success has called out a lot of imitations and counterfeits made for the sole purpose of selling in the place and on the merits of Cottolene.

Avoid them all. They are made to sell and they are a sell.

The Irishman Said Good Bye.

It is said to be an old story, this of a man named Doherty, who was drilling with his squad of recruits in London. Doherty was 6 feet 2 inches in height and at that time the sergeant major was a man whose height was 5 feet 4. On this day he approached the squad, looking sharply about him for some fault to find.

All the men squared up except Doherty, and the sergeant major at once accosted him.

"Head up, there, man!" cried he.

Doherty raised his head slightly.

"Up higher, sir!"

The head was raised again. Then the sergeant major managed, by standing on his toes, to reach Doherty's chin, and he poked it higher, with the remark:

"That's better. Don't let me see your head down again."

By this time everybody was interested at seeing Doherty staring away above the sergeant major's head, when a voice from above said in a rich brogue:

"Am I always to be like this, sergeant major?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then I'll say good bye to ye, sergeant major, for I'll never see yez again."

The Turk Has Some Sense, Anyway.

By order of the Sultan, who desires that the new serum inoculation for diphtheria should be introduced into Turkey as soon as possible, a special mission composed of physicians has gone to Paris for the purpose of acquainting themselves with the mode of preparing and injecting the serum. They will be admitted into the Pasteur Laboratory. The commission includes Lieutenant Colonel Dr. Mahmoud Bey, Dr. Munir Bey and Dr. Djelal Bey. On their return these physicians will establish in Constantinople a laboratory for the preparation of serum.

Pirates Are Thick off Greece.

Piracy flourishes to a great extent along the Grecian north shore of the Mediterranean. An outrage of this kind was committed by pirates in the village of Doulave, in the island of Karpathos. A band of them travelling in a small sailing vessel landed in the island and went straight to the residence of Sakellardis Effendi, member of the tribunal, and compelled his family to give up all their money and valuables. The robbers then sailed away. Immediately after being informed of this audacious exploit the authorities of the province of Archipelago sent the State vessel Khania in pursuit of the pirate craft.

SAVED TWO WOMEN,

THOUGH MANY MILES APART.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

Many curious and interesting experiences are found in the correspondence of a woman like Mrs. Pinkham, who for many years ministered to the sufferings of her sex all over the land. Here are two notable cases, one from the Pacific and the other from the Atlantic coast.

MRS. LILLIE MEYER.

The Brooklyn woman is Mrs. Lillie Meyer. Five years ago she began to feel sharp pains in her abdomen, with the bearing-down feeling and pains in her back. She tried doctors and got no relief. A friend told her of Mrs. Pinkham's Compound, and after using it the pain left her, and menstruation now comes without suffering.

The Riverside, Cal., woman is Mrs. J. E. Dewey, who says, "I have used three bottles of your Vegetable Compound for painful menstruations.

"Every month my suffering was terrible, and I was obliged to go to bed.

"After using the first bottle, my general health was much improved, and now, after using three bottles, all pain has left me, and I am a well woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is as unfailing as the sun." Get it from your druggist.

REMARKABLE CURES
Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,
Bissell, Hunterdon Co., N. J.

18 dozen children's " " " .....50c, worth 75c
20 " " white merino vests, all sizes.....25c, worth 50c
We have the pants to match at the same prices.

Toys! Toys! Toys!

We always take pleasure in pleasing the little ones, and have purchased every Toy that has been manufactured. We have them both for boys and girls and nothing would make them happier than a useful Toy. It will be to your interest to price our goods when in our store.

Housefurnishing Goods.

We are happy to say that this department has proved us a grand success. The cause of the success was our LOW PRICES. For this week we offer you the following specials. Porcelain bowl and pitcher 65 and 75c, worth 90c and $1 10; milk pails 10 qt, 27c, worth 40c; 12 qt 33c, worth 45c; a pretty line of bird cages from $1 35 to $1 98. These prices are 20 per cent. lower than any other house. Just received a large and pretty assortment of Glassware suitable for the Holidays.

Coats. Coats.

We can truthfully say that we have sold more coats in the past week than any other house in the city. Why did we do it? Very easy answered—Our styles, prices and workmanship can not be excelled, and the public know a good thing when they see it. We can always save you money if you intend buying a Coat or Cape.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

The Great Divine of Brooklyn Who is Known Everywhere.

The one American clergyman who is known not only throughout the United States, but throughout the world, is Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn. Dr. Parkhurst's gallant fight for honesty and law in New York City, is spreading his fame, but it is doubtful whether he is as widely known as his Presbyterian brother across the river.

It was said in the days when Beecher's eloquence drew thousands to the city of churches, that more people knew of Brooklyn through the pastor of Plymouth Church than in any other way. To-day thousands know it as the home of Dr. Talmage, whose sermons are more widely read than those of any other living clergyman. In the future, however, his home is likely to be elsewhere, as he has resigned the pastorage of the Tabernacle, and the great church to which he preached for a quarter of a century will disperse itself among other societies, while he will labor in other fields.

The cause of his resignation was the total destruction by fire of the great and expensive tabernacle—the third edifice to burn during his pastorate. The society was unable to rebuild and, being homeless, Mr. Talmage evidently thought it had no need of his services.

REV. DR. TALMAGE.

When Dr. Talmage came to Brooklyn from Philadelphia a little more than 25 years ago, he was little known. He determined to bring people to his church, and he succeeded. Some reproached him with sensationalism, but he replied that he wanted to bring people to his church, and after they were there he would try and find a way to do them some good. His sermons and his startling methods advertised his church, and it was soon crowded. Some of his ways were unclerical, in the usual acceptation of what befits a clergyman, but they drew people and after they came he preached sermons that touched their hearts.

His was no uncertain word, no doubtful message, and into that message he put a vivid imagery and an affluent description that gave a Titian-like coloring to his sermons, and brought him the fame and the congregation that he wanted.

There are differences of opinion concerning Dr. Talmage, but that he is the greatest of popular preachers of the time seems to be proved by the immense sale of his sermons, and by the numberless tributes paid to him by readers and hearers. Only Spurgeon, now dead, rivalled him in popularity with the sermon reading masses, and now he stands easily first.

Dr. Talmage is 62 years of age, the father of several children, and he is now a grandfather also.

SHAKER INDIANS.

A Queer Sect that Flourishes in the Pacific Northwest.

The Indians of Washington have just closed a religious revival, and have left for Pacific county, where they will endeavor to rekindle a religious spirit among the tribes there. Their religion is very unique, strikingly original, and distinctly Indian. It is known as the Shaker religion. It is said that it first originated in the Sound country, among the Mud Bay Indians.

"When a candidate announces a desire to join he is placed in the centre of the room on his tip toes, with his arms extended full length over his head. The crowd circles around him, singing, shouting, ringing bells, and hammering anything that will make a noise. Frequently one of the heavy bells is broken, and this is hailed with delight, as it is supposed that the bad spirit has left the candidate and entered into the bell, filling it to bursting. When this happens, the candidate is completely cleansed from all evil and is born again. The candidate for admission, after standing in that position for a short time, commences to shake through fatigue. This is taken as a sign that the good spirit is entering; and the noise and din are, if possible, increased as the poor victim's shaking increases, until, from sheer exhaustion, he falls trembling upon the ground. His conversion is then complete and he is admitted into full membership."

Russian Tax On Amusements.

Russia has probably the most unique tax in the world. It is called the "amusement tax," and was instituted about 15 months ago to found an institution for the poor under the name of the "Empress Marie Foundation." The tax is laid upon every amusement ticket sold, and the managers raise the price accordingly. Already nearly 1,000,000 rubles have been raised in this way (a gold ruble is worth 77 and a silver ruble 60 cents), of which St. Petersburg contributed 200,000. All cities except Riga are merriest in December and January, and the dullest in February and March, on account of Lent. Riga prefers to have its fun in August. Our Government taxes whiskey and tobacco because they are regarded as luxuries. Russia treats theatre-going and club life as luxuries.—Troy Times.

Salvini's Slip in His Lines.

Instead of militating against them, a little accent on the part of a foreign actor or actress often catches the American public. English spoken with a certain accent, which attaches itself particularly to the French and the Italian, is very fetching.

The young Salvini, however, had an experience once when he first came here which made him feel very uncomfortable for the moment. The part which he played made it necessary for him to dash upon the stage in a certain scene and cry out, "Your lover is wounded sore, he has broken three of his ribs."

When the time came, Salvini dashed on the stage all right, but, to the astonishment of the audience, he cried out, "Your lover is wounded sore. He has broken three of his legs."

A Chance This Week.

Any young man (not attending the public schools) who wish instruction in German, Spanish, algebra or geometry, are requested to leave their names at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. this week.

Classes in these subjects will be formed to begin work in the new building of the association if a sufficiently large number desire the instruction.

ATTENDED BY ONE MILLION.

Tremendous Crowds at the Funeral of the Late Czar.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 20.—It is estimated that a million strangers were present in St. Petersburg to witness the czar's funeral. The streets and squares presented the appearance of a vast camp. Order was kept by Cossacks, who, with knouts and the merciless heels of their wild horses, kept the roadways clear for carriages, regardless of the limbs or lives of the people. The Cossacks struck the people across the faces with great whips. In the scrimmage one man was killed by a kick and a boy was suffocated. On the Mitinsky bridge near the bourse, was a man of about 45 years, dressed as a peasant and wearing a long beard. At a quarter before 3 o'clock a closed state carriage passed, immediately followed by the Czar Nicholas and the Grand Duke Michael in an open victoria. As they passed at a gentle trot, the man above mentioned, sprang into the road, and, thrusting one hand under the breast of his coat, withdrew a packet, which he threw at the czar, at whose feet it fell. The czar started back, then cooly picked up the packet. The excitement of those standing round was at the highest point, everybody believing that an attempt had been made upon the czar's life. Subsequently it was announced that the packet contained a petition and that the czar had accepted it. Whether it was an ordinary petition is open to some doubt, the extraordinary coolness and adroitness of the man having raised a suspicion that his peasant's dress was a disguise. The petitioner was arrested.

The various ministers are extremely busy preparing lists of criminals to be pardoned on the occasion of the czar's marriage. A manifesto proclaiming imperial clemency will probably be issued on the day after the marriage.

Sixty persons have been arrested in Warsaw for distributing a circular advising the people not to take the oath of allegiance to Nicholas II.

BUTCHERED BY A MANIAC.

Awful Work by a Crazed Bohemian Who Killed Himself and Family.

Wellsville, Mo., Nov. 20.—This village was the csene of a horrible triple murder and suicide. Thomas Porter-check, with his mother, two sisters and a brother, occupied a small house here. They were Bohemians in humble circumstances. Yesterday afternoon Thomas was discovered acting strangely. He insisted on sitting up all night. At 3 o'clock this morning his sister Mary was awakened by an agonizing scream from her mother. She found her mother and brother were lying on the floor while Thomas stood above them brandishing an axe. The girl ran through the house and finding all the doors locked, opened a window and jumped to the ground, where she watched the murderer at his work. He seized a can of coal oil and after pouring it over the floor and furniture, set it on fire. He then drew a butcher knife across his own throat and fell by the side of his dead mother. The screams of the girl awakened the neighbors and they rushed to the scene, but the flames had finished the work which the maniac had commenced. When the blazing wood had cooled four bodies were found, blackened and charred.

Denounced the Pauper Plan.

Boston, Nov. 20.—Rev. Jay Benson Hamilton made an appeal at he meeting of the Methodist ministers in behalf of an annuity plan for superannuated ministers. He made some plain statements regarding the present system, saying that a man must be paraded as a pauper before he could receive aid. The annuity plan, he said, had been carried out with great success in Newark, Philadelphia, California, Minnesota and many western states, but it had not been adopted in New England. It preserved the self-respect of applicants. The conditions of things to-day were brutal. He believed that all should receive an equal share. He could see no reason why the bishops should be treated with more care and tenderness than the humbler body.

Champions Will Compete.

New York, Nov. 20.—Many entries for the international bicycle tournament at Madison Spuare garden beginning on Tuesday next have been received. The best of the professionals and cracks in the A and B classes will compete. Verheyen, the German rider, will appear in most of the short distance races. Edwards, the Englishman, is in good form. Colombo, the Italian, is in capital shape, despite the rough sea voyage which ended on Sunday. Zimmerman and "Kid" Wheeler did their work yesterday at Freehold, N. J., the home of the champion. The Callahan brothers, of Buffalo, and McDuffie, the Massachusetts rider, are also entered.

Pennsylvania Village Burned.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 20.—A fire which broke out at Mudtown, in the township of Old Forge, this county, destroyed four hotels, three dwelling houses, a clothing store, grocery, butcher shop, baker's store, two barber shops and a large barn. Sixty people are homeless, many of them without clothing. The fire originated in the hotel of John Harvey but just how is not known. The loss is estimated at $25,000, with slight insurance.

No Law for Alien Bigamy.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—The Dominion government is powerless to punish bigamists when the ceremony of second marriage is performed in the United States or any other foreign country. This important decision was rendered by Chief Justice Armour in the court of the queen's bench, the associate judges concurring.

Gov. Jackson Will Retire.

GOLD IN GREAT DEMAND

Bankers Have Trouble in Securing the Metal.

Subscribers to the New Government Loan Begin To Draw Heavily on the Sub-Treasury—Many Reported in the West—Banks May Refuse Concerted Action.

New York, Nov. 20.—There has been considerable missionary work among the bank presidents regarding the subscriptions to the bond issues. There were many informal conferences of two and three different presidents. The result of these conferences brings to light the disinclination of the banks to distribute the loss of gold which will come from the bond subscriptions pro rata among the associated banks of New York, according to the percentage of each bank's holding of gold. This was the method taken in February. The banks now appear to prefer to let each individual bank take its own course of action regarding the surrender of its gold.

The calls for gold from out-of-town correspondents are quite numerous, and the withdrawals of gold from the sub-treasury by New York banks are made on orders from correspondents in the interior.

There was withdrawn yesterday between $1,500,000 and 02,000,000 from the sub-treasury and the amount of gold withdrawn from the sub-treasuries throughout the country with which to purchase bonds is estimated at $4,000,000, since last Thursday. The net loss of gold to the government is not so great as some gold has been paid in during that period.

The largest withdrawal was made by the Third National bank, which took $1,000,000. President Hepburn states that he has had inquiries from out-of-town customers which would call for $3,000,000 gold more than his bank holds. He is willing to give up $1,000,000 from the holdings of his bank, but was compelled to call upon the sub-treasury for out-of-town demands. All of the banks report a similar demand from the country, indicating that the subscriptions for the bonds will be large outside of New York city.

It has not yet been decided when the presidents of the banks shall meet in formal conference, but it will not be later than to-morrow. The subscriptions from the foreign houses will not be so large as expected, as they are having difficulties in securing the gold. The exchange rates make it impossible to secure gold on the other side without loss, and the banks have not shown any disposition to give any large amounts of gold to the foreign houses. They wish to keep the bonds in this country and consequently do not encourage the international houses to make large bids. They argue that if the foreigners held the bonds they might thrust them back upon the United States at any moment on account of some unfavorable developments abroad and force down the market price by a sudden liquidation. The bankers feel more confident that the value of the bonds will remain more secure if in the hands of domestic investors. The foreign houses are desirous, however, of placing large blocks abroad and their bids will be only limited by the amount of gold they can secure.

Washington, Nov. 20.—The treasury stated balance is $101,162,000, of which $61,832,000 is in gold. This statement of the gold does not take in $2,075,000 of gold withdrawn at New York, which will not begin to show in the treasury books until to-day. So far slightly over $3,000,000 in gold has been withdrawn at New York since Nov. 13, and $100,000 at other points. Otherwise, except for gold withdrawn to bid for bonds, the treasury has been gaining gold since Nov. 13, as it did before, from mintage and in the western subtreasuries.

HORSE BUTCHERS CAUGHT.

Located by Health Authorities in a Barn at Kearny, N. J.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 20.—The Kearny board of health discovered that G. H. Rose and a number of other men were operating a horse slaughter house in that place. When the authorities visited the shop, which is located in a barn, they found part of a freshly dressed horse carcass and a number of dried horse hams. The men declared they were exporting all meat to France, but the members of the board believe much of it is being sold to the local dealers. It is thought that the men are the same ones who were driven out of Hemstead, Long Island, some time ago.

The slaughtering has been ordered stopped and an effort will be made to capture Rose, who is said to live in Brooklyn. The entire gang will be prosecuted.

Caught a Diamond Thief.

Cincinnati, Nov. 20.—Detectives have arrested William M. Bagley of Chicago formerly clerk for Hayman, Berg & Co. there. He is supposed to have stolen $30,000 worth of diamonds from Hayman, Berg & Co. The detectives also arrested Mrs. Bagley who confessed that Bagley had told her of his stealings and gave minute instructions as to where the jewels were hid.

McAuliffe's Hand Broken.

Coney Island, N. Y, Nov. 20.—"Jack" McAuliffe, the champion lightweight pugilist, narrowly being knocked out here during a contest by Owen Zeigler of Philadelphia. The referee declared the contest a draw amid wild excitement. McAuliffe's hand was broken.

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Our cleaner is ready, and our dyer has his fall shades mixed.

LIFE WAS A BURDEN.

A Pain-Racked Sufferer Tells an Interesting Story—How He Was Tortured for Years and Finally Cured by Munyon's Remedy.

Charles Wark, of 14 N. Twenty-fourth St., Philadelphia, has been a constant sufferer from rheumatism for years. He was cured by the use of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. This is his story:

"I was afflicted with rheumatism in the right shoulder and suffered the most excruciating agony. Sharp shooting pains darted through it so intense I could not sleep night. Even the weight of the bedclothes was more than I could bear; neither could I lie on the right side or my back. Life became a perfect burden to me. I could not raise my hand to my head, and when I attempted to put on my coat or any article of dress, the torture was enough to drive me wild. Many remedies were suggested and tried, but none did me the slightest good, and I began to despair of ever being able to obtain relief. Some time ago, however, I procured a bottle of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. It afforded me relief after the first few doses, and by the time the little 25 cent bottle was gone I was entirely free from pain. I have had no return of my old enemy, and I feel satisfied I am permanently cured. It seems so wonderful I can hardly realize it, and can only show my appreciation of the merits of the Cure by recommending it to other sufferers."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggist, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

KILLED HIS COLLEAGUE

H. H. Holmes' Arrest Discloses a Great Crime.

B. F. Pitezel, Who Engaged in Many Rascally Operations With Him, Died by His Hand—Murdered for the Insurance on His Wretched Life—Several Other Arrests.

Philadelphia, Nov. 20.—The grand jury has returned true bills of indictment against Herman Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes, who is under arrest at Boston; Jeptha D. Howe, the St. Louis lawyer, and Mrs. Carrie A. Pitezel, alias Cook, for fraudulently obtaining $10,000 insurance from the Fidelity Mutual Life association of this city, upon the death of B. F. Pitezel.

Immediately following the finding of the indictments, which charge "conspiracy to cheat and defraud," the life insurance association received word of the arrest in St. Louis of Howe, and of the capture in Burlington, Vt., of the woman who is the widow of the victim, and who has confessed to the conspiracy. Steps have already been taken to extradite the accused.

While the indictments do not charge murder, the authorities believe it will be shown at the trial that Pitezel was done away with by the accused, either intentionally or otherwise.

The grand jury found the indictments upon the strength of evidence presented by President Fouse of the insurance association, and Coroner Ashbridge.

Previous to the finding of the indictments Coroner Ashbridge stated to a reporter that he was positive the body discovered on Sept. 4 at 1316 Callowhill street, in this city, and upon which an inquest was held on the following day as that of B. F. Perry, was none other than that of Pitezel. "The remains were in such an advanced state of decomposition," the coroner said, "that Dr. Mattern, who made the post mortem examination, was unable to establish any fact further than that the lungs were terribly congested. Consequently the coroner's jury had no other recourse than to find that Benjamin F. Perry, aged 4 years came to his death from congestion of the lungs caused by inhaling flames or poisonous drugs, and the body was buried in the Potter's field."

"One theory is that Pitezel was induced to submit to chloroform in order that he might painlessly be marked with burns which could be shown a physician. After the physician had gone, a dead body, similarly marked could be placed in bed and the physician could be deceived into the notion that his patient had died.

"Now if Pitezel had taken an overdose of chloroform, which killed him would not the conspiracy still be a provable fact, supported as the evidence is by the confessions of the widow and of Mudgett? People believe if Pitezel's body be re-examined a fracture of the skull will be discovered."

Boston, Nov. 20.—Mrs. Carrie Pitezel was found in Burlington, Vt., and came to this city with a Pinkerton detective. She told the officers all she knew about the case, but thinks her husband is still alive. Certain suspicious things about the whole matter incline the officers to the belief that Pitezel has been made away with and that the wife has been deceived in the matter all along.

GERMAN BAPTISTS CONVENE.

The Fourteenth Annual Convention Begun at Meriden.

Meriden, Conn., Nov. 20.—The fourteenth annual session of the State German Baptists convention opened at the German Baptist church. The services were opened by the Rev. Mr. Schultz of New York, general secretary of the missionary board.

Business of a routine character followed. Rev. O. F. Pister of New Britain read a paper on "Conditions and Requirements concerning the Church." Rev. Dr. Schuff of Newark, N. J., spoke on young men. Mr. G. E. Hildebrand of Seymour delivered an address on "Work of Young Men in the Congregation," and Miss Pauline Meyers of New Haven told of the work the young women are doing. The moderator is Rev. F. W. Meyers of New Haven and the clerk Rev. W. A. Schoen of Waterbury.

Locomotive Engineers Meet.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 20.—The executive board of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen met here to act in accordance with the resolution of the Harrisburg convention. The question of the location of the headquarters is to be heard later in the week. The change adopted in the insurance law is to permit members to carry either $500, $1,000 or $1,500 insurance instead of the compulsory $1,500 as in the present law. The duty of the board is to fix the rates of assessments and arrange details.

An Army Contractor Arrested.

Denver, Nov. 20.— James W. Payne of Los Angeles, a contractor of cereal supplies for the United States government military posts west of the Mississippi, has been arrested here for the embezzlement of money received on account of his contract from Chief Quartermaster Atwood.

Paul's Defense Begun.

Boston, Nov. 20.—The government has closed it's side in the Whitfield assault case. Mrs. Whitfield swore that Paul had lured her into a deserted house and shot her. James Paul, the defendant, took the stand and said the woman had attempted suicide.

Railroad Companies Combine.

Rutherford, N. J., Nov. 20.—Representatives of the Union Traction company and the Newark, Rutherford and Hackensack Electric Railway company met here and agreed that the latter company should be absorbed by the former.

Help for Earthquake Sufferers

New York, Nov. 20.—A letter was received at the Chamber of Commerce from Rev. Dr. George Washburn at Constantinople, acknowledging the receipt of the $900 sent to earthquake sufferers.

THEIR ORDER FLOURISHES.

Reports Before the Christian Temperance Union.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 20.—The introduction of fraternal delegates was the first business in order at he session of the Women's Christian Temperance union. Among the ladies introduced were Miss Emma Bates, state superintendent of public instruction of North Dakota. She was greeted enthusiastically and spoke briefly of the progress of the temperance and suffrage causes in the northwest. The formal presentation of a gold medal to Wilbur Hill of Indiana for the best essay on the department of mercy was made. Anna M. Cummings, a native of South Africa and president of the W. C. T. U. there addressed the convention on the growth of the movement in that country.

"The National Temperance Hospital" was the subject of Mrs. Mary E. Kline's address. She said that the Chicago hospital was one of the few institutions of that city which was not in debt and probably the only hospital to claim the proud distinction. The treasurers report showed a balance on hand of $854. An effort will be made to secure a building fund, purchase ground and erect a suitable structure to its needs. Mrs. Matilda B. Carse spoke of the temple, the Chicago headquarters of the union and predicted that notwithstanding the difficulties to be overcome the temple would be out of debt within the next two years. The executive committee of the National Suffrage association most of whom are members of the W. C. T. U. met at the residence of Mrs. Southworth and arranged for the annual convention in Atlanta, Ga., in February. Susan B. Anthony and Mrs. Chapman Catt of New York will represent the Suffrage association on the executive board of the women's council which convenes in Washington, Feb. 18.

PLANTERS SUE CARLISLE.

Their Counsel File a Brief in an Application for a Mandamus.

Washington, Nov. 20.—General J. L. Brent and G. E. Hamilton, counsel for the Miles Planting and Manufacturing company of Louisiana in its application for a writ of mandamus to compel Secretary Carlisle and Commissioner Miller of the internal revenue bureau, to examine the plant of the company as a preliminary step in obtaining the sugar bounty for the present year, which it is claimed has been repealed by the new tariff act, have filed a brief in the district court of appeals on its appeal from the decision of Judge McComas, overruling the application.

The claims made by the appellants are that the provisions of the McKinley law authorizing the payment of bounty to sugar producers and manufacturers are in full force, and are left unrepealed by the new tariff act. They further claim that the duty of the secretary of the treasury and the commissioner of internal revenue to cause inspection is a ministerial duty and not one involving the exercise of discretion as claimed by them and sustained by Judge McComas.

Mars' Canals Double.

Boston, Nov. 20.—A dispatch has been received from Mr. Percival Lowell at the Lowell observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., stating that he canals of Mars, as observed, had begun to double and that Phison and Euphrates were seen geminated. The canals were observed doubled by Lick observatory in 1890 and again in 1892. During the present opposition one canal only has heretofore been announced as double, this being Ganges, and the observer, Prof. Holden, of Lick. Observations of the same canal since that time have not shown it to be continuously double. The cause of the duplication is by no means determined. Mr. Lowell is of the opinion that it is dependent upon the season, and has predicted all along, that the canals would not be seen in duplicate until some time in November.

Yale Entertained the Public.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 20.—The daily practice of the Yale football eleven was open to the public at large, an unexpected move. The announcement that spectators were to be admitted within the Yale field was not made till 1 o'clock, but before the teams appeared at 2:15, nearly 2,000 spectators were on hand. The practice was an hour long, and there was only a single injury, that of Thorne, whose back was slightly wrenched in bucking the centre. The tickets for the Harvard game were distributed here without friction.

Negro Miners Killed.

Huntington, W. Va., Nov .20.—A terrible accident happened in the mines of McDowell county on the line of the Norfolk & Western railroad, in one of the Keystone Coal and Coke company's houses. Four or five colored men were attempting to open a keg of blasting powder with a pick. The instrument was driven through the keg with such force as to cause the powder to explode and two of them, Elmore Knight and Sam Dunn, were blown to atoms. Charley Seols was injured, but will live.

Royal Help for Flood Sufferers.

London, Nov. 20.—The floods along the Thames are slowly subsiding. The queen visited the flooded districts of Eton and Windsor and distributed among the poor orders for coal, beef, soup, etc. She also gave £50 to the relief fund. William Waldorf Astor has given £100 to the fund for the relief of the flood sufferers at Maidenhead, where his residence, Cliveden, is located.

Da Gama Still at War.

London, Nov. 20.—A dispatch from Buenos Ayres says: Admiral da Gama states that the revolutionary chiefs have determined not to accept the presidency of Prudente de Moraes. Admiral da Gama declares that he has seven thousand troops on the frontier of Rio Grande ready to begin hostilities immediately.

Gresham Expects No Reply.

Washington, Nov. 20. — Secretary Gresham says he has received no reply from Japan to the guarded offer of mediation made by the United States and no definite reply from Japan is expected in the immediate future.

HUSBANDS AS VICTIMS

One Killed and Six Deserted by Mrs. Redmond.

The Remarkable Career of a Trenton, N. J., Woman—Her First Husband Tells the Story of Her Life—Accused of Killing Orsen House and Sent to an Asylum.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 20.—Charles A. Anderson, at present an inmate of the soldiers' home in Kearney, is the first of a series of eight husbands whom the woman now known as Mrs. Irene A. V. Redmond, of Trenton, has taken to herself during her forty-nine years of life. A commission was appointed at Trenton to inquire into the woman's sanity.

Anderson, who is an artist, had lived in Jersey City for nearly twenty years. Last January he was admitted to the home to be treated for an eye trouble. He says he has a son who resides in California and is worth $50,000. Anderson told an interesting story. The list of the woman's husbands since she deserted me," said he, "is as follows: No. 2, J. W. Denver, who went crazy and died; No. 3, Orsen House, who was murdered; No. 4, Chris Bower, member of congress from South Carolina, dead; No. 5, a crippled musician named Charlie Naylor, deserted after a year; No. 6, Frank Parker, from whom she was divorced; No. 7, Paul K. Redmond, and No. 8, Harry Carson, at present in jail at Trenton.

"I married that woman," continued Anderson, "when she was fifteen years old and I seventeen. She was the daughter of W. C. Vansant, a wealthy wholesale tobacconist of Trenton. She was a perfect beauty. We lived together for six years. We had one child when she deserted me and went to live with husband No. 2. He went crazy, and then Orsen House, a New York lawyer, procured a bogus divorce from me for the woman and marrried her. He was wealthy. She got rid of him in July, 1876, but was acquitted of causing his death on the ground of insanity.

"Then she married Bower, and after him the crippled musician. She kicked him out, music and all, after a year of married life. Frank Parker, a baseball player of Trenton, was the next victim, and with him she lived for five years, squandering the money she had gotten from House."

In the meantime her mother had given my son and hers a farm of 310 acres near Lawrence Station, N. J., she to have a life interest in it. The farm is a magnificent one.

"Well," continued the original husband, "she soon got tired of Parker, quit him and married Redmond, and after living with him for six years had him arrested for assault. The chief of police, Murphy, of Jersey City, would be interested if he knew Redmond. I've no doubt they were well acquainted some years ago.

"If Redmond can prove Irene insane, which she undoubtedly is, I and my son will obtain the property near Lawrence Station, which she has allowed to run to waste. That is why I sacrificed my self respect and went down to see her last summer in order to prove her insane. The woman is a veritable demon and ought to be confined for life."

Anderson was a member of the United States detective force for a number of years, and has traveled all over the world. He seems to regard his wife's marital experience as a huge joke.

TYPHOID IN OYSTERS.

The Epidemic at Wesleyan University Due To Them.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 20.—Dr. Charles Lindley, of this city, secretary of the state board of health said that beyond the shadow of a doubt the epidemic of typhoid fever at Wesleyan university could be traced to oysters infected with the germs of disease. It hab been ascertained, he said, that the oysters provided for a series of banquets at he university had been placed in a porton of the Quinnipeac river here to fatten.

The fattening ground is near to the house of the dealer from whom the oysters for Middletown consumption were obtained and it was learned that two members of the dealer's family had suffered from the fever and that excreta had been discharged into the sewer which empties into the river close to the place where the oysters had been placed.

More Time for Gould.

New York, Nov. 20.—Justice Truax in the supreme court has signed an order granting Russell Sage and George J. Gould twenty days to answer the complaint in the action brought to recover securities which were placed in the hands of Jay Gould and Sage, as trustees for the consolidated bondholders of the Kansas Pacific Railway company. It is charged that these amounted to eleven millions of dolllars, and were taken by the trustees and put in their own pockets.

Japs on the Watch.

London, Nov. 20.—A dispatch from Tien-Tsin to the Central News, says that part of the Japanese fleet is cruising between Talien-Wan and Port Arthur and the remainder of the squadron is cruising in the Gulf of Pe-Chi-Li, giving particular attention to Wei-Hai-Wei, which they are watching closely.

Mexico Won't Fight.

City of Mexico, Nov. 20.—The reports published in the United States to the effect that a war is imminent between Guatemala and Mexico are regarded here as pure fabrications.

Went Down With the Sloop.

Oswego, N. Y., Nov 20.—The little fishing sloop Gazelle, which left this port ten days ago for Kingston, Ont., has been given up for lost. There were three men on board.

Robbed School and Scholars.

Chappaqua, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Burglars entered the Chappaqua Mountain institute here, ransacked the building and secured nearly all the clothing belonging to the scholars.

PROSTRATED!

A Most Dreaded and Awful Danger.

WHAT MAKES SO MANY PEOPLE DROP DEAD IN THE STREET?

Why Are Homes Filled With the Weak and Nervous?

WEAK NERVES, WEAK HEART AND EXHAUSTED BRAIN.

These are the Causes and They Must Be Overcome.

It is a weakness, a sin, a crime to neglect your health. Death has terrors for everyone, but people do not seem to think much about it until they are ready to break down. Then anguish fills the soul. Then despair replaces ambition, and weakness and exhaustion take the place of strength.

Have you palpitation, fluttering and feeling of weakness and uneasiness round the heart, dizziness, faintness and shortness of breath? Then look to your heart! It is dangerously weak! Sometimes there is pain around the heart. With these symptoms there is generally loss of appetite, gas, weakness, anxiety, forebodings, despondency and extreme nervousness. Such a condition is equal to a deadly serpent coiled about you, whose venomous fangs are about to sink into your flesh and draw your life's blood. Read the remarkable experience of Joseph Booth, Esq, the widely-known superintendent of Torry's Razor Manufactory, Worcester, Mass:

"Some time ago," he says, "I was taken with a terrible dizziness and palpitation of the heart, which so weakened me I could not stand. A terrible burning sensation would be felt over the heart, and at the same time it would palpitate in a dangerous manner.

"I had an all-gone feeling, was terribly weak and despondent, and a terrible foreboding was continually over me. My food distressed me terribly and I had severe pains. I was so weak and sick I thought I should die. I was also troubled greatly with gas.

"After trying several remedies for my sufferings without success, I was convinced that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy was the only medicine that would cure me. I saw that many had been cured of the same complaint by it. I commenced using it and the result justifies my confidence.

My troubles have all left me after using this great remedy. My heart disease is cured and I can eat anything without distress. Dizziness no longer troubles me, and I am cheerful and bright, with no fits of despondency. In fact I am a new man. I advise everyone to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is a wonderful medicine."

Everybody is unanimous in proclaiming this great remedy the most wonderful in the world; why don't you try it? That weak organ will soon wear out. Do you want it to? Then take the one sure cure for it, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City. He has the largest practice in the world and this grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is a guarantee that his medicine will cure and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time, free of charge, personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

CHAPTER IV

In August this pair of disappointed people met once more amid their old surroundings. Perhaps their enforced absence from one another gave at first some zest to their reunion. Jim was at times tender, and like his former self; Rosalys, if sad and subdued, less sullen and reproachful than she had been in London.

Mrs. Ambrose had fallen into delicate health, and her daughter was, in consequence, able to dispose of her time outside the house as she wished. The moonlight meetings with Jim were discontinued; but husband and wife went for long strolls sometimes in the remoter nooks of the park, through winding walks in the distant shrubberies, and down paths hidden by high yew hedges from intruding eyes that might look with suspicion on their being together.

On one especially beautiful August day they paced side by side, talking at moments with something of their old tenderness. The sky above the dark green barriers on either hand was a bottomless deep of blue. The yew boughs were covered in curious profusion by the handiwork of energetic spiders, who had woven their glistening webs in every variety of barbaric pattern. In shape some resembled hammocks, others purses, others deep bags, in the middle of which a large yellow insect remained motionless and watchful.

"Shall we sit for a little while in the summer house?" said Rosalys at last, in flat accents, for a tete-a-tete with Jim had long ceased to give her any really strong beats of pleasure. "I want to talk to you further about plans; how often we had better write, and so on."

HUSBAND AND WIFE WENT FOR LONG STROLLS.

They sat down in an arbor made of rustic logs which overlooked the mere. The woodwork had been left rough within, and dusty spider webs hung in the crevices; here and there the bark had fallen away in strips; above, on the roof, there were clumps of fungi, looking like tufts of white fur.

"This is a sunless, sad sort of place you have chosen," he said, looking round critically.

The boughs had grown so thickly in the foreground that the glittering margin of water was hardly perceptible between their interlacing twigs, and no visible hint of a human habitation was given, though the rustic shelter had been originally built with the view of affording a picturesque glimpse of the handsome old brick house, wherein the Ambroses had lived for some three centuries.

"You might have found a more lively scene for what will be, perhaps, our last interview for years," Jim went on.

"Are you really going so soon?" she asked, passing over the complaint.

"Next week. And my father has made all sorts of arrangements for me. Besides, he is beginning to suspect that you and I are rather too intimate. And your mother knows, somehow or other, that I have been up here several times of late. We must be careful."

"I suppose so," she answered, absently, looking out under the log roof at a chaffinch swinging himself backwards and forwards on a large bough. A sort of dreary indifference to her surroundings; a sense of being caged and trapped had begun to take possession of Rosalys. The present was full of perplexity, the future objectless. Now and then, when she looked at Jim's lithe figure and healthy, virile face, she felt that perhaps she might have been able to love him still if only he had cared for her with a remnant of his former passionate devotion. But his indifference was even more palpable than her own. They sat and talked on within the dim arbor for a little while. Then Jim made one of the unfortunate remarks that always galled her to the quick. She rose in anger, answered him with cold sarcasm and hastened away down the little wood. He followed her, a rather ominous frightshining in his eyes.

"Your temper is really growing insufferable, Rosalys!" he cried, and laid his hand roughly on her arm to detain her.

"How dare you!" said the girl. "For God's sake leave me, and don't come back again! I rejoice to think that in a few days it will not be in your power to insult me any more!"

"D——n it—I am going to leave you, am I not? I only want to keep you here for a moment to come to some understanding! Indeed, you'll be surprised to find how very much I am going to leave you, when you hear what I mean. My ideas have grown considerably emancipated of late, and therefore I tell you there is no reason on earth why any soul should ever know of that miserable mistake we made in the spring."

She winced a little; it was an unexpected move; and her eyes lingered uneasily on a copper-colored butterfly playing a game of hide-and-seek with a little blue companion.

"Who," he continued, "is ever going to search the register of that old East-London church? We must philosophically look on the marriage as an awkward fact in our lives, which won't prevent our loving elsewhere when we feel inclined. In my opinion this early error will carry one advantage with it—that we shall be unable to distinguish any love we may feel for another person by a sordid matrimonial knot—unless, indeed, after seven years of obliviousness to one another's existence."

"I'll—try to—emancipate myself likewise," she said, slowly. "It will be well to forget this tragedy of our lives! And the most tragic part of it is—that we are not even sorry that we don't love each other any more!"

"The truest words you ever spoke!"

"And the surest event that was ever to come, given your nature."

"And yours."

She hastened on down the grass walk into the broad graveled path leading to the house. At the corner stood Mrs. Ambrose, who was better, and had come out for a stroll—as an invalid assuming the privilege of wearing a singular scarlet gown, and a hat in which a number of black quills stood startlingly erect.

"Ah—Rosy!" she cried. "Oh! and Mr. Durrant? What a color you have got, child."

"Yes. Mr. Durrant and I have been having a furious political discussion, mamma. I have grown quite hot over it. He is more unreasonable than ever. But when he gets abroad he won't be as he is now. A few years of India will change all that." And to carry on the idea of her unconcern she turned to whistle to a bold robin that had flitted down from a larch tree, perched on the yew hedge, and looked inquiringly at her, answering her whistle with his pathetic little pipe.

Durrant had come up behind. "Yes," he said cynically. "One never knows how an enervating country may soften one's brains."

He bade them a cool good-by and left. She watched his retreating figure, the figure of the active, the strong, the handsome animal, who had scarcely won the better side of her nature at all. He never turned his head. So this was the end!

The bewildering bitterness of it well-nigh paralyzed Rosalys for a few moments. Why had they been allowed—he and she—to love one another with that eager, almost unholy, passion, and then to part with less interest in each other than ordinary friends? She felt ashamed of having ceded herself to him. If her mother had not been beside her she would have screamed out aloud in her pain.

Mrs. Ambrose lifted up her voice. "What are you looking at, child? . . . My dear, I want a little word with you. Are you sure you are attending? When you pout your lip like that, Rosalys, I always know that you are in a bad frame of mind. . . . The vicar has been here; and he has made me a little unhappy."

"I should have thought he was too stupid to give anyone a pang! Why do they put such simpletons into the churches?"

"Well—he says that people are chattering about you and that young Durrant. And I must tell you that—that, from a marrying point of view, he is impossible. You know that. And I don't want him to make up to you. Now, Rosalys, my darling, tell me honestly—I feel I have not looked after you lately as I ought to have done—tell me honestly, is he in love with you?"

"He is not, mother, to my certain knowledge."

"Are you with him?"

"No. That I swear."

CHAPTER V.

Seven years and some months had passed since Rosalys spoke as above written, and never a sound of Jim.

As she had mentally matured under the touch of the gliding seasons, Miss Ambrose had determined to act upon the hint Jim had thrown out to her as to the practical nullity of their marriage contract, if they simply kept in different hemispheres without a word. She had never written to him a line; and he had never written a line to her.

He might be dead for all that she knew; he possibly was dead. She had taken no steps to ascertain anything about him, though she had been aware for years that he was no longer in the army list. Dead or alive he was completely cut off from the country in which he and she had lived, for his father had died a long time before this, and his house and properties had been sold, and not a scion of the house of Durrant remained in that part of England.

Rosalys had readily imbibed his ideas of their mutual independence; and now, after the lapse of all these years, had acted upon them with the surprising literalness of her sex when they act upon advice at all.

Mrs. Ambrose, who had distinguished herself in no whit during her fifty years of life save by the fact of having brought a singularly beautiful girl into the world, had passed quietly out of it. Rosalys' uncle had succeeded his sister-in-law in the possession of the old house with its red tower, and the broad paths and garden lands; he had been followed by an unsatisfactory son of his, last in the entail, and thus unexpectedly Rosalys Ambrose found herself sole mistress of the spot of her birth.

People marveled somewhat that she called herself Miss Ambrose still. Though a woman now getting on for thirty she was distinctly attractive both in face and in figure, and could confront the sunlight as well as the moonbeams still. In the manner of women who are still sure of their charms, she was fond of representing herself as much older than she really was. Perhaps she would have been disappointed if her friends had not laughed and contradicted her, and told her that she was still lovely and looked like a girl. Lord Parkhurst, anyhow, was firmly of that contradictory opinion; and perhaps she cared more for his views than for anyone else's at the present time.

That distinguished sailor had been but one of many suitors; but he had stirred her heart as none of the others could do. It was not merely that he was brave and pleasing, and had returned from a campaign in Egypt with a hero's reputation; but that his chivalrous feelings towards women, originating perhaps in the fact that he knew very little about them, were sufficient to gratify the most exacting of the sex.

His rigid notions of duty and honor, both towards them and from them, made the blood of Rosalys run cold when she thought of a certain little episode of her past life, notwithstanding, that, or perhaps because, she loved him dearly.

"He is not the least bit of a flirt, like most sailors," said Miss Ambrose to her cousin and companion, Miss Jennings, on a particular afternoon in this eighth year of Jim Durrant's obliteration from her life. It was an afternoon with an immense event immediately ahead of it; no less an event than Rosalys' marriage with Lord Parkhurst, which was to take place on the very next day.

The local newspaper had duly announced the coming wedding in proper terms as "the approaching nuptials of the beautiful and wealthy Miss Ambrose, of Ambrose Towers, with a distinguished naval officer, Lord Parkhurst." There followed an ornamental account of the future bridegroom's heroic conduct during the late war. "The handsome face and figure of Lord Parkhurst," wound up the honest paragraphist, "are not altogether unknown to us in this vicinity, as he has recently been visiting his uncle, Col. Lacy, high sheriff of the county. We wish all prosperity to the happy couple, who have doubtless a brilliant and cloudless future before them."

This was the way in which her acceptance of Durrant's views had worked themselves out. He had said: "After seven years of mutual oblivion we can marry again if we choose."

And she had chosen.

Rosalys almost wished that Lord Parkhurst had been a flirt, or at least had won experience as the victim of one, or many, of those precious creatures, and had not so implicitly trusted her. It would have brought things more nearly to a level.

"A flirt! I should think not," said Jane Jennings. "In fact, Rosalys, he is almost alarmingly strict in his ideas. It is a mistake to believe that so many women are angels, as he does. He is too simple. He is bound to be disappointed some day."

Miss Ambrose sighed nervously. "Yes," she said.

"I don't mean by you to-morrow. God forbid!"

"No."

Miss Ambrose sighed again, and a silence followed, during which, while recalling unutterable things of the past, Rosalys gazed absently out of the window at the lake, that some men were dredging, the mud, left bare by draining down the water, being imprinted with hundreds of little footmarks of plovers feeding there. Eight or nine herons stood further away, one or two composedly fishing, their gray figures reflected with unblurred clearness in the mirror of the lake. Some little water hens waddled with a fussy gait across the sodden ground in front of them, and a procession of wild geese came through the sky, and passed on till they faded away into a row of black dots.

Suddenly the plovers rose into the air, uttering their customary wails, and dispersing like a group of stars from a rocket; and the herons drew up their flail like legs, and flapped themselves away.

Something had disturbed them; a carriage sweeping round to the other side of the house.

"There's the door-bell!" Rosalys exclaimed, with a start. "That's he, for certain! Is my hair untidy, Jane? I've been rumpling it awfully, leaning back on the cushions. And do see if my gown is all right at the back—it never did fit well."

DELEGATES, ATTENTION!

On Your Decision Rests the Fate of Your Ticket.

THE SCHOOL BOARD ISSUE MUST BE MET.

Nominees for School Trustees Cannot Expect to Be Elected Unless They Stand Openly Pledged to the Same Line of Public Policy as Are the Candidates for Mayor and Councilmen—The Existing School Law Was Established by the Plainfield People, and Must Not Be Assailed.

The delegates chosen by the Plainfield Republicans to make city nominations in the convention tomorrow night have a conflict of principles before them.

They have on one hand the platform of Messrs See, Ginna and Fisk, nominees for re-election as councilmen, of Mr. Gilbert the unopposed candidate for continuance as mayor, and of the people, as represented in the School Board law.

Against this is the platform of the School Board, which seeks perpetuation of its power and policy and abolishment of the law which the people passed.

For years the sentiment of Plainfield taxpayers has been growing against the School Board methods. The star-chamber proceedings of this body of chosen public servants were a continued source of dissatisfaction.

A climax was bound to come.

It came in the purchase of the Wadsworth property—a purchase effected in a manner which was sharply criticized.

The people demanded to know the reason of the investment.

The Board replied that it was a good speculation—bought so cheap, and worth so much!—and besides they wanted to put a high school there.

Already compelled to economize in the various municipal departments, and bearing in mind the enormous proportion of taxes already taken for school expenses, the people protested against their funds being used for real-estate speculation, and looked into the matter of the need of another high school.

They found that such an institution was by no means necessary, and that if it were they had abundant spare room on land already owned.

The Board argued that the proposed building would be a beautiful ornament to the town. Its cost was estimated at $75,000—upwards.

The people computed the first cost, the cost of equipment, the cost of running, and the figures made them aghast.

It meant a total bonded school indebtedness of $159,500, and an annual expense of $12,000!

A fine jewel, truly,—they said—but a luxury not to be afforded till sewers were built and other actual necessities provided.

So they had framed and passed the School Board bill.

Its makers were Craig A. Marsh and Foster M. Voorhees.

Its advocates were Alexander Gilbert, E. R. Pope, J. W. Murray, J. F. MacDonald, John M Whiton, Rowland Cox, Isaac L Miller, O T. Waring, L V. F. Randolph, Emil Woltmann, Leonard Spangenberg, E. N. Erickson, O. B. Leonard, H. P. Talmadge, William Addis, Thomas Carty, Charles Hyde, R. O. Howell, J. B. Dumont, W. H. Murray, Wm. B. Wadsworth, S. C. Peck, T. H. Tomlinson, T. J. Carey, E C. Mulford, W. D. W. Miller, J. W. Sandford, and a host of other sterling, representative citizens.

The law was a wise one. It gave no one the power to interfere with public-school management. It permitted the Board to continue as before in its regular administration of the cause of education. But it abridged the prerogative of the Board to make extraordinary expenditures, by prohibiting the expenditure of more than $5,000 a year for new lands and new buildings unless with the consent of the fiscal board, the Common Council.

Checked in its extravagant project, but unhampered in its administration of the schools, the Board continued to provide for the children of Plainfield just as good an education as ever—just as good an education in the plainer old schools as could be given in the finest palaces of the land.

The people thought the matter settled, and were glad.

But the School Board was not content.

For the Wadsworth property the Board had paid $14,000.

The Board had a chance to sell it for $20,000.

The Board declined to sell.

Why?

Because that pet project of the School Board for a high-school mansion was still secretly fostered in the School Board's breast.

More money was expended on the Wadsworth house. It was partially transformed into a school of lower grades. The Board kept clinching its clutch.

Resolution was passed asking the Common Council to grant permission to build an elegant high school on the land.

Then the school-tax requirements for the year were figured up, and it was seen that during the year the school tax had grown, and was steadily increasing.

That growing tax was too potent an argument to meet before the Common Council. The request was withheld and the resolution rescinded.

Then the School Board plotted to resume its power.

It planned to attack the law in the courts and in the new Legislature. By having the law repealed or declared unconstitutional the Board could secure again its dictatorship.

But the time was coming when the terms of two members would expire. The Board must first secure their re-election.

That re-election is what the School Board now is seeking.

If the Board succeeds in this, it will then attempt to overthrow the existing law.

Then autocracy and extravagance again will reign.

Whether the Republican nominees for School Trustees are pledged to the old School Board policy, or whether they are devoted to the people's wish and will, depends on the city convention delegates.

Those delegates are already supporting Councilmen See, Ginna and Fisk; they will beyond doubt support Mayor Gilbert.

How then can they consistently support School Board nominees who are directly opposed to the policy of these men and the policy of the people as established in the School Board law?

A ticket divided against itself cannot stand.

TO SAVE THE PALISADES.

Gov. Werts of New Jersey Says He Will Draw Up a Bill for That Purpose.

In regard to the destruction of the Palisades, Gov. Werts of New Jersey said yesterday: "The trip made by Senator Winton and myself was simply a preliminary one. We desired to see those portions of the Palisades where the rock is being quarried and ascertain what was being done.

"It is my intention to save the Palisades, if possible; but just how it is going to be done I cannot at present state. It may be that the Legislature may be induced to acquire the property by condemnation proceedings." A bill of some kind will be introduced in the Legislature, but just what form it will take I am not prepared to say. 'I am going to draw up a bill myself, but as yet I have given very little thought to the subject."

GRAND ENCAMPMENT.

Jersey Odd Fellows Elect Officers and Hear Reports.

The annual meeting of the Grand Encampment Independent Order of Odd Fellows of New Jersey was held in Trenton yesterday. The reports showed that that the organization was prosperous. The following officers were elected:

Grand Patriarch—James McMahon of Irvington; Grand High Priest—Albert Bunn of German Valley; Grand Senior Warden—George Domplerre of Jersey City; Grand Scribe—Lewis Parker of Trenton; Grand Treasurer—Wm. H. Courter of Jamesburg; Grand Junior Warden—Philip Heckendorn of Newark; Grand Representative—George N. Nutt of Trenton; Grand Marshal—G. A. Mann of Dover; Grand Inside Sentinel—Charles T. Hunt of Newark; Grand Outside Sentinel—Joseph B. Best of Woodbury.

Lewis R. Blackford was reappointed yesterday on the Finance Committee of the Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., now in session at Trenton. This is his fourth term. Calvin Rugg is the representative from Queen City Lodge No. 226, to the Grand Lodge, which meets today. J. H. Staats represents Plainfield Lodge, No. 44. Wm. Boe and Levi Kline are also in attendance.

No School Over the Brook.

President S. St. J. McCutchen and Clerk S. B. Joseph have issued a notice that the State Superintendent has called a Teachers' Institute for the teachers of Somerset County, to be held in Somerville, Nov. 26, 27 and 28, and in compliance with the rule of the State Board of Education, which says "All teachers are required to attend the Annual Institute", no session of the North Plainfield school can be held on those dates, and as Thursday, Nov. 29, is Thanksgiving Day, no session of the school will be held during that week.

MR. GILBERT'S SPEECH.

What He Said on the School Board Question.

NO INTERFERENCE WITH THE SCHOOLS.

Merely an Abolishment of the School Board's Power to Dictate Unlimited Taxation for New School Buildings, Establishing the Principle of Keeping the Matter of Creating Public Debt in the People's Hands.

At the time of the School Board contest before the Senate in Trenton, The Daily Press was the only paper that fought for the people's interests and that kept a reporter on the spot and the public thoroughly informed of the developments and progress of the matter.

In its issue of April 18, 1894, The Press devoted almost an entire page to a report of the previous night's proceedings.

That report shows that Mayor Gilbert and his associates volunteered to leave the adoption of the proposed new law to the vote of the people.

The School Board would not agree to that.

The Board's arrogant position was just this:

They would not trust home rule to the Plainfield people.

What was the position of the advocates of the bill?

It was as stated in the masterly eloquence of Mayor Gilbert.

Mr. Gilbert said:

"We are not here from any factious opposition to the School Board, but contending for the important principle that a special board, created by law for a special purpose to administer a special interest, shall not be clothed with the power to create municipal indebtedness without the consent of the people or of the municipal body clothed by the people with the power to administer its fiscal affairs.

"If you pass this bill, you simply create uniformity in this State, place Morristown and Plainfield on the same level as other cities; give all the same degree of protection. I ask you, gentlemen, in all fairness, if you are willing that Plainfield and Morristown shall be a law unto themselves in this particular. Why are not we the people entitled to the absolute control of our public debt?

"The imputation is made that we will impair the interests of the School Board. How? The bill does not disturb the administrative functions of the Board. It takes away no power. It leaves absolute and exclusive control of the school fund, in their hands. All of their power is continued, except that when they want to build or purchase, creating a public debt, they will have to mature their plans and present them for approval to the people's body, the Common Council.

"We propose to do nothing novel or strange to the schools, introduce no revolutionary principle or condition. The principle we advocate is the same as generally operates in this State and nearly every other. I have examined the question, and we do not find that the schools elsewhere are vested with the power to issue bonds or create municipal indebtedness without the consent of the people or the people's governing body. Only five States are exceptions to this rule, and only two places in New Jersey, Plainfield and Morristown. In each of these places, the School Board has the power to borrow money and increase indebtedness to an unlimited extent. The communities are powerless to prevent unwise expenditure, except by the tedious, long and uncertain process of changing the character of the Board. In Plainfield one school trustee is elected every five years, and there are five trustees.

"The people were very particular in their City Charter to provide that no debt should be incurred without the consent of the people. They thought they had closed the doors against the imposing of burdens against their will. In 1882, the School Board, finding it necessary to build new buildings, secured the passage of the bill giving them the power we now propose to revoke. They secured it by stealth. I do not mean to use the word offensively, but that they got the bill passed without the knowledge of the people, virtually over-riding the protective feature of the Charter.

"It is intimated that the passage of this bill will introduce politics into the Board. If this had n't been said with so much seriousness so many times, I would think it a streak of humor. It has no foundation. The bill does not touch the political status at all. It makes no change. There is just about as much politics in the Board now as there can be. It has been one-sided for a great many years, and looks as though it always would be. The Democrats have given up hope, and the same big Republican majority that elects a common councilman elects a school trustee.

"I would say for the Common Council that it is an honor to the city of Plainfield, being composed of men representative of the best interests, men of wealth and education and refinement. I would not know, were I a candidate, which body I would rather serve on, Council or School Board They are the same grade of men. In the city convention there is the same scramble for control by wards and delegates, for councilman or school trustee, and at the polls the party polling the most votes elects its candidates. There 's just as much politics in one as in the other.

"We simply want that our fiscal body, which has been endowed by the people with managing the finances, should be given absolute and complete control of the question of public debt. We are opposed to having lodged in the hands of any special board the power to impose taxes without our consent. The School Board has this power to an unlimited extent.

"It is unjust to say we are opposed to the cause of education. We will go as far as anyone in any reasonable enterprise to enlarge the school facilities. But we must have control of the question of increasing our debt. We never will have properly regulated municipal government till the taxes and debt are all put into the hands of the one body which is elected to handle fiscal affairs and which is most responsive to the will of the people.

"The Board has built houses freely; we have always thought we were well provided with school-houses, yet last year it was proposed to build a new High School, to relieve overcrowding in the primary departments.

"No arguments are produced for the need of a High School, yet they bought a $13,500 lot, and propose building a school which the architect says can't be put up for $75,000. That's $88,500; and adding it to the $71,000 debt already existing we have $159,500 saddled on a people who thought they had provided against such a thing.

"And, further, that school is going to increase our yearly expenses $10,000 to $12,000. That is figured up by careful accountants and former members of the School Board, and is made up of interest on principal, additional teachers, light, fuel and repairs.

"That's what has stirred us up—the discovery of this enormous annual cost.

"It is right and proper to take pride and honor in our public institutions, but the people must not be burdened because of lavishness; and we are here to fight against the extravagant and sentimental expenditure of money resulting in burdensome taxes upon us; and we shall fight it, till we win."

A LEADER SPEAKS.

He Says the Candidates for School Trustee Must Declare Themselves in Harmony with the Public Policy as Established in the New Law.

A leading Plainfield Republican asked The Press yesterday if it would not try to get an interview with Messrs. Probasco and Lovell definitely defining their position on the School Board law. The Press replied that it had sought such interviews; that Dr. Probasco refused to talk for publication, and that Mr. Lovell in his published statement gave color to the belief that he favored a continuance of the old School Board policy.

The leading Republican thereupon said that the position of candidates for school trusteeship must be known before they could secure nomination.

"It would"—he added—"be the height of inconsistency and folly to name for school trustee or for any other office on the Republican ticket anyone not in hearty concord with the nominees for the city offices. If the retiring school trustees will not declare themselves as willing to stand by the new law, they should not be renominated."

WARD PRIMARIES.

Delegates Chosen and Candidates Named.

THE ONLY FIGHT, IN THE FOURTH.

There Four Tickets Were in the Field, and Much Balloting Resulted—See, Ginna and Moore the Councilmanic Nominees.

The Plainfield Republicans last night concluded their primaries.

A small attendance and quick despatch of business marked the First Ward primary. The officers were E. E. Anthony chairman, Richard E. Corlell secretary, George W. Moore judge, Wm. Addis and John Tier, Jr., inspectors. The nominations were made without opposition, the secretary casting the ballot in each case by authority. The ticket:

For Councilman—Wm. G. E. See.
For Constable—no nomination.
For Justice of the Peace—Lewis Peterson.

L. S. Bond, Seaman Williams, R. F. R. Huntsman, Augustus Frazee, Lewis Riegal and E. E. Anthony were chosen delegates to the Republican City Convention.

Wm. Addis, Joseph B. Coward and J Fred MacDonald were elected members of the Republican City Executive Committee.

The convention delegates were empowered to fill vacancies in the delegation.

Likewise in the Second Ward was there good fellowship, and balloting by the secretary for the unopposed candidates. The chair was filled by J. B. Dumont, Ira W. Travell was secretary, Geo. D. Patten judge, and W. R. Codington inspector.

The convention delegates were W. R Codington, J. P. Laire, Marion S. Ackerman, Stephen Cahoone, C. Arthur Baynon and W. R. Cock.

W. R. Coddington, C. A. Baynon and G. D. Patten were elected executive committeemen. C. B. Corwin also was in nomination for committeemen, but fell a few votes short.

The ticket:

For Councilman—S. A. Ginna.
For Constable—W. R. Mattox.
For Justice of the Peace—V. W. Nash.

The usual provision for vacancies was made.

The Republican primary in the Fourth Ward was held in the basement of Reform Hall, which was crowded. There were four tickets in the field. The Pondville contingent held almost full sway, and when the vote was counted it resulted mostly in their favor. The meeting was called to order by Abraham Angleman. Wm. Newcorn was the chairman, J A. Karet secretary, Geo. W. F. Randolph judge, and Abraham inspector.

After much balloting the following ticket was carried by majorities running from 40 to 100:

For Councilman—William H. Moore.
Constable—H. W. Fraleigh.

Members City Executive Committee—William A. Westphal and J. B. Higgins.

Delegates to the City Convention—Henry Gracely, James Stewart, Wm. A Westphal, Grant Cannon, Wm. Connett, John Adleman, Arthur Venable, J. A. Karet, Andrew Muir.

The vote for councilman was very close. Charles H. MacDonald received 127 votes, and Wm. H. Moore 136.

OF COURSE 'TWAS GREAT.

But The Press Gave So Much Space to the Judge, Other Features Had to Be Abbreviated.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:

In your report of the entertainment given by the A. O. H. in the C. Y. M. L Hall last Thursday evening, I failed to note any remarks in reference to to me the best part of the entertainment, which was the elaborate spread that was so attractive to the inner man. I must say that the A. O. H. outdid themselves with hospitality. John F. Sheehan, chairman, was toastmaster of the occasion. Mr. Casey made the first address, and then presented Judge Wilhere with a handsome meerschaum pipe. The Judge being a native of the State which was conquered by the pipe of peace, responded and thanked Mr. Casey for his handsome present.

E. G. Flanagan of Philadelphia also made a few happy remarks, after which some of the men present enlivened the evening with singing. T. J. L.

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. DOES N'T LIKE SMOKE.

NEED OF PRIMARY PURIFICATION IN PLAINFIELD.

A Plainfield Citizen Reflects on the Power Which Women Might Exert to Effect Reform in This Direction.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Will you kindly allow me a little space in your columns, in the interest of public morality and decency, for a few words to the people of our fair city?

We all understand very well the fact that in order to purify our City, State and National politics, about which purification so much is being said at the present time, we must purify the primaries; and in order to purify the primary we must purify the individual voter.

It was my privilege last evening to attend the Republican primary in ward four. It was largely attended, the room in Reform Hall being too small for comfortable accommodation. It was orderly and good natured, and everyone seemed interested to secure the best results possible; but the air was blue with tobacco smoke.

As the primary is necessarily "a law unto itself" I see no way of reaching the matter except by an appeal to the good sense and judgment of the citizens as individuals. I therefore ask their fair consideration of a few questions: Is it conducive to purity of politics, and to good government, to so saturate the primary with the air of the bar-room and drinking saloon, that the voter must choose between the alternative of subjecting himself to its offensiveness or stay away? Is it treating the voters, and the position, with proper respect, for the person who is called to the post of honor as presiding officer, to conduct the primary, with a cigar in his mouth, not even removing it, in some instances, when putting motions and announcing results?

Would you consider the primary with such an atmosphere and so conducted, a suitable place to take your boy who is approaching manhood, in order that he may learn somewhat in regard to the performance of the duties that await him as a voter?

Gentlemen, these things ought not so to be. If you will defile your bodies and befog your brains with tobacco, let it be in the privacy of your own home, where you are "monarch of all you survey", rather than to thrust its offensiveness into the faces of others.

One of the unavoidably noticeable things of my six years residence in Plainfield has been the widely prevalent habit of smoking. Even among the male members of our churches, who profess better things, it seems to be well nigh universal. I hope I am mistaken in this latter impression, however. Church members profess to be led by the spirit of God, but I venture the assertion that the "spirit of God" never yet led a man to defile himself with tobacco, and I suggest that the preachers of righteousness in our city do more to impress this fact upon their hearers, in plain straightforward words, than they have done.

Women, if they chose to exert their influence fully, might do much to overcome the prevalence of the smoking habit. Many say they enjoy the odor of a nice cigar. So do I, but if I am not mistaken, the enjoyment is largely due to the same agent that produces the enjoyment and hallucinations of the Chinese opium dive, and is twin brother to it, differing only in degree. How women, who are themselves embodiments of purity and goodness, can unite themselves to better-halves (?) who are saturated with tobacco fumes, is a question which—well! A question which perhaps only they themselves can answer.

All Good, and Miss French the Star.

A large and appreciative audience enjoyed the Royal Arcanum entertainment in the Casino last night. A doctor's certificate was read to the audience stating that a member of the Ladies' Swedish Quartette was too ill to come. The audience voted to have the entertainment without them. Burdette is certainly an entertainer. Miss Lavania French's piano playing was alone a rare treat. The members of the Arcanum feel deeply the disappointment of the non-appearance of the Ladies Quartette, but the public do not hold them responsible.

THE BOULDER WAS ALIVE.

An Apache Stratagem That Nearly Cost a Courier His Life.

"Talking of Indians and their stratagems," said D. A. Marston, lately of the United States cavalry, "they are past masters in the arts of skulking and deceiving. An Apache will lie behind a soapweed on the open prairie, and you may ride past two or three hundred yards away and never have an idea that there is a redskin within fifty miles of you, unless he decides to risk a shot at you. As you pass the soapweed he works his body around so as to keep it always in line with the plant and you. Even on the open prairie, with no more shelter than that afforded by some little inequality of surface, he will sift dust over his body, flatten himself out, face downward, against the ground, and, lying as motionless as a stone, will escape the observation of any except sharp and practised eyes.

"A queer experience of this kind occurred to me in my service in Arizona during Gen. Crook's last campaign against the Apaches. Tom Merriam of my troop and myself were detailed to carry despatches from Camp Bowie to Camp Grant, up on the Rio Benito. It was a dangerous service at that time, and we had to keep a sharp lookout and be ready to fight or run at a moment's notice, for there was no knowing at what point on the route the Apaches might not be lying in wait to jump us as we came along.

"We were on our return to Camp Bowie and had just crossed the wooded canyon where the cold spring is, and were coming out upon the open prairie that stretches down to the San Pedro River, when through the branches of a low tree I saw what I took to be an Indian on the plain, about a half mile ahead. But on spurring my horse forward so as to get a better look, nothing was to be seen except the bare prairie, with no sign of man or beast upon its expanse.

"As we rode along I spoke of the matter to Tom, who laughed at what he called my scare, which he said caused me to see imaginary Indians. We came opposite a low, gray boulder upon the prairie two hundred paces or so from the trail.

"'I don't remember ever to have seen that rock before,' said Tom, who had been over the route several times. 'How in the devil did it get there? I'll ride over and take a look at it!' And he reined his horse and rode toward the object. I followed him, a few yards behind.

"His horse had scarcely taken a dozen steps when the seeming gray rock moved slightly upward and there came from its lower edge a flash and a report with the scream of a big calibre ball that flapped Tom's coat with its wind and caused his horse to plunge so suddenly that Tom, one of the best riders in the troop, not being on the lookout for such a happening, was thrown. At the same instant an Apache leaped from beneath the gray blanket that had served him to masquerade as a boulder, and ran like a deer for the canyon, leaping to left and right as he went to avoid the shots that Tom and I sent after him from our repeating carbines.

"We knocked up the dust about his feet and made him do some tall dodging to the whistling of our bullets, but that was all, for we didn't hit him. To have chased him would have been folly, first, because we were bearing despatches in haste and needed the last ounce of reserve force in our horses, and, secondly, because with the start he had we should not have overhauled him in his run for the canyon, into which we could not have followed him. So we took the trail again and rode our way with another wrinkle added to our experience of Indian trickery and cussedness."—N. Y. Sun.

A BRAVE BOSSY.

The Cow Saved Her Calf by Whipping a Grizzly Bear.

"Usually a cow does not stand much chance when she engages in a hand-to-hand conflict with a grizzly bear," said Michael Ayers, a Colorado stockman, "but several years ago one of my cows killed one of these animals and came out of the struggle without a scratch. The cow had recently given birth to a calf. It being her first-born, the mother was exceedingly vicious, and it was unsafe for a stranger to approach her, as her horns were long and pointed. The cattle shed had a thatched roof, and was scooped out of the hillside a short distance from the house.

"One night a bear, having smelt the presence of a cow and calf, mounted the roof of the shed and proceeded to force an entrance by scratching through the thatch. The cow at the same time detected the presence of the bear, and held herself in readiness to receive the intruder. The noise of a terrible struggle aroused me, and grabbing a lantern I rushed from the house, and opening the shed door found the cow in a frantic state, butting and tossing to and fro some large object, which evidently had lost all power of resistance. It turned out to be a good-sized grizzly, which had been run through and through the body by the courageous mother. The little calf was nestled in a corner, sleeping peacefully, and seemed unmindful of the maternal struggle. I suppose that as soon as the bear gained an entrance through the roof, it was pinned to the ground by the cow's horns before it had time to do any damage."

13,000 MILES IN 90 SECONDS.

A Record Made Between Manchester and Victoria by Lightning.

An unusual feat in the rapid transmission of long-distance cablegrams has lately been achieved by the Commercial Cable Company. A message and the reply to it were transmitted in ninety seconds from Manchester, England, to Victoria, British Columbia, the total distance being 13,000 miles.

Wilson Hotkinson, a Canadian produce broker of Hyde's Cross, Witby Grove, Manchester, knew several weeks before that it would be absolutely necessary on Sept. 24 to communicate with his manager at Victoria and that every second he had to wait for the answer would cost his company many pounds.

He notified his agent and the cable company of the facts, and on the eventful day sent his message and received the answer in a minute and a half.

PORTENTS.

I've worn an opal in a ring
  Upon my hand for years;
And notwithstanding this I sing,
  And weep no bitter tears.

I often meet a cross-eyed man
  Early on Monday morning,
But thus far I've escaped the ban
  Of which this is the warning.

I've seen the new moon in the west
  Straight over my left shoulder,
Nor have I been a bit distressed
  About its growing older.

I've even occupied a room
  With thirteen for a number,
And not a ghost has vexed the gloom
  Or marred my peaceful slumber.

A fig for portents good or ill!
  No wonders and no signs
Foretell the fate we must fulfill
  Along life's untried lines.

THIS IS A QUEER FISH.

It Brings Down Its Insect Prey by Shooting It With Water.

"The sea is full of strange things," said a retired naval officer the other evening, "and a man in sailing around the globe sees many striking novelties, but to my mind the most curious and interesting inhabitant of the salt deep is the archer fish of Siam.

"The feeding habits peculiar to each kind of fish seems to have developed a mouth exactly shaped and fitted for that special work, as can be seen by glancing at the mouth of any of the sucker family, which lives by drawing up food from the bottom; that of the carnivorous fish, as blues, mackerel, bass, and sharks, which are wide, deep-jawed, and armed with sharp teeth to grip and hold the prey, and so with all varieties of creatures.

"This archer or jaculator fish haunts the eastern shore of Africa, India's seas, and the Malay Archipelago, occurring in fresh water streams that open into the sea as well as in the salt water. The name has been earned by its way of capturing insect food. The method is to eject a drop of water from the long tubular mouth so forcibly as to knock bugs from the overhanging limbs of trees into the water, where they are readily devoured.

WOMEN AS OFFICE-HOLDERS.

An Experiment that Will Now be Tried in Colorado.

Three women will assist the Colorado men to revise the old laws and form new ones at the next session of the State Assembly, which meets in the new State House. It will be a curious coincidence that when the State officials for the first time assume their duties in the beautiful new Capitol, among them will be found a woman officeholder, and that at the first session of the Assembly to meet in the granite pile on Capitol Hill three women will take their seats in the House of Representatives. The society woman of Capitol Hill, by making politics a social and a popular matter, made this result possible. The next Superintendent of Public Instruction, Mrs. Angenette J. Peavey, owes her position entirely to the women who took such a decided stand for representation in the Republican State Convention. Two years ago the Republican managers promised the office to a public school man of marked ability because he at that time withdrew to harmonize certain factions in the party, but the new demand for representation made by the women forced the delegates in the Convention this year to ignore the admitted obligations due the man.

That Mrs. Peavey will bring considerable executive ability to the post all who know the lady admit, but whether it is possible for a woman to deal in a practical manner with the obligations required by virtue of that office remains to be demonstrated. The retiring incumbent is what is known as a rank Populist, whose administration has been notorious for incompetency and alleged corruption. Even Waite could not stand the man, and ordered him under penalty of criminal prosecution to withdraw from the race for renomination.

Mrs. Peavy is a descendant of the Upham family of Massachusetts, and can trace the family genealogy back to William the Conqueror.

The women who are to take part in the exciting contest over the selection of a United States Senator to succeed Wolcott and who are to demonstrate their abilities as lawmakers are Mrs. Clara Cressingham, Mrs. Frances Klock and Mrs. Carrie Clyde Holly. Two of these ladies are New Yorkers and the other is from Wisconsin.

LOOK AT THE GIRLS.

They Consider Themselves the Shop Windows of Creation.

"Well," said a young lady of observation to a reporter, "that professor down in Richmond who thinks he is going to stop the boys from looking at the girls of his college by force of municipal ordinances may be clever as a schoolmaster, but so far as human nature goes he doesn't know as much as the youngest of his students—that is, if they're all girls. Not look at the girls, indeed! Why, he might just as well try to grow beans by algebra. You see, the schoolmaster has overlooked the great fact that this city law is aimed at the girls as much as at the boys, for if the boys can't look the girls can't be looked at, and that busts up the whole economy of nature. You can write it down for me, please, that it's the smallest, queerest, specimen of prohibition on record, and has got no more chance of succeeding than I have of being elected captain of the Salvation Army.

"Why, we girls consider ourselves the shop windows of the universe, and we wouldn't exist if we weren't looked at. It's bred in us. Life's a failure if we young women don't get looked at or looked after, and if you meet with any who complain of this attention just put it up that that's only another way of carrying the news to Mary—her particular method of showing the rest of us that she's in it."—Chicago Tribune.

DOFFS THE BLUE.

THE CHIEF OFFICER OF THE NAVY RETIRES AFTER 48 YEARS OF SERVICE.

A Life of Bravery and Efficiency. His Brilliant Career in Peace and War Crowned with the Glory of the Columbian Naval Parade.

On June 1, 1893, Rear-Admiral Gherardi assumed command of the Navy Yard, relieving Commodore Henry L. Erben, who was sent away as Acting Rear-Admiral, in charge of the cruiser Chicago to the European station.

Out of a total of 48 years in the service, 26 were spent at sea, 15 1-2 on shore and six years on leave. This is Rear-Admiral Gherardi's record, which is one that any officer might be proud of. His war record was a good one, and in time of peace he has proven himself an officer of more than usual executive ability. That is probably the reason why he was selected by the Secretary of the Navy to command the North Atlantic squadron, to welcome the officers of the foreign men-of-war at Hampton Roads and to arrange the details of the great naval parade that took place in New York harbor in April, 1893.

The thousands who witnessed that event will always remember it as a great marine spectacle, but only those in touch with the navy can realize its full import, and the executive ability and diplomacy that was required to carry it to a successful issue.

In detaching Rear-Admiral Gherardi from the command of the North Atlantic squadron on May 20, 1893, Secretary Herbert paid him the following compliment: "Since the creation of the rank you so honorably enjoy no officer of the United States Navy has ever held command of a fleet for so long a period as that which will be terminated by the department's order of this date. You have had the singular felicity of closing your career afloat by organizing and successfully conducting an international review and land parade at once unique and in many respects unprecedented. The department congratulates you upon the manner in which you have discharged the difficult and delicate duties imposed upon you by this novel undertaking."

Secretary Benjamin F. Tracy, in September, 1889, had occasion to compliment Gherardi on his courage and discretion during the critical period of the Haytian revolution.

Vice-Admiral N. Kaznakoff and the captains and officers of the Russian cruisers Dimitri Donskoi, General Admiral and Rhynda presented Admiral Gherardi with a beautiful enamel cup set in a framework of gold. It was ordered from Russia by the officers, who wished to show their appreciation of the American Admiral's treatment of them while here to take part in the Columbian festivities.

REAR-ADMIRAL BANCROFT GHERARDI.

Rear-Admiral Bancroft Gherardi was born in Jackson, La., on Nov. 10, 1832. He is hale and hearty, and good for many years' service yet. He is about 5 feet 10 inches in height, of robust build, with a keen eye and a voice that is never harsh, but always firm when giving a command. He has a high forehead, gray hair and closely cut beard.

As a midshipman he entered the navy at the age of 14. After serving four years on board the frigate Ohio on the Pacific station, he took a course of instruction at the Naval Academy, and was soon promoted to passed midshipman.

When the civil war began he was serving as lieutenant on board the Lancaster, of the Pacific squadron. He was anxious for more active service and, after many attempts to obtain a transfer, his patience was rewarded by his receiving a commission as lieutenant commander on July 16, 1862. He was ordered to the Mohican and served on board her during the engagement with Fort Macon. He commanded the steam gunboat Chocura, of the Western Gulf blockading squadron, and during 1864 he commanded the steamer Port Royal, of the same squadron. He took part in the battle of Mobile Bay in her. In his official report of the plans for attacking Fort Morgan, Capt. T. H. Jenkins, commanding the Richmond, and flag-officer of a division, commended Gherardi for his "cool and courageous conduct from the moment the attack commenced to the time that his vessel was cast off from the port side of my vessel, by my order, to go in chase of the enemy's gunboats."

Gherardi's last command during the war was the steamer Pequot, of the North Atlantic squadron. He was commissioned as commander in 1886, and during that year he was on navigation duty at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. He was commissioned as captain Nov. 9, 1874. From that time until 1884, when he was made commodore, he commanded the Pensacola, Colorado and Lancaster respectively. He was Governor of the Naval Asylum in 1885 and he was promoted to the rank of rear-admiral in August, 1887. For two years following his promotion he was Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard then he relieved Rear-Admiral Luce in the command of the North Atlantic squadron, having the Baltimore for his flagship until just before the naval review, when he transferred his flag to the Philadelphia.

WHO IS THE OWNER?

Do These Mountains of Coal Belong to the Miner or the Mine Owner?

An interesting question has been raised in the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania, which, if it is carried to proposed settlement in the courts, will involve the decision of some entirely new and important points in the rights of coal miners and coal mine owners.

Until within recent years the percentage of waste in the mining of merchantable coal was supposed to be about 50 per cent. This waste resulted in the piling up of the mountains of colliery refuse, so familiar in the anthracite regions, known as culm. But the discovery was made some years ago that these culm piles contained a large percentage of coal of small sizes which could be recovered from the waste and placed on the market at a price equal to that obtained for the then merchantable sizes. This coal is of three grades, buckwheat, bird's-eye, and pea coal. Many hundreds of thousands of tons of these grades of coal have been recovered in the different anthracite districts, and the demands for them is now greater than the supply.

There are many scores of these mountains of culm which have not yet been worked over, and the Pennsylvania Coal Company has a large holding of these valuable piles of waste from which it is now preparing to remove the marketable coal. During all the years that the coal companies have been separating these grades of coal from the culm no one ever thought of raising any question as to their entire legal right to it, but the proposed work of the Pennsylvania Coal Company in the Wyoming Valley has led an astute lawyer to raise the question of mine ownership in the waste.

The miner mines coal for the mine owner and is paid for it by the load, so much per ton. When a car of coal comes from the mine and is weighed and inspected, if it contains culm to the amount of ten pounds or more, the miner is "docked" 100 pounds on that carload, or, in other words he does not receives pay for the 100 pounds of coal he has mined. Although buckwheat, bird's-eye and pea coal are no longer classed as waste, they are covered by the the term culm, and the miner pays forfeit for having those sizes in his car, although they are among the most valuable products of the mine.

The point raised is that the old culm piles having been largely made up by this docking of the miners' cars, virtually represent investments made by the miners through the wages deducted from him for producing such coal as the culm piles contain, and that, consequently the waste belongs to them, morally and legally, just as much as if they had paid for them in actual cash.

Another well-known coal region lawyer, while not taking the radical view that the miners own the culm piles, unhesitatingly contends that the miners, having been forced to pay for mining valuable coal for the coal companies, instead of receiving pay for the work, the companies cannot now take advantage of such work without reimbursing the miners for the wages thus unjustly taken from them. There will be a good many hundreds of thousands of dollars involved in the settlement of these new and novel legal points should they come to the test of judicial opinion.

CHINESE DISHES.

Peculiarities of Oriental Cooking Not Relished by Europeans.

Some of the dishes were extremely nice, notably the little shreds of toast mutton, excellently seasoned, such as I learned ever after to call for with confidence at Chinese inns.

On the other hand, the chicken was made uneatable, and the eggs on that occasion, I am bound to say were inexpressibly nasty, writes Barry Lansdell of the Chinese in Central Asia. The taste for them as eaten in China had need to be acquired, no doubt, for I had been told at Tierny of the wonderful pains and expense at which Chinese gourmands preserve their eggs till they are black and putrid, and of which they are as proud when many, many years old as an English squire of his crusted port. I have, moreover, a vague impression, which for the moment I cannot verify, that I somewhere tasted these ancient delicacies and found them good, but on the present occasion my notebook condemns them utterly.

The rissoles of pork sausage were tasty, and so were the French beans, peas and hearts of cabbage stalk cut in slices, and the Mandarin oranges preserved in syrup. We helped ourselves to these delicacies as we pleased, but our host every now and then with his chopsticks placed on the plate of one or the other of his three guests a choice morsel, which, mercifully it was not a matter of unbending etiquette that one should eat. It was polite, of course, occasionally to return the compliment and help him to titbits with one's knife and folk.

Beauty and Advertising.

A pretty coquette walking by the seashore is like injudicious advertising—very dear. But she also bears a strong resemblance to judicious advertising, because she catches every eye.

This pretty coquette wears silken hosiery, which, like the results of injudicious advertising, are invisible to the eye of man. But they are filled with charms that cannot be equalled, and so are the results of judicious advertising.

The beautiful bathing costume worn by the pretty coquette is similar to an injudicious advertiser's bank account—very short at both ends. But its likeness to the bank account of a judicious advertiser is also apparent, for it is simply out of sight.

The man who falls in love with the pretty coquette finds her like trade to the injudicious advertiser—hard to win. But a proper study of her charming vagaries, together with undying constancy, will surely win her; just as the same methods pursued by a judicious advertiser will win business.—Printer's Ink.

Jay Gould's Daughters.

Two of Jay Gould's daughters have joined the law class in a New York university, with the intention of taking a thorough course. These young ladies do not propose to practice law. They are worth many millions of dollars, and they are able to live in absolute idleness and devote themselves to the pursuit of pleasure all the remainder of their days. But they want something to occupy their minds—a study that will give them mental discipline, and as they are large property owners they desire to know all about the laws relating to personalty and real estate, so that they will run less risk of being defrauded by their agents and others. This is commendable, and it would be well for other rich and well-to-do women to follow the example of the great millionaire's daughters.—Atlanta Constitution.

A RETIRED GENERAL.

THE HERO OF GETTYSBURG, BULL RUN AND FAIR OAKS.

General Howard, Who Was at the Head of the Army, Relieved of His Charge Because of the Age Limit. His Part in the Civil War.

Major-Gen. Oliver O. Howard, who was recently placed upon the retired list at the age of 64 years, enjoys the exceptional honor of having by name received the thanks of Congress. He shares this distinction with but one retired officer, Gen. Rosecrans, who was thanked by Congress for the battle of Murfreesboro. Gen. Howard was named among those to whom "the gratitude of the American people and the thanks of their Representatives in Congress" were offered "for the skill and heroic valor which, at Gettysburg, repulsed, defeated, and drove back, broken and dispirited, beyond the Rappahannock, the veteran army of the rebellion."

But Gen. Howard was distinguished on Western as well as on Eastern fields. After graduating, forty years ago, from the Military Academy, to which he had been appointed from his native State of Maine, he served as a subaltern of ordnance, and was also, from 1857 to 1861, Assistant Professor of Mathematics at West Point. On the outbreak of the civil war he was made Colonel of the Third Maine infantry, and commanded a brigade in the first great battle of the war, at Bull Run. Thenceforward he shared for over two years the fortunes of the Army of the Potomac, distinguishing himself on the Peninsula, where, at Fair Oaks, he lost his right arm. For his services in that battle he afterward received the medal of honor, and he reached the rank of Major-General of Volunteers on Nov. 29, 1862, and soon afterward the command of an army corps. When, after Gettysburg, re-enforcements were sent from the East to the West, Howard's corps, the Eleventh, formed a part of them; and he thereafter continued with the Western army, ultimately succeeding McPherson in command of the Army of the Tennessee. His brevet commission of Major-General in the regular army was given "for gallant and meritorious services in the battle of Ezra Church and during the campaign against Atlanta.

MAJOR-GEN. OLIVER O. HOWARD.

An empty coat sleeve is a testimonial of his devotion to the country, and he withdraws from the active list of the army after reaching its highest grade as the crown of an illustrious career.

ALEXANDER'S STRENGTH.

Some of His Boastful Feats Equalled by Americans.

Many of the newspaper articles called forth by the death of the Czar of Russia enlarge upon his power to twist a silver rouble into a roll with his fingers as if it were a feat unique in modern masculine annals.

The poker trick, also, is widely referred to. I mean the bending of an iron rod by striking it a sharp blow against the arm. These accomplishments are not so uncommon as might be supposed. I have taken sparring lessons of a number of lightweight pugilists, and I never met one of them who did not teach the poker trick to his pupils at an early stage of their acquaintance. The secret lies in the way the iron rod is struck, not in any prodigious strength of the arm that does the striking or in any abnormal weight of bone or hardness of muscle in the arm that receives the blow.

The ruble twist is quite another thing—that does really require extraordinary strength of finger muscle, but the late Czar of Russia was only one man of many in his generation who could do it. Our own General McClellan, used sometimes to amuse his friends by bending an American silver coin double, holding it only between the thumb and index finger of his right hand and pressing the middle of the disc slightly with the second finger so as to direct the bend.

I have known others—usually blacksmiths or shoemakers—who could do the same thing with ease.—Kate Field's Washington.

The Allotted Time for Czars.

The late Czar reigned for nearly fourteen years. This has been, it is worth noting, the average length of a Russian reign since the beginning of the seventeenth century. Since about the same date the average length of a Spanish reign has been twenty-one years, of an Austrian reign twenty-six years, of a Prussian thirty years, and of a British reign thirty or thirty-five years, according as George the First is included or excluded. Royal mortality in Russia is higher, too, than in France, where the last six sovereigns reigned, on an average, twenty years each, although one of them was guillotined, one transported to St. Helena, one deposed and one forced to abdicate.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Long Drawn Out Game.

New York Boy (visiting in Rhode Island)—What shall we play?

Rhode Island Boy—Let's play something new. Let's play golf.

"I'm going to have that stock investigated," said the Investor. "There's been a good deal of funny business in that corporation."

"True," said Barlow; "and I'd advise you to employ a diver to do your investigating, there's so much water in it."

WHEN FAMOUS MEN MARRIED.

Some, by the Way, Never Did Take a Wife to Cheer Them.

Raphael, Michael Angelo, Beethoven and many of the world's most famous men remained bachelors. Shakespeare married Anne Hathaway when he was 18 years old. Frederick the Great was 21 when he led the Princess Elizabeth of Brunswick to the altar. William von Humboldt married Karoline von Dachroeden when 24, and Mozart and Walter Scott where 25 when they chose better halves. The musician married the charming Constanze Weber, who inspired him to write his most beautiful compositions, while the choice of the novelist was Miss Charlotte Margaret Carpenter.

Dante married when 26, the Florentine, Gemma Dopati. At the same age Johann Heinrich Voss led to the altar the sister of his friend Ernestina Boie. Napoleon was 27 when he married the rich widow, Josephine Beauharnais, and Byron had attained the same age when he gave his name to the heiress, Miss Elizabeth Miltbank.

The Swedish naturalist, Linnaeus (Linne), was 29, and Robert Burns was 30. Schiller had passed his 31st birthday when he wedded Charlotte von Leugenfold. Wieland was married when he was 32. Milton began his unhappy union when he was 35 years old. Buerger led his beautiful and beloved "Molly" to the altar when he was more than 36 years old.

Luther chose a wife when he was 42, and Cufion when he was 55. Goethe gave his name to Christine Vulpius when three years less than three score. Klopstock, after mourning his Meta 33 years, took unto himself a second wife when 67. She was a widow bearing the name Johanne von Windheim.

THE COBURG FAMILY.

Three of the Greatest Monarchs Have a Common Ancestor.

From the accession of the Prince of Wales the British Royal family, by British custom, will be called the Coburgs; and had it been the lot of the little Lady Alexandra Duff, or any future brother of hers, to found a new line that would have been called the Duffs, alike by the historians and by the people, a prospect which inspired no pleasure, says London Spectator.

The Coburgs are better liked; they are supposed, and so far rightly supposed, to accommodate themselves more easily than any other reigning family to constitutional monarchy; they are royal by descent, and they have had the strangest good fortune in their alliances.

Within a few years the three greatest thrones in the world, those of Great Britain, Germany and Russia, will be filled by descendants of the Prince Consort, while seven minor thrones those of Belgium, Portugal, Greece, Hesse, Saxe-Gotha; Romania and Bulgaria—one of which last two may reign at Constantinople—will all be filled by men of Coburg blood.

COST OF A RAINY DAY.

Toilers of the City Lose Heavily and Retail Trade Suffers.

"An article in the World the other Sunday mentioned the losses sustained by dealers in dry goods in consequence of rainy days," said Contractor John Crimmins to a reporter, "but the real sufferers by the rainy day are the day laborers and those who do business directly with them. Rain means an idle day to every laborer and mechanic employed on outdoor work, such as excavators, quarrymen, railroad builders, stone masons, bricklayers, carpenters, painters, furniture movers, longshoremen, &c. What they do not earn they cannot spend.

"There is no way for this class of breadwinners to regain the day once lost. They are men who deal with their grocers, butchers and others on a cash basis. If a man works steadily all the week he is enabled to buy a certain amount of the necessaries and luxuries of life. If he works but three days he must get along with just half of what he would otherwise have purchased. The storekeeper's business falls off just that much. It will be readily seen, then, that a rainy day in New York city means a loss to the working population of hundreds of thousands of dollars in wages, and this loss in turn falls upon retail tradesmen. A rainy season means distress and deprivation to the toilers."

YOU WOULD LIKE IT.

The Cottage Described by Mr. Jones in His Play.

"In the "Bauble Shop" is this description of a cottage. It is almost poetry:

"It's the sweetest little cottage in the world. It never could have been built. It must have grown—such pretty little dormer windows, and swallows' nests under the eaves, and the front is smoothered with creepers. And there's a walled garden, with gravel walks and all the old fashioned flowers you can think of—lavender, gillyflowers, stock, sweet williams lad's love, smock frog, and such proud tiger lillies, and a lawn that lets your feet sink deep, deep in moss, like a rich green velvet carpet, and curious old apple trees, with crooked, stunted branches and roses climbing up them and choking them like—like pretty girls hanging round gnarled, crabbed old father's necks, and the pink blossoms are scattered all round—that's the tears the apple trees have shed because they are so happy.

Surely a beautiful bit of lyric prose this! Fortunately the actress, Miss Maude Adams is fully equal to the passage. So sweetly, so melodiously, and so dreamily do the words drop from her lips that for the moment you imagine it is Ophelia, not Jessie Keber, you are listening to.—N.Y. Herald.

A Mysterious Beauty.

A new and mysterious beauty, who has taken a charming house and lives alone in it, in London, is causing a sensation in the English metropolis, where it is known of her only that she is Mrs. Savage, supposed to be from Washington, Boston, or New York City. The London correspondence of the Boston Transcript thus describes her:

Her face was a long oval, very pale, but with a pallor lovelier than a commonplace red and white. The nose, very straight, and rather long, the mouth a wonderful Cupid's bow, the chin cleft by a dimple, with a brother in one cheek, the eyes violet, extremely almond shaped, and drooping at the corners. One dark eyebrow—the left—was touched with white in the most curious manner, as was the hair over the forehead on the same side, though the face was of a woman not over 30. I never saw a more beautiful creature in my life, and I was proud to be her "countrywoman."

Vanity

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. Cleaning or dyeing makes it possible to use soiled or faded garments. And there's where our ax comes in. We are in the Cleaning and Dyeing business. Methodists of the Frontier.

Harrowing tales of the hardships endured by thousands of Methodist preachers in the rural regions were told at the recent annual meeting of the General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church, held in Brooklyn, when Bishop Andrews stood out against certain appropriations for the support of these preachers. Chaplain McCabe arose in their defence, and he grew excited as he described their poverty, their struggles and the pressure of the times upon them. More than 2,000 of them in the Western States are compelled to support themselves and their families upon a paltry salary of $300 a year. They are little better off than the cows which feed upon wild weeds. They have been worse off than ever this year, in many places, especially where the crops were poor, the blizzards fierce, and the drought destructive. In Nebraska, for example, they have suffered painfully, and hardly less so in some of the other Western States. It was, indeed, a grievous account which Chaplain McCabe gave of their condition. His statements were confirmed by Bishop Benton, who declared that he could not understand how these brave preachers were able to live upon their salary, which, in 85 cases known to him, was but $382 a year. The Conference was touched by the harrowing sketches given, and it resolved to make the full appropriation asked for in behalf of the poor Methodist preachers.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache, Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence; we urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Large bottles only 50 cents at L W. Randolph's drug store.

Mrs. T. S. Hawkins, Chattanooga, Tenn., says: "Shiloh's Vitalizer saved my life; I consider it the best remedy for a debilitated system I ever used. For dyspepsia, liver or kidney trouble it excels; 75c. Sold by all druggists.

Shiloh's cure is sold on a guarantee. It cures incipient consumption; it is the best cough cure, only 1c a dose; 25, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Karl's Clover Root, the great blood purifier, gives freshness and clearness to the complexion and cures constipation; 25c 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

PETER G. EYCK,

The Old Tanderloin Passes, But a New One Takes Its Place. A Loyal Wife Gets the Better of a Policeman. Other Matters.

The partial revival of stock speculation in New York gives point to the discovery that on Broadway, near Thirty-first street, is what is said to be the only legitimate stock broking establishment in New York kept by a woman. The woman who is proprietor of the establishment is in the pay of one of the best known firms in Broad street, and has a direct wire to their office, over which she transmits all orders. She came here from Chicago, little more than a year ago, for the purpose of speculating in stocks, but, finding no place in Wall street where a woman could comfortably watch the market and not desiring to do business in bucket shops, she opened these parlors not only for herself, but for the convenience of other women who deal in stocks. This women's stock parlor is filled with women, who sit all day, and watch the quotations of stocks as they are jotted from the ticker on the blackboard by a wan little boy, who looks like a shadow from Brownieland. Here women sit in groups with their luncheon done up in napkins, which they fetch rather than leave the charmed spot long enough to go out for and eat a square meal. It would be interesting to know, how many have made money, but it is asserted that one woman, Mrs. Sandford, cleared $14,000 on Burlington with a capital of $500. None of the winning woman has given her right name to the proprietor of the establishment; she only knows them by initials or assumed names. And none of the customers know each other except by letters or numbers. No men are allowed in this place, except one young man, who sometimes comes in to watch his mother's interests.

The glory of the old "Tenderloin" has departed. Year by year it has been shorn of its glories until at present the names of the Haymarket, the Chelsea, the Silver Grill and other resorts celebrated in their day have become mere memories. The crusade of Dr. Parkhurst was the last straw that broke the sinful back of this section of the city. When his raiders had gone through the district they left it limp, placid and lifeless. It has never recovered, and probably never will. It is dead. There is a new "Tenderloin," however, that is rapidly growing into proportions that threaten eventually to eclipse the old section. It lies anyway between sixtieth and sixty-ninth streets and Eighth and Tenth Avenues. It is young yet, but it is fast becoming tough, and the residents of the vicinity are making complaints of the profusion of painted and bleached-haired women whose habitations are not as quiet or decorous as they might be.

John Caulfield of 1,101 Broadway, may not appreciate her, but he has a wife worth eulogizing. Caulfield was intoxicated the other day, and threw stones as he walked down Broadway. Policeman Haloran met him and handled him successfully until Mrs. Caulfield, accompanied by her two year old child, saw him. Approaching the policeman from behind she embraced him, pinioning his arms. Then she kicked his legs, and shouted to her husband to break away. The policeman could not hold the prisoner so he let him go, expecting that he could easily shake the woman off and recapture her husband. But he was mistaken, as she clung to him until her husband had disappeared around the corner. Then she submitted to arrest, and when she was arraigned before Justice Goettling in the police court, she said: "I was merely protecting my husband. Is not that a wife's duty?"

In the varied procession of carriages in Central Park the other day," said a stroller, "I saw one upon which there was a steamer trunk leaning against the seat alongside the driver. The carriage was in the line moving south. It had one occupant, a man, who it seemed to me was taking one more look at Central Park before, perhaps, a long sojourn in other lands."

There is a certain young widow in New York, who, within a few short years, has made a fortune at that usually the most unsuccessful of all occupations, the keeping of boarders. She has recently purchased a $100,000 house, with elevator and all hotel conveniences, and charges her very swell patrons the price of the Waldorf. Table napkins, with one's own initials upon them, and linen, also one's exclusive own, are among the luxuries. And she boasts that young men take their dinners at her house when they "get tired of Delmonico's."

Mrs. H. C. Duval, the wife of Chauncey Depew's secretary, is one of the most photographed women on earth. Both her son and her husband own cameras. One very lovely picture of herself shows her seated on the seashore in Belgium with the American flag floating over her shapely head. And the flag, by the way, accompanies Mrs. Duval in all her journeys abroad. It is always spread across the trunk just before the lid is closed.

There is a business woman in New York who lives in daily fear of failing in business. She has put away a thousand dollars in her tea caddy. This is to purchase chickens for the nucleus of a stock farm if business manipulations turn out wrong.

ROGER LEWIS.

Miss Fair's Spanish Beauty.

Miss Fair might almost be taken for a Spanish girl, with her dark brown hair, flashing black eyes and brilliant complexion. Her features are pretty, but her charm lies in her bright, animated manner and her witching vivacity. She is very clever and her wit sparkles in the same time as her sprightly manner. Enough attractions for one small woman, but Miss Fair has many others, a sunny disposition, lots of good, sound common sense, a generous big heart, and last, but by no means least, a fortune estimated at $15,000,000.

She is the daughter of ex-Senator Fair of Nevada, and a sister of Mrs. Herman Oelrichs with whom she makes her home. She has been spending the summer at Newport with Mrs. Oelrich at the latter's pretty villa Rosecliff, and has been, if not the most, at least one of the most popular young women at the City by the Sea.

Want Him For a Show.

Colonel Isaac Morrow, United States agent of emigration at Toled, O., who is 77 years old, has married Edith Gilmore, 18 years old, who was one of the girls in the beauty show on the midway plaisance at the World's Fair. Museum managers are trying to induce Colonel Morrow to exhibit himself and his bride.

"PETER'S PENCE."

The Pope Issues a Letter to American Contributors of this Ancient Fund.

An important letter has been received from Rome by the Apostolic delegate, Mgr. Satolli, to be forwarded by him to the Archbishops, who are to distribute it to their suffragans. Heretofore the Peter's pence collected each year in every diocese have been sent directly by the bishops to Rome. Now those collections must be transmitted to the Delegate. In his letter the Pope says:

"Among other efficient means of fostering and proving devotedness to the Roman Pontiff, one deserves notice—we mean the financial support given him that he may the more readily provide for the interests of the Church. Since the days of the apostles the faithful have given in this matter a noble example, which has continued through all the vicissitudes of time and events. This support is justly called Peter's pence. Assuredly in these latter days, when the rights of the Roman Church are unjustly violated and its former means have ceased, it is a fact worthy of remembrance and commendation that Catholics of almost every nation have been so warm in their attachment to the successor of St. Peter as to come in aid of his honorable destitution. In this concert the faithful of your great country deserve a just meed of praise, for under the guidance and exhortation of their Bishops they have given remarkable proofs of the ardor of their faith and the native generosity of their hearts.

"Useless, then, to urge them to further continuance of this custom. Our purpose rather is to point out an arrangement which shall facilitate and, if possible, also increase their generosity. Not long ago, as you know, we thought proper to give your diocese and your flocks a special pledge of our affection in the establishment of a permanent apostolic delegation, so that there might be constantly in your midst one who should represent our person and manage your more important affairs in our name and with our power. Now this institution naturally suggests the new arrangement we should like to make as to the Peter's pence. It is this: The collections for this purpose which each Bishop orders in his diocese, as well as the private contributions that individual Catholics may wish to make to the Holy Father in their own names, shall henceforth be forwarded to and placed to the credit of the Apostolic Delegate residing in Washington; he afterwards will remit the sums to us with itemized details. Your generosity will be most acceptable and opportune just now, for the needs increase day by day with our growing solicitude for the faith, and especially since the publication of our late apostolic letter on unity. We cherish certain projects by which we hope, not without good grounds, to foster and hasten that devoutly wished consummation, the reunion of Christendom. Such, venerable brother, is our wish in this matter. We know well and duly praise your willingness to correspond to our counsels and desires. And now we lovingly bestow on yourself, your work, your clergy, your people, the apostolic benediction, as a pledge of God's choicest blessings, that unfailing success may attend your pastorate."

WHERE CZARS ARE BURIED.

Burial Place of the Imperial Family in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul.

The Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, in which the remains of the late Czar Alexander III. are laid to rest, was originally built by Peter the Great in 1703, though it has been rebuilt and restored more than once since then. It is often called the Fortress Church, because it stands within the fortress which was built on the island by Peter of Petersburgsky. Beneath the pavement are great vaults, in which all the Russian sovereigns since the foundation of St. Petersburg lie buried, with the exception of Peter II., who died at Moscow and was interred there. Overhead in the church magnificent monuments mark the sites of the graves. The interior of the church is covered with banners and other military trophies captured in the various wars waged by Russia against the Swedes, Poles, Turks, Persians and French.

Externally, the most remarkable feature of the building, which is an oblong structure 210 feet long by 100 broad, is the slender and elegant pyramid spire springing from the four cornered belfry at the western end. The summit of the cross, which surmounts it, is 371 feet above the ground level. In the gilding of the spire 22 pounds weight of pure gold are said to have been employed.

The fortress, which contains the mint as well as the cathedral, is now used as a State prison. The remainder of the island is meanly built and is the refuge of the poorer officials and the better class of workingmen. Its northern part, separated from the main island by a narrow channel, bears the name of Apothecaries' Island, and is occupied by a botanical garden of great scientific value and by fine private grounds and parks.

SMOTHERED BY THE CAT.

It Lay on the Krantz Baby's Face as She Slept.

Sadie Krantz the sixteen months old baby, of Jacob Krantz of Brooklyn, was smothered to death recently. The family cat, a large black and white tom, curled up and went to sleep on the baby's face, as she lay half buried in cushions and blankets in her carriage. When the child's mother caught the cat there, about 4 o'clock in the morning, the baby was dead.

Mr. Krantz, who is the janitor of the apartment house where he lives, came in a few minutes after ten o'clock Tuesday night and found the cat sleeping alongside the baby in the carriage, which was near the bed in his room, his wife occupying the adjoining bedroom with another child. He drove the cat away after giving it a whipping. He told his wife who was surprised that the cat should have got in the baby carriage, as she had been very careful not to let it on any of the beds.

Mr. Krantz went to bed after assuring himself that the baby was not harmed in any way. Just before he dropped to sleep he felt a warm feeling at his feet, and knew that the cat had jumped on the bed. Being very tired, he did not trouble himself to drive the animal away, as he knew the fire in the sitting room stove was out and that it must be cold on the floor.

At 11:30, Bartier Fieldman, a boarder of the Krantzes, who sleeps with Mr. Krantz, came home, and striking a light, saw that the cat was sleeping alongside the baby in the carriage. The baby's face was perfectly free, and the infant breathed easily while the cat purred. He looked at the pair a moment, thinking what a pretty sight it was, but a queer gleam in the cat's eyes made him suspicious, as he had heard stories of cats sucking children's breath, so he grabbed the animal by the neck, whipped it, and threw it into the kitchen, where it fell with a great clatter among a lot of pans. He shoved the door leading into the kitchen shut as he had supposed, placed a chair against it to keep the cat out, and prepared for bed.

Mr. Krantz was awakened by the clatter in the kitchen, and wanted to know what the racket was about. Upon being informed that the cat had been found in the baby's carriage again he sat up in bed and swore he would kill it. His boarder assured him that he had locked the cat out in the kitchen and told him to put off the killing until the morning, so both men, being very tired dropped off to sleep.

Mrs. Krantz, as she had a great deal of washing to do next day rose at 4 o'clock. Leaving the child she had slept with, she went into her husband's room to see her baby and feed her. When Mrs. Krantz bent over the crib she saw in the dim light the cat curled up where the baby's head ought to have been. There was not a bit of baby's face to be seen, and the cat purred contentedly. She could see the outlines of her child's form under the bedclothes, and after shoving the cat on the floor she lifted the child up.

Although the body was yet warm, the mother suspected she was dead. In a freenzy of grief she called her husband, while the cat ran into the sitting room and hid under the stove. Mr. Krantz hurried next door for Dr. Lefkowitz, while the distracted mother tried in vain to resuscitate her baby by chafing her little hands and limbs. She was bending over the little one when the doctor came in. He assured her, after looking at the baby, that she was indeed dead.

On hearing this verdict, Mr. Krantz went to the sitting room to look for the cat. The animal seemed to know that vengeance was in store for him, for he kept well under the stove, and could only be driven out by a long poker. He was captured finally, and his brains dashed out by the infuriated father, who then threw the body out of the window into the courtyard.

CRIMES BY THE SCORE

Swindler Holmes Makes a Startling Confession.

Failing to Bribe Detectives and Escape He Gave an Account of His Life—Saw One Murder Committed in Chicago—Has Three Wives Alive at the Present Time.

Philadelphia, Nov. 21.—The H. H. Holmes fraud in swindling the Fidelity Insurance company out of $10,000 has developed one of the greatest murder sensations with which the police have had to deal in years. The developments were the arrival in the Philadelphia of Holmes, the arch-conspirator; Mrs. Benjamin Pitezel, alias Cook, the wife or widow of the victim, with her 16-year-old daughter Meda and one-year-old boy, and Holmes' wife, and the receipt of intelligence that Lawyer Howe, of St. Louis, who was indicted as a co-conspirator, is on his way hither.

Detective Crawford told the story of the trip from Boston, which was full of exciting incidents. When the train was passing Providence, Holmes turned and remarked:

"See here, Crawford, I think my wife and Mrs. Pitezel can raise between them $500. I'm a hypnotizer. If you'll let me hypnotize you, so that we can escape, I'll give you the $500.

"Hypnotism," returned the detective, "always spoils my appetite. I'm afraid the $500 is no inducement when weighed against possible dyspepsia."

Holmes then told the detective that he was raised in Burlington, Vt., and attended the schools there until he was fifteen years old. About twelve years ago, one summer, when short of funds, Holmes thought of an insurance swindle, in which a bogus body was to be used. A friend, now a physician, had his life insured for $12,500; the body was procured in Chicago; the identification with the insured doctor was made, and Holmes collected the money.

The scheme was repeated several times. On one occasion Holmes insured his own life for $10,000. Then he went to a hotel in Rhode Island, wearing a beard. He got a body, took it two miles from the hotel, cut the head off and buried the rest of the body. He shaved, went to the hotel, registered under a new name and asked for Holmes. They said he had gone out, but was staying at the hotel. The swindler took the head charred it in the hotel furnace and tried to identify it as his own. This particular scheme fell through.

The arch-conspirator then, without giving any names, dwelt upon his dealings with Miss Williams, as narrated in a dispatch from Chicago. In Chicago, he said, where he was living with his second wife, he became intimate wit a young girl, a typewriter. He furnised apartments for her, where she was visited by an elder sister. The young girl, infatuated with Holmes, became jealous of her sister, and one day in his absence she brained her with a stool.

"When I came back," Holmes related to the detective, "I found the dead body in the rooms. I took the corpse, put it in a trunk and sunk it in the lake. The younger sister, in danger of arrest for murder, was anxious to escape. She owned some property at Forth Worth amounting to $40,000. Pitezel and I took this property off her hands and gave her money to fly the country.

"We then bought a horse, getting credit on the strength of the Fort Worth property. But the deeds were not straight, and we needed money to keep the thing going. So the two of us agreed to work the insurance scheme again, and that's how this trouble began."

Supervisor Perry, who ran Holmes to the earth in Boston last Saturday, declared this morning that he believed the case to be one of murder.

Regarding Mrs. Pitezel's connection with the affair, Perry further said: "I believe she may have been accessory after the fact, forced to sign papers, and consent to actions of others by treachery.

"She told me last night that she had received only $500 of the cash. Holmes, she said, took $5,000 and put it in a land speculation at Fort Worth."

The fact that Howe is on his way from St. Louis to Philadelphia was made public yesterday by President Fouse, of the Fidelity Association, who said:

"I have received word that the accused lawyer, Howe, is on his way east from St. Louis, accompanied by his partner, McDonald, the former district attorney of that city. McDonald does not come as a prisoner, nor is he even formally accused. He is simply adviser to Howe, his law partner."

BLEW HIMSELF TO PIECES.

A Man Places a Dynamite Cartridge in His Mouth and Lights It.

Pomeroy, O., Nov. 21.—Last night Josiah Wise, a contractor at Coolville, went to is room, placed a dynamite cartridge in his mouth, lay down on the bed, lighted the fuse and was blown to pieces.

Not a piece of his head could be found and the room was spattered with blood.

END OF AN ANARCHIST.

Jose Franch Executed for Killing Twenty People in a Theatre.

Barcelona, Nov. 21.—Jose Salvador Franch, probably the most desperate of anarchists, the man who on Nov. 7, 1893, threw a dynamite bomb into the Liceo theatre here, killing twenty people and wounding fifty others, was executed at 8 a. m. to-day.

Yesterday Franch was taken to the prison chapel, there to pass the last twenty-four hours of his life. The chapel was heavily draped with black and lighted yellow candles were displayed on the altar, producing a grewsome effect. Franch refused to sign his death warrant, as the law requires, exclaiming:

"Long live anarchy!"

Upon entering the chapel Franch refused to receive the priests, and to a Jesuit father who sought to administer religious consolation he exclaimed, fiercely:

"Get out! I was only acting! Only pretending to be religious in order to live well and hoping to get a pardon.

"The crime I committed was an expiation due from the bourgeoise."

Franch's daughter is to be re-baptized and christened Libertad. The Liceo theatre was filled with 4,000 persons listening to the opera of "William Tell" the night that French threw the bombs. Early in the performance he hurled them from the top gallery down into the stalls on the main floor. One of the bombs landed in a woman's lap and did not explode, but the other caused fearful destruction.

The stalls presented a terrible sight; the part where the bomb exploded was a mass of splintered wreckage, amid which lay a number of dead bodies, some of them so terribly mangeled as to be almost beyond recognition There were sixteen dead bodies in one group and people all over the theater were injured. Franch was caught running from the theater.

HELD UPON NO CHARGE.

Gottfried Bahler's Queer Arrest by Jerssy City Officals.

Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 21.—In response to a telegram sent by Chief of Police Donovan to Dr. Wise, Superintendent of St. Lawrence hospital, at Ogdensburg, N. Y., E. F. Seeley, state transfer agent, came to Hoboken for the purpose of taking Gottfried Bahler back to the asylum. As told, Bahler escaped from the asylum. He alleged that his family physicians believed him in his right senses.

It was learned that Bahler was looked upon as a very mild patient. He was allowed to roam around the town within three miles of the institution. He would have been officially discharged in a few days. Bahler is in police headquarters. No complaint has been made against him, and he is virtually held on his own statement that he is not a lunatic. Recorder McDonough refused to permit the police to discharge the man.

Agent Seeley says it is in his province to seize Bahler and take him back to the asylum if he is liberated from police headquarters. Bahler claims that he can do nothing of the kind.

MILLIONS WERE DRAWN

No End to the Gold Drain Is Yet at Hand.

More Than One Third of the Amount Necessary for the First Payment Has Been Taken Out of the Treasury—Banks Join the Private Individuals.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Since Secretary Carlisle issued his circular $4,650,000 in gold has been withdrawn from the sub-treasury at New York, $1,600,000 being taken out yesterday as follows: Central National bank, $500,000; name not given, $400,000; National Bank of the Republic, on account of the Mercantile Trust and Safe Deposit company of Baltimore, Md., $125,000; Merchants National bank of Boston, $100,000; National Reserve bank of Boston, $100,000; Empire State National bank of New York, $25,000; J. Pierrepont Edwards, $50,000, and Watson Brothers, $300,000.

Treasurer Jordan telegraphs that all the gold withdrawn at New York was in exchange for United States notes. In addition to the gold withdrawn at New York, gold to the amount of perhaps $125,000 has been withdrawn in exchange for treasury notes at Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston.

The heavy withdrawals of gold already about one-third of the amount necessary to make the first payment of 20 per cent. on the new bonds, has reduced the treasury gold reserve to $57,500,000. Further withdrawals of gold are anticipated to-day.

New York, Nov. 21.—The bids for the new issue of government bonds and the withdrawals of gold from the treasury in order to conform to the terms of Secretary Carlisle's circular, that all bonds must be paid for in gold, was the chief feature of interest in financial circles, and over-shadowed the speculative interests in the dividends to be declared by the Granger roads. Up to the close of business $900,000 in gold had been withdrawn from the subtreasury here, making over $5,000,000 taken out of the treasury vaults in the first few days of the week, and it would cause no surprise if the amount so withdrawn should exceed $15,000,000. This about he amount which, it is expected, the treasury will be called upon for in connection with the payment of the first installment of the new bonds. The manner in which application blanks have been called for indicates that the entire issue will be largely over-subscribed. Some complaint is heard that the banks do not show a more liberal disposition to furnish bold from their own vaults, but it is too early to complain on such ground. Proposals will be received by the treasury until Saturday noon, and no payment until next week. The policy of the banks will then be made clear, as the first payment of about $12,000,000 will then be due. The bank officers assert their inteneion to pay a fair part of their gold, and there appears to be no reason to doubt that they will do so.

CLEVELAND INJURED.

He Sprains His Ankle by Stepping on a Stone.

Washington, Nov. 21. — President Cleveland could not attend the cabinet meeting. Instead he was confined to his bed at Woodley. While the president was walking about the grounds he trod upon a stone. It turned under his foot so quickly that it sprained his ankle.

He was at once carried to the house and a physician summoned. He suffered intense agony and the doctor has forbidden him to move for a day or so until the ankle is better.

Mrs. Cleveland drove into town and arrived just as the cabinet was in session. She sent out for Secretary Carlisle, and, after explaining matters to him, the secretary went to Woodley, not even going back to the cabinet to notify his fellow members.

FIGHTING FOR LIFE.

A Suffering Woman Testifies.

Mrs. Henrietta Burton, of Janvier, N. J., writes: For a long time I suffered from a disordered stomach. My appetite was gone and what little I ate distressed me terribly. My health failed rapidly. I became very weak and feared I should never be well. After reading your "Guide to Health," I was encouraged to try Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure. Its action was so prompt that I soon felt like a new woman, and am now completely cured."

MUNYON'S STOMACH AND DYSPEPSIA CURE cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath, and all affections of the heart caused by indigestion. It soothes, heals and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

KILLED FOUR HUNDRED

Another Big Battle Fought at Port Arthur.

Japan Declines Mediation—Chinese Troops Reported To Be Fleeing from the Last Great Stronghold. Burning of a Transport—Progress of the War in Manchuria.

Shanghai, Nov. 21.—The Shanghai Mercury publishes a telegram stating that the Chinese are fleeing from Port Arthur, within fifteen miles of which place the Japanese and Chinese troops have just had an engagement, resulting in the loss of 100 Chinese and 300 Japanese.

London, Nov. 21.—A dispatch to the Central News from Shanghai says that severe fighting is reported to have taken place at Port Arthur on Nov. 15, the Japanese having massed their troops there.

An English merchant captain named McClure has been made vice-admiral and has joined the Chinese fleet. He was appointed by the Tsung-Li-Yamen.

Two trained men and two women of the Red Cross society recently started for the seat of war. The ladies were obliged to turn back, as the Chinese refused to guarantee them protection. They strongly represented the humanity of their mission, but Sheng the Taotai, said to them: "We don't want to save any wounded Chinese."

The correspondent of the Central News at Tokio telegraphs as follows:

Under date of Chiu-Lien, Nov. 19 midnight, Marshal Samagata reports that Gen. Osako, with his brigade left Takoshan on Nov. 15 for Sinyuen where he met the Chinese army under Gen. Ma.

On Nov. 18, at daylight, Gen. Osako began an attack upon the Chinese who retreated toward Haiting. Gen. Osako captured five guns. He lost no men.

The latest news of the second army was received on Nov. 15. Marshal Oyama and his staff were then leaving Kinchoo to join the army, which was advancing on Port Arthur, from which place it was forty miles distant. There being no telegraphic facilities this news reached here by steamer.

A dispatch from Yokohama to the Pall Mall Gazette says that a transport on the way across Talien Wan bay with 600 infantry and 500 coolies on board caught fire and was abandoned. The infantry and all the coolies except five, who were burned to death, were saved.

Tokio, Nov. 21.—It is learned that the Japanese government has sent its reply to the note of United States Minister Dun asking whether a tender by the president of the United States of his good offices in the interest of restoring peace in the east would be agreeable to Japan.

Before reaching a conclusion the ministry gave the matter consideration for several days, and finally stated to Mr. Dun that, although the friendly sentiments which prompted the government and people of the United States were deeply appreciated, the success of the Japanese arms had been such that China should approach Japan directly on the subject.

RESULTS OF TEMPERANCE.

Addresses Before the Woman's Christian Union Cangress.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Helen L. Bullock of New York called to order the session of the W. C. T. U. It was devoted almost entirely to a memorial service in honor of Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, the recently deceased corresponding secretary of the union. Addresses were delivered by Mrs. I. M. N. Stevens of Maine, Mrs. Harriet L. Monroe of Ohio and Mrs. Bullock. Miss Willard offered an eloquent prayer. Mrs. Alice Harris of Boston, the national superintendent of music, sang a memorial solo written for the occasion. The exercises closed with a benediction by Rev. Ann Shaw of Philadelphia. Mrs. Anna Hammer, president of the Pennsylvania union, presided at the later session. After a prayer by Mrs. L. McLaughlin the subject of "The Development of the Crusade Idea" was taken up. Mrs. L. S. Rounds, president of the Illinois branch, was the principal speaker. Mrs. Chika Sakurai, of Japan, asked for subscriptions for a Bible institute to be established in Tokio under the auspices of the world W. C. T. U.

Christian Advent Conference.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 21.—An association known as the Worcester County Christian Advent conference has been organized in this city. The officers are: Elder George E. High Prices for Old Bibles.

Boston, Nov. 21.—Some high prices were obtained at the auction sale of the Livermore collection of Bibles. "The Souldiers' Pocket Bible" of Cromwell's time brought $1,000. The only other copy is in the British museum. Eliot's Indian Bible brought $450 and a copy of the Governdale Bible, 1635, sold for $800.

Insurance Swindlers Jailed.

Philadelphia, Nov. 21.—H. H. Holmes, Mrs. Benj. F. Pitezel, her daughter Meda, Lawyer Howe of St Louis and the others implicated in the great insurance swindle and the murder of Pitezel, arrived here. They were all sent to jail. The case will prove a great sensation.

Hundreds Killed by Earthquake.

Rome, Nov. 21.—Four hundred people were killed by the earthquake in southern Italy and northern Sicily. In Procopio forty-eight bodies have been recovered from the ruins of one church.

PROMINENT MEN DINE.

New York's Chamber of Commerce Entertained Four Hundred.

New York, Nov. 21.—The 126th annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce was held last night at Delmonico's. There were aver 400 present. Alexander E. Orr, president of the Chamber of Commerce, presided. On either side of him were seated some of the best known citizens of New York. On his right was Col. William L. Strong, the mayor-elect of New York and on his left the Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs, who made the opening prayer. Among others present at the president's table were Hon. James H. Eckels, Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Charles S. Smith, Prince E. Ruspoli, Rear Admiral Erben, Hon. Murat Halstead, Horace White, Col. Frederick D. Grant and George J. Gould.

Scattered around other tables were Senator Calvin S. Brice, John Jacob Astor and a number of others.

Letters of regret were received from President Cleveland, Vice-President Stevenson, Chief Justice Fuller, Secretary Gresham, Secretary Carlisle, Senator Sherman, the Earl of Aberdeen, Speaker Crisp, Dean Hole and Maj.-Gen. Schofield. Addresses were delivered by all prominent men present.

IN PRINCETON CEMETERY.

Ex-President McCosh Buried With Imposing Ceremonies.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 21.—The funeral services of the Rev. Dr. McCosh, ex-president of Princeton, took place from Marquand chapel. Twelve hundred people attended. Rev. Dr. John Hall offered prayer which was followed by the closing hymn and benediction by Rev. Prof. Duffield. The pall bearers and mourners then marched to the old Princeton cemetery and the interment took place. Among those present were the following: President Elliot of Harvard, President Dwight of Yale, Dr. W. T. Harris commissioner of education at Washington, President Gilam of Johns Hopkins, Provost Harrison of the University of Pennsylvania, Prof. Palmer of Harvard, Prof. Bolles of Harvard, President Hewit of Emporia college Kansas, Prof. C. C. Beeman and E. T. Whitman of Harvard, Gov. Werts of New Jersey and Adjutant General Stryker, Col. W. J. McCook of New York and Prof. Armstrong of West Yan university.

PRINCE BISMARCK'S CONDITION.

His Son Says That the Ex-Chancellor Cannot Last Much Longer.

London, Nov. 21.—The Pall Mall Gazette publishes a report of an interview with Count Herbert Bismarck, in which he says:

"My father has no organic disease, but his frame has been weakened, especially by the hardest of his trials, which he has experienced within the last four years, and he cannot continue very much longer.

"Prince Hohenlohe is a perfect gentleman, but there are factors near and about him which prevent cordial intimacy with him."

The Gazette learns from the highest of authorities that so long as Dr. von Boetticher and Baron Marschall von Bieberstein remain in the ministry an entente between Prince Hohenlohe and Prince Bismarck is absolutely impossible.

TOOK THE RAJAH'S PALACE.

Dutch Troops Found No One To Stay Their Victorious Course.

Amsterdam, Nov. 21.—Dispatches received here from the island of Lombok announce that the Dutch troops have captured the palace of the Rajah of Lombok, and that the rebellious Balinese are inclined to submit. Two Dutch officers and nineteen soldiers were injured by explosion of a powder magazine.

The commander of the Dutch troops at Lombok reports that the he has examined the country in the vicinity of Tjakra Negara without meeting with any resistance. He considers it probable that the old Rajah was wounded and fled northward. The commander adds that he has sent to Ampanam 230 kilos of gold and 3,810 kilos of silver.

Will Sell His Programmes.

New York, Nov. 21.—Charles Nicoll has obtained an injunction restraining Edward Munn, the president of the Princeton university football association, from interfering with him or his agents, in the scale of programmes on the grounds during the game of football between Yale and Princeton on December 1st in this city.

VICTIMS OF COAL DUST

An Explosion Kills Seven West Virginia Miners.

Heartrending Scenes at the Blanche Coal Mine Near Colliers—Awful Power of the Gas Generated by the Disaster—Anniversary of a Similar Accident.

Steubenville, O., Nov. 21.—By an explosion of coal dust in the Blanche coal mines, near Colliers, W. Va., seven miles east of Steubenville, on the Pan Handle railroad, seven men were killed and four badly injured. Those killed were:

Michael Roney, Thomas Jordan, Thomas Tucker, David Rowlands, John Donnelly, Antonio Sattie, Mazzle Gessideo.

The injured are: Raphael Neckie, Jasper Lawrence and Thomas Morris. Tucker, Donnelly and the Italians are married.

The disaster occurred in No. 9 entry, 1,000 yards from the mouth, and was caused by a new Italian hand firing an overcharge blast, which ignited the coal dust. There were forty-eight men in the mine at he time. After the exposion a terrific whirl of wind followed. Donnelly and Roney were going toward the entrance. The force of the exposion blew them nearly 100 yards out of the mouth of the mine and landed Roney on the track, killing him, and Donnelly landed in a gully, strik- shortly after the accident and took his brains all over it. His wife was the first to find him and she swooned away and may die from the shock.

Hundreds crowded about the mouth of the mine, where some tragic and sorrowful scenes were enacted. A rescue party consisting of George Benbow, Nick Kemis, Arthur Ward, John Muter, John Stewart and William Davis volunteered and went in after the bodies and brought them out.

Prosecuting Attorney Cotton and Wilkinshow, of Wellsburg, arrived shortly after the accident tnd took charge of the bodies. They will conduct a rigid investigation, as this is the second accident of the kind that has occurred at his mine, the other on Nov. 21, 1892, when three men were killed and seven burned and injured. The state mine inspector is on the ground and his report will show where the blame is to be attached.

William Davis was in the mine entry, 150 feet from the entrence. When he heard the explosion he lay down near the rib of the mine and the whirlwind carying rocks, fire, air and death passed over him. An empty car standing at the entrance was blown 200 yards.

The mine is owned by W. E. Smith of Wellsville and L. O. Smith of New Cumberland. Rowlands was a former resident of Bridgeport, and Morris is the only colored man in the crowd. The miners blame the accident on the inexperienced Italian miners and declare they will not work wth them any more.

Fifty Barely Escaped.

Westville, N. S., Nov. 21.—The Acadia mine was discovered to be on fire about 8 o'clock last evening. All the buildings around the pit with the exception of the blacksmth shop were totally destroyed. About fifty men were working in the mine at the time and the telephone connections not being in order at the time the men had to be sent down the slope to notify the miners who were about four thousand feet from the surface. The men all got out of the pit about 9 o'clock in an exhausted condition. Two men who went into the pit to assist the miners in their ascent were injured by the cage running away, caused by the fire burning the rope.

THOUSANDS FOR STRIKERS.

Garment Workers Give Aid to the Starving Cloakmakers.

New York, Nov. 21.—At the session of the United Garment Workers' convention an assessment that will amount to about $10,000 was declared for the cloakmakers and it will be expended solely for food at wholesale prices.

Joseph Barondess was elected a member. The Baltimore unions presented a statements that they were preparing to inaugurate a general strike to abolish the sweating system. They asked permission of the convention to order the strike. The request was granted. It will effect about 6,000 people.

The question of granting charters to local unions composed of members of one nationality was debated at length and laid over.

Scores Were Injured.

Chicago Nov. 21.—Fully sixty feet of the heavy steel smokestack of the University building on Dearborn street was torn from its fastenings by a terrific gust of wind and hurled westward on the building at 94 Washington street, occupied by Handy & Company. Portions of the big cylinder penetrated the skylight, shattering the heavy glass into the room below, where 125 abstract clerks were hard at work. Scores were cut by the flying glass and several were badly injured. There was a veritable panic. When coolness was restored, the debris was cleared away and the injured were removed to their homes.

Poolrooms in Full Blast.

New York, Nov. 21.—The arrest here last night of Augustus Aranshaar and Jacob Bessinger for tapping race track wires disclosed the fact that nine pool rooms are running in the Tenderloin, despite Parkhurst, Lexow and the others.

Decker Gone to Canada.

Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 21.—John Decker, salesman for Frank Guaroglio, has collected $300 from customers and fled to Canada with Mrs. Mary Mosher, his boarding mistress.

Left the Association.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—The principal railroads comprising the Western Passenger Association have withdrawn, leaving that concern in a weak condition.

Lottery King No More.

New Orleans, Nov. 21.—Paul Conrad, president of the old Louisiana lottery and the head of that concern since it moved away from here, died yesterday.

IS OLD AGE PITIABLE?

NOT WHILE VIGOR AND ZEST IN LIVING LASTS.

Bismarck, Gladstone and Holmes Full of Years and Honor.

They Keep Their Blood Well Stocked —Their Nerves Well Fed

Some people carefully disguise the fact but a coat of paint on an old building only makes it look smart; it doesn't keep the rickety old staircases from creaking nor make the framework stronger.

What is needed is fresh bricks and mortar.

Fresh blood and new tissues are the building materials that tired human bodies need. Paine's celery compound supplies all the elements for building up the worn out, exhausted nerves and tissues.

One is never older than he feels. Many are young at 70, and the world is full of men and women who are old in heart and spirits at 30.

Nothing "ages" one like illness.

To keep young, keep well; keep the nerves calm, the blood ruddy, the system well fed. And when the sudden attack of fever or the heavy cold comes the sturdy, because well-nourished body, will resist and prevent calamitous results.

All over the country there are hard-worked business men, and men in public offices, subjected to incessant criticism and fearful nervous strain, who appreciate the saving power of Paine's celery compound. In the thousands of cases where overwrought brains have at last refused the sleep that they so vitally needed, this great modern nerve nutriment has brought the happiest results. Multitudes of women reduced in strength, half sick and on the road to becoming life long invalids, have sent in heartfelt stories of their rapid gain in vigor after a trial of Paine's celery compound.

"It takes years off their aching shoulders."

As the years go on the regular tick-tick of the heart and the rhythmic action of the digestive organs and the brain slow up and the strength must be economized. The important organs need more frequent assistance and encouragement. Paine's celery compound gives just the needed stimulus to digestion and assimilation that the system requires. It purifies the slowly moving blood of any bad humor that its stagnant flow is apt to engender and thus removes rheumatism, neuralgia, heart palpitation, nervous weakness, sleeplessness and troubles with kidneys, liver and stomach.

It was a favorite remark of the famous Dr. Parr when 106 years old, that he had always taken care to keep his body well nourished. Pure blood and healthy activity of the nervous system makes a happy, hopeful, useful old age. Paine's celery compound makes people well.

CHAPTER V.—CONTINUED.

The butler flung open the folding doors and announced in the voice of a man who felt that it was quite time for this nonsense of calling to be put an end to by the more compact arrangement of the morrow:

"Lord Parkhurst!"

A man of middle size, with a fair and pleasant face, and a rather short beard, entered the room. His blue eyes smiled rather more than his lips as he took the little hand of his hostess in his own with the air of one verging on proprietorship of the same, and said: "Now, darling, about what we have to settle before morning! I have come entirely on business, as you perceive."

"Ah—my beautiful one! I have nothing to give you in return for the immeasurable gift you are about to bestow on me—excepting such love as no man ever felt before! I almost wish you were not quite so good, and perfect, and innocent as you are! And I wish you were a poorer woman—as poor as I—and had no lovely home such as this. To think you have kept yourself from all other men for such an unworthy fellow as me!"

Rosalys looked away from him along the green vistas of chestnuts and beeches stretching far down outside the windows.

"Oswald—I know how much you care for me, and that is why I—hope you won't be disappointed—after you have taken me to-morrow for good and all! I wonder if I shall hinder and hamper you in your profession? Perhaps you ought to marry a girl much younger than yourself—your nature is so young—not a maturing woman like me."

For all answer he smiled at her with the confiding, fearless gaze that she loved.

Lord Parkhurst stayed on through a paradisaical hour till Miss Jennings came to tell them that tea was in the library. Presently they were reminded by the same faithful relative and dependent that on that evening of all evenings they had promised to drive across to the house of Col. Lacy; Lord Parkhurst's uncle, and one of Rosalys' near neighbors, and dine there quietly with two or three intimate friends.

CHAPTER VI.

When Rosalys entered Col. Lacy's drawing-room before dinner, the eyes of the few guests assembled there were naturally enough fixed upon her.

"By Jove, she's better looking than ever—though she's not more than a year or two under thirty!" whispered young Lacy to a man standing in the shadow behind a high lamp.

The person addressed started, and did not answer for a moment. Then he laughed and said, forcedly:

"Yes, wonderful for her age, she certainly is."

As he spoke his hostess, a fat and genial lady, came blandly towards him.

"Mr. Durrant, I'm so sorry we've no lady for you to take in to-night. One or two people have thrown us over. I want to introduce you to Miss Ambrose. Isn't she lovely? O, how stupid I am! Of course you grew up in this neighborhood, and must have known all about her as a girl."

Jim Durrant it was, in the flesh; once the soldier, now the "traveler and explorer" of the little known interior of Asiatic countries; to use the words in which he described himself. His foreign-looking and sun-dried face was rather pale and set as he walked last into the dining-room with young Lacy.

He had only arrived on that day at a hotel in the nearest town, where he had been accidentally met and recognized by that young man, and asked to dinner off hand.

Smiling and apparently unconscious he sat down on the left side of his hostess, talking calmly to her and across the table to the one or two he knew. Rosalys heard his voice as the phantom of a dead sound mingling with the usual trivial words and light laughter of the rest. Lord Parkhurst's conversation about Egyptian finance, and Mrs. Lacy's platitudes about the the home rule question, as if she were living through a curiously incoherent dream.

Suddenly during the progress of the dinner Mrs. Lacy looked across with a glance of solicitude towards the other end of the table and said, in a low voice:

"I am afraid Miss Ambrose is rather overstrained—as she naturally may be. She looks so white and tired. Do you think, Parkhurst, that she finds this room too hot? I will have the window opened at the top."

"She does look pale," Lord Parkhurst murmured, and as he spoke glanced anxiously and tenderly toward his betrothed. "I think, too, she has a little overtaxed herself—she don't usually get so white as this."

Rosalys felt his eyes upon her, looked across at him and smiled strangely.

When dinner was ended Rosalys still seemed not quite herself, whereupon she was taken in hand by her good and fussy hostess; sal-volatile was brought, and she was given the most comfortable chair and the largest cushions the house afforded. It seemed to Rosalys as if hours had elapsed before the men joined the ladies, and there came that general moving of places like the shuffling of a pack of cards. She heard Jim's voice speaking close to her ear:

"I want to have a word with you."

"I can't!" she faltered.

"Did you get my letter?"

"No," said she.

"I wonder how that was! Well, I'll be at the door of Ambrose towers while the stable clock is striking twelve to-night. Be there to meet me. I'll not detain you long. We must have an understanding."

"For God's sake, how do you come here?"

"I saw in the newspapers that you were going to marry. What could I do otherwise than let you know I was alive?"

"Oh, you might have done it less cruelly!"

"Will you be at the door?"

"I must, I suppose! * * * Don't tell him here—before these people! It will be such an agonizing disturbance that—"

"Of course I shan't. Be there."

This was all they could say. Lord Parkhurst came forward, and observing to Durrant: "They are wanting you for bezique," sat down beside Rosalys.

She had intended to go home early, and went even earlier than she had planned. At half-past ten she found herself in her own hall, not knowing how she had got there, or when she had bidden adieu to Lord Parkhurst, or what she had said to him.

Jim's letter was lying on the table awaiting her.

As soon as she had got upstairs and slipped into her dressing gown, had dispatched her maid and ascertained that all the household had retired, she read her husband's note, which briefly informed her that he had led an adventurous life since they had parted, and had come back to see if she were living, when he suddenly heard that she was going to be married. Then Rosalys sat down at her writing table to begin somehow a letter to Lord Parkhurst. To write that was an imperative duty, before she slept. It need not be said that awful, indeed, to her was its object, the letting Lord Parkhurst know that she had a husband, and had seen him that day. But she could not shape a single line, and the visioned aspect that she would wear in his eyes, as soon as he learned the truth of her history, was so terrible to her that she burst into hysterical sobbing over the paper as she sat.

The clock crept on to twelve before Rosalys had written a word. The labor seemed Herculean—insuperable. Why had she not told him face to face?

Twelve o'clock it was, and nothing done; and controlling herself as women can, when they must, she went down to the door. Softly opening it a little way she saw against the iron gate immediately without it the form of her husband, Jim Durrant—upon the whole much the same form that she had known eight years ago.

"Here I am," said he.

"Yes," said she.

"Open this iron thing."

A momentary feeling of aversion caused her to hesitate.

"NOW, DARLING, ABOUT WHAT WE HAVE TO SETTLE."

"Do you hear—do you mean to say—Rosalys!" he began.

"No—no. Of course I will!" She opened the grille and he came up and touched her hand lightly.

"Kissing not allowed, I suppose," he observed, with mock solemnity, "in view of the fact that you are to be married to-morrow?"

"You know better," she said. "Of course I'm not going to commit bigamy. The wedding is not to be."

"Have you explained it to him?"

"N—no—not yet. I was just writing it when—"

"Ha—you haven't. Good. Woman's way. Shall I give him a friendly call to-morrow morning?"

"O no, no—let me do it!" she implored. "I love him so well, and it will break his poor heart if it is not done gently! O God—if I could only die to-night, while he still believes in me! You don't know what affection I have felt for him!" she continued, miserably, not caring what Jim thought. "He has been my whole world! And he—he believes me to be so good! He has all the old-fashioned ideas of marriage that people of your fast sets smile at! He knows nothing of any kind of former acquaintance between you and me. I ought not to have done it—kept him in the dark! I tried not to. But I was so fearfully lonely! And now I've lost him! * * * If I could only have got at that register in that city church, how I would have torn out the leaf!" she added vehemently.

"That's a pleasant remark to make to a husband!"

"Well—that was my feeling: I may as well be honest! I didn't know you were coming back any more; and you yourself suggested that I might be able to remarry!"

"You'd better do it—I shan't tell. And if anybody else did, the punishment is not heavy nowadays. The judges are beginning to discountenance informers on previous marriages, if the new-assorted parties themselves are satisfied to forget them."

"Don't insult me so. You've not forgotten how to do that in all these years!"

There was a silence, in which she with passive gloom regarded the familiar scene before her. The inquisitive jays, the pensive wood-doves, that lodged at their ease thereabouts, as if knowing that their proprietor was a gunless woman, all slept calmly, and not a creature was conscious of the presence of these two but a little squirrel they had disturbed in a beech near the shady wall. Durrant remained gazing at her; then he spoke, in a changed and richer voice:

"Rosalys!"

She looked vaguely at his face without answering.

"How pretty you look in this starlight—much as you did when we used to meet here nine or ten years ago!"

"Ah! But—"

The sentence was broken by his abrupt movement forward. He seized her firmly in his arms, and kissed her before she was aware.

"Don't—don't!" she said, struggling.

"Why?"

"I don't like you—I don't like you!"

"What rot! Yes, you do! Come—damn you, dear—put up your face as you used to! Now, I'm not going off in a huff. I'm determined I won't; nor shall you either! * * * Let me sit down in your hall, or somewhere, Rosalys! I've come a long way to-day, and I'm tired. And after eight years!"

"I don't know what to say to it—there's no light downstairs! The servants may hear us, too—it is not so very late."

"We can whisper. And suppose they do? They must know to-morrow."

She gasped a sigh, and preceded him in through the door; and the innocent squirrel saw nothing more.

City Judge Coddington, J. Augustus Smith, F. M. Hulett, J. F. McClintock, John Beerbower and George Voehl left last evening on the 8:22 westbound train for Annandale in quest of the festive bunny. Today the party are shooting rabbits from spring traps underneath the large building known as the Hunterdon County Peach Exchange at Annandale. They exercised keen foresight when they bargained in advance for 50 live rabbits to be delivered at Mrs. Morrison's hotel yesterday. They also knew what they were about when they made arrangements with the Central Railroad Company to have an extra baggage car attached to the eastern mail train that arrives in this city at 5:54 p. m. The division of the rabbits will be made at the City Hotel at 6 this evening. R. F. R. Huntsman joined the huntemen today.

No Feminine Help.

The young men of Warren Chapel have arranged an old-fashioned supper and entertainment to be held in the chapel this evening.

The supper will consist of pancakes, pumpkin pies and coffee, for which a charge of 10 cents a head will be made. Vocal solos by Horace J. Martin and recitations by John Carney will complete the entertainment. The young men will do all the work, unassisted.

Extraordinary Meeting.

The Amalgated Society of Machinists will hold an extraordinary meeting tomorrow night at 8 in the Sons of Temperance rooms, when lodge officers and corresponding officer will be elected and other business of importance to every member will come up for consideration.

For rheumatism I have found nothing equal to Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It relieves the pain as soon as applied. J. W. Young, West Liberty, W. V. The prompt relief it affords is alone worth many times the cost, 50 cents. Its continued use will effect a permanent cure. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HERE NATIONS MEET.

The Town Will Greet Array of Royal Glory.

THE FRENCH CHATEAU WILL BE A SHOW

Replete with Wondrous Story—Proud Dame, Sweet Maid, Will Be Arrayed in Witching Watteau Splendor—The Great World's Fair Cannot Compare With Scene So Rich and Tender.

Not the least attractive feature of the coming Festival of Nations, will be the decorative touch, pervading everything and making of the whole a scene of beauty and picturesqueness.

As one enters the building from the Front street corner directly opposite Watchung avenue, the first thing to catch the eye will be an old French chateau at the farther end of the room. Very old it seems to be, for the gray stones are overgrown with clinging vines and the battlemented turret looks as if it might have many stories to tell of warring knights and hostile lords. It has seen gay revels in its time, and sheltered many fair ladies no doubt, but surely none more fair than these lovely demoiselles with powdered hair and courtly dress who look as if they had stepped from out a Watteau picture. What could you expect them to offer but sweets? Candies and bon-bons they will have of every description, real French ones, and better yet, some think, real American ones, too, fresh from Huyler's and from home-fingers as well.

From another side of the same room Spanish ladies will beckon us to their tent of brightly colored awning. High-born Castilians are there, wearing high combs and gracefully draped mantillas. They are surrounded with everything luxurious and tempting in the way of cushions and sofa pillows. Soaps and perfumes they deal in also, and all the way from Cuba, expressly for the Y. M. C. A. Fair, have come the fans they beg you to buy.

In friendly proximity to these high-born strangers, and not at all fearing a close competition with them, will be America's representative, the old-time Country Store. What could ever rival it? What could ever compete with it?

No one needs to be told how it looks, for at the very mention of it a vision rises before us of sharp gables, straight sides, angular corners and shingles on the roof. And inside—how shall we ever say what is inside! Uncle Josh can produce for you any article that could possibly be demanded, for use in cellar, kitchen or garret, from groceries and wash-tubs to a new Spring bonnet.

One corner of the room is left, the prettiest of all perhaps, for here is a veritable Japanese bower, with a gracefully curving roof thatched with rushes, and below is a mass of lovely bloom whose fragrance fills the air and draws you inevitably nearer, till you find the Japanese girls scarcely less bewitching than their perfumes.

Opening from this first room by a broad passageway, is another, which attracts one immediately by a glimpse of Venice just beyond. There it is, this queen of cities, with its shining blue water and bluer sky. S. Marco looms up in the distance, and near by the Doge's Palace, and in the lagoon a fleet of ships with tawny sails have evidently just arrived. Nearer still to the spectator is a gondola, not painted on the wall this time, but a very substantial one indeed, with plenty of room in it, and moored to a stake, lest it drift away before the aristocratic Venetian ladies behind it, have disposed of all the dainty embroideries and fancy work it contains.

The Swedish booth opposite is decorated in green and white, and will be a rendezvous for the Swedish bridal party who will entertain you delightfully later in the evening in Amusement Hall. Here will be displayed a full variety of the many fascinating things to be made in these days from delicately colored tissue papers, together with numberless little conveniences for the writing desk or library table.

Contrasting prettily with the delicate colors of the Swedish booth, is the Gipsy Encampment at one side of the room, where dark-eyed damsels will tell your fortune if you desire it, or reveal the most deeply hidden secrets of the heart. In a woodland glade they dwell, and in one corner a kettle is swinging over the camp-fire. Bright-colored and sweet-scented baskets are their wares, and they will have the best of lemonade to offer you.

The tale of good things to be found at the Fair is a long one, but it cannot end until we have whispered to the little ones that in this very room is a booth designed expressly for them. Good St. Nick was a true German, and some of his very nearest German cousins, with a limitless supply from his pack, will be there with dolls innumerable, and toys of every description for both boys and girls. A mysterious old lady will be there too, who never deigns to show her face, but who wants to speak very particularly to every little boy and girl in Plainfield.

WON AT BOTH GAMES.

Park Club Players Defeat New Jersey Athletics at Whist and Oritanis at Bowling.

The second in the series of whist games in the New Jersey League was played at the Park Club-house on Washington avenue, last evening, between members of the home club and a team from the New Jersey Athletic Club. The tables and scores are as follows:

FIRST TABLE.

Samuel Townsend, Samuel St. J. McCutchen,	279
C. H. Leonard, E. R. Grant,	241

SECOND TABLE.

George T. Rogers, J. H. Howell,	267
H. D. Fuller, E. Scofield,	253

THIRD TABLE.

J. B. Drayton, J. M. Leonard,	259
John M. Newman, E. J. Dervall,	261

Thus it will be seen that the Park Club team won by some twenty-five points, adding another to their list of well-earned contests. The same team last week beat a team from the Elizabeth Athletic Club by a score too bad to be reproduced in print.

Following the whist games there was bowling on the Park Club's beautiful alleys, between ten men teams from the Parks and the Oritani Field Club of Hackensack. The score:

Thinks the Churches Too Sluggish.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—John G. Woolley and Col. Bain, probably two of the ablest lecturers in our country upon the rum curse of our land, have by the invitation of the W. C. T. U. visited our city, and told more truths on that subject than were ever before told in this city in two lectures. Now the question arises as to what effect or influence they will have upon the Christian voters of our city? To be sure the pastors and the aristocracy and moneyed men of our churches were rather scarce in attendance; yet the common people and even drinking men turned out and filled the hall to overflowing, and many a stout-hearted man was led to tears over the tales of woe that exist in consequence of this greatest of evils. Possibly the church people know so well of these cursed things and their own guilt concerning them, that they cannot bear the pressure that would come down upon them, that they prefer to stay away. The women have taken pains to have these lectures at such an hour on Sunday when nearly every person in the city could be at liberty and attend if they had any interest in Christian temperance reform. They must know of the wonderful destruction of the souls and bodies of men, even in our own city by this curse alone, if they read the court reports from week to week in The Press of the prices paid, and men and women sent to jail from this source! Pastors and laymen of the churches, do you not know that this rum traffic is the greatest curse the church has to contend with? Is it not really the work of the devil, and his greatest hold upon our politics and the Christian church of today? Did not Christ come into the word to destroy the works of the devil, and to save men from the thraldom of sin and death? Are you the chosen people of God to help do this work? If not, the church is organized in vain, and you are mocking God, our creator! What have you to say; or what do you propose to do about it? Are you satisfied to let this curse continue, and walk annually to the polls and vote for men to license this curse of all curses for the sake of a sin-cursed party and leave Christ and God to save the world alone? Christ said of the churches of Gallatia: "I have somewhat against thee". And again: "I would that thou wert either hot or cold; and because you were not hot or cold, I will spew you out of my mouth." What became of those churches? And what will become of ours without reform?

Fair Profits, $260.

A regular meeting of Iona Council, No. 14, Daughters of Pocohontas, was held last evening in their rooms in the Stillman Building, there being a fair representation of the members present. Besides the usual routine business, the committee on the recent fair reported the net proceeds $260, and the following committee of five was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the first anniversary of the council which takes place about the middle of December: Mrs. Reading, Mrs. Holstein, Miss Sebring, J. E. Wyckoff, David C. Allen. After the meeting coffee and sandwiches were served in abundance.

CAR OFFICE ROBBED.

THE THIEF WATCHED HIS CHANCE IN EARLY MORNING.

During the Shift of Watchmen the Money Box Was Rifled of $30.

The office of the Plainfield Street Railway Company was robbed this morning.

In the tin box nailed against the door between the office and the car shop, about $30 had been left by conductors Jesse Hetfield, Harry Seymour, M. F. Higgins, Wm. Burnell and James McCormick Joseph Taylor, John Hyler and Michael McCarthy had not yet made their returns. The day was a poor one, so the amount of fares collected was not as great as usual Night watchman George Giddis left at 6:12, locking the house. The day attendant, Harry Page, begins duty at 7. Motorman H. E. Martin noticed that the glass in the outside office door had been broken when he went by on Car 3 shortly before 6:30. He notified Supt. Adleman at once, and the superintendent told Chief Grant. It was found the money was missing, with no clue to the thief.

PEANUTS IN CHURCH.

This Social Was the Delightful Affair All Congregational Gatherings Are.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational Church held a Peanut Social, yesterday afternoon in the church parlors. The programme was arranged by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, and Miss May Parmalee, chairman of the social committee of the society, and it was thoroughly enjoyed by all who were present.

Peanuts were hidden all over the room, and the young folks hunted for them. The contest was, Who should find the most in a given time. After an exciting hunt Miss Lulu Fuller and Herbert Rockfellow each found 18 of the hidden nuts. The prize, a small book, was awarded to Miss Fuller, as she was the first to find her 18. A booby prize for the smallest number found was given to one of the boys. It consisted of a small doll made of peanuts. A number of the peanuts were found tied with ribbons which were laid aside when found, and on being opened they were found to contain conundrums. These were puzzled over by the young folks until the answer was found. Potato races, songs and a variety of other amusements were interspersed through the afternoon. Fully forty young people enjoyed the entertainment and pronounced it the greatest success of the year.

ALDERMAN PARKS SENTENCED.

To Pay a Fine of $500 and to Go to Jail for Five Months.

Asbury Park, Nov. 22.—Alderman Charles Parks of the Tenderloin district, New York, who was convicted last Friday of keeping a gambling house at Asbury Park, in the most fashionable part of town, was sentenced by Judge Clarence Connover this morning to pay a fine of $500 and serve a sentence of five months in the County Jail.

J. J. Blair Arrested.

John J. Blair, who was a New York Fire Commissioner in the days of Tweed, has been arrested and was today out on $1,500 bail. William Gleeson, a former member of the Volunteer Fire Department, is the complainant.

He has sued Blair for slander, asking damages to the amount of $10,000, on account of a row which they had in the rooms of the Volunteer Firemen's Association at Essex Market.

The "Help Question" is an unfailing source of conversation and worry. "My girl is going today", says one housewife to another. "Matter? oh she could only do one thing well; what I need is an all around helper." A flour good for bread only is like the girl to be dismissed. Better for all to secure a good "all around" flour equally reliable for bread, cake and pastry, and your grocer has it in barrels, half-barrels and bags. It is "Hecker's Superlative".

Collision on the Elevated.

The dense fog of last evening was responsible for a collision on the elevated road at 132d street and Eighth avenue New York. The collision was between an express train and a local. Fireman Flint of the express train, as far as could be learned, was the only person hurt.

TONIGHT SETTLES IT.

Will the Republicans Accept the Opportunity?

IF NOT, THEN A CITIZENS TICKET

Plainfield People Are Clamoring for a Change of School Board Policy and Methods, and Now Is the Time to Make It.

The Republican managers have been doing some lively hustling for the convention tonight.

They recognize the need of a change in School Board policy.

Whether or not they will be able to control the delegates, tonight will disclose.

One thing is certain:

If the Republicans nominate for school trustees men who do not stand with the Mayor, the Councilmen, and the people, on the policy established in the new school law, then a citizens ticket will be run.

The public is awake to the issue.

A ticket divided against itself cannot stand.

A PLAINFIELD CLAIMANT.

LITTLE JOYCE KARET HEIR TO A VAST ESTATE.

Proof of Her Birth Sent Abroad to Secure Her Title to Part of the $6,000,000.

A Plainfield heir to a peculiar will was recorded in Justice Nash's court this morning. The heir is Joyce Dorothy Karet, daughter of J. A. Karet, the proprietor of the International Fur Store. Joyce was born Sept. 9, and her birth was made a matter of official record because she becomes an heir to an estate 200 years old, whose capital is over $6,000,000 There are 400 annual recipients of its income, and under the original will the sons get nothing, but all daughters born in the family become heirs on their marriage. Affidavit of birth was made by Mr. Karet, and witnessed by Judge Nash and H. O. Newman, and the proof was sent to Austerlitz, Germany. Joyce's birth will there be noted, and on her marriage she joins in the benefits of the estate.

FIRE AT WESTFIELD.

Charley Remsen of Plainfield the Hero.

This morning as Oscar Freeman's train was pulling out of Westfield Charles Remsen hastily raised a window and yelled "Fire! Fire!"

He was heard by some Westfield people who then saw flames issuing from Expressman Robert Woodruff's stable.

The firemen soon responded, and, attaching hose to the hydrant near at hand, soon had the fire under control. Woodruff sustained a loss of about $1,000.

The origin of the fire is a mystery as no one was around the stable and no fire was kept there.

By Remsen's quick-witted alarm the horses, vans and trucks were saved.

Well Exemplified.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., conferred the rank of knight on Mr. Turner of this city last evening. There was a large turnout of visiting brethren, including D. D. G. C. Fred Sears. By request of the Chancellor Commander of Unity Lodge, Past District Deputy Edward Bowman conferred the rank and exemplified the secret work in a very masterly manner, which was well received by all members present, who consider that the past deputy has no superior in conferring that rank.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

Before the regular Wednesday morning singing lesson under Principal Travell, the High and Grammar Schools practiced together several of the songs for the Thanksgiving Day exercises. In the singing lesson most of the time was spent on learning the parts in "Harvest Home".

It was a welcome surprise to most of the scholars yesterday when the well-known face of Seymour N. Marsh appeared in the Senior room. Marsh was formerly a member of the Class of '95, but is at present a resident of Brooklyn.

Webster Littell '97 returned to school yesterday for the first time since his accident. All were glad to see him back again, especially the football players, as his return settles the important question of who shall play centre.

The Civil Government class will hold a mock trial next Monday.

The Third class essays are due next Monday. Among the subjects are "Some Contrasts between Athens and Sparta", "A Scene from 'Uarda'", "A Scene from 'The Egyptian Princess'", "Nausica, a Maiden of the Heroic Age", "The Story told by Phidippides".

The programme for the Lyceum meeting of next Friday is a two-minute talk by each member on any subject he may choose.

The Kappa Delta Phi will hold a mock trial next Friday afternoon. The attorneys, A. B. Crane '97, and F. W. Cornwell '96, are hard at work preparing their respective cases, so a good time is assured. It will not be a special meeting, and visitors will be admitted on following the usual requirements.

Basket-ball reigned supreme in the new Y. M. C. A gymnasium Tuesday afternoon, when the High School met for practice. Most of the time was spent in a game between the scrub and the regular team. After a long and exciting game the regular team won by the score of 23 to 5. Among those who distinguished themselves on the scrub team were H. Richardson '96, C. Noble '96, N. Lane '94 and C. Dolliver '96. As many of the prominent players are members of the Kappa Delta Phi, which has engaged boxes for the Ragan lectures, the High School team will not play next Wednesday evening, as the second lecture takes place that evening.

Basketball practice was continued at the new Y. M. C. A. gymnasium yesterday afternoon. After a little supplementary practice the regular team of the High School played a game with the scrubs and defeated them by a score of 28 to 5. Of the five goals from the field made by the regular team A. B. Crane '97 threw four and V. F. Green '96 one. The goal for the scrub team was made by J. V. Rittenhouse '97. The regular team consisted of the following: Right forward, G. P. Smith '98; left forward, A. B. Crane '97; right wing, V. F. Green '96; centre, W. Littell '97; left wing, S. R. Titsworth '97; right guard, G. A. Horne '95; left guard, H. B Drake '95. Littell made a fine centre and Crane as forward filled the long-felt want of the team. As a number of the North Plainfield Public School team wished practice, a game was played between them and the High School scrubs, in which the latter won by a score of 8 to 0. Crane and Horne played forwards for the High School team and distinguished themselves by their excellent team work. Voeseller '98 as guard was a tower of strength, and Richardson '96 at wing played a game equal to that of any of the first team.

Superintendent Maxson announced this morning in chapel that the fire drill in the High School building would be resumed. In the period preceding recess, the fire-alarm, which consists of a series of three bells rung three times, was rung and in one and three-fourths minutes all the scholars in the building had passed into the yards. After several more trials the time was lowered to one minute. As no one is allowed to stop in the cloak-rooms, the Senior boys will have charge of removing the hats and wraps. J. V. Beekman, Jr., and E. I. Serrell will carry them from the girls cloak room to the ground floor where G. A. Horne, C. B. Morse and H. B. Drake will remove them to a place of safety; while on the boys side T. D. Blair and Elwood Sebring will carry or throw down the coats and hats and E. O. Clark, I. E. Titsworth and H. O. Nightingale will receive and take them to the Franklin building.

The members of the beginners Physics Class took their quarterly examination this morning.

MOUNT TACOMA IN ERUPTION.

Slight Earthquakes in the City of Tacoma.

Seattle, Wash., November 22.—Mount Tacoma is in a state of mild eruption. The appearance of the summit is entirely changed, and another peak has appeared in its centre.

Tacoma, Wash., November 22.—At 6:30 last night several slight shocks of earthquakes were felt here. Windows rattled throughout the city. The first shock was severe, being accompanied by trembling noises as of a distant explosion, and simultaneously a sheet of flames were observed in the eastern sky.

A GIRL'S GAMBLE

The most fastidious would have pronounced Alice Leneant decidedly pretty, as on that summer evening she stood on tip-toe, with head bent forward, in the doorway of the great kitchen of the Kansas farmhouse, dressed in a robe of white which well comported with her slight figure and fairyish face, now slightly flushed with excitement, as she watched some object moving slowly along the dusty prairie road. In a moment she uttered a cry, and exclaiming "It's a tramp, and he is coming in here. O, dear, what will I do?" beat a hasty retreat into the interior of the kitchen.

Presently, however, she grew bolder, and returning again, looked at the intruder, who had now turned in through the gateway, and was approaching the house. Soon he was so near that the young lady caught sight of an open, pleasant countenance, and, growing still bolder, stepped into the doorway to meet him. He came up slowly, and lifting a tattered hat, said:

"Miss, will you pardon me, but as I have eaten nothing since yesterday morning, I am as hungry as a bear, and should like something to eat. It's harder for me to ask than it is for you to give, and I know you won't refuse me."

Miss Alice, with all her fears, had a kind heart, and seeing that the tramp's haggard face bore eloquent testimony to what he said, she bade him be seated, and hurried away in quest of food. In a few moments she returned with a generous bowl of mush and milk, and gave it to the stranger. He thanked her warmly and fell at once to eating it with the eagerness of a hungry man. As he ate, the girl, while pretending to read, sat and watched him closely. He was tall, and broad-shouldered, his dress, though frayed and tattered, was not dirty, and his whole appearance gave evidence of better times. He seemed to grow restless under her furtive but earnest glances, and, flushing deeply, was about to speak, when she broke out suddenly:

"What is your name?"

"Never mind that," he replied rather bitterly, somewhat startled by the earnestness of the girl's manner. "Perhaps it would be better if I never had one."

"Well, then, Mr. Tramp, how old are you?"

"Twenty-three, miss," replied the stranger.

"How long have you lived this kind of life?"

"Nearly three years."

"What led you to it?"

"What has sent thousands of better fellows to the dogs—wine and women," was the answer.

"Have you a mother?"

"My mother, miss," said the young man, sadly, "died when I was a child, and I have no near relatives now living."

"I thought as much; that explains many things! But why don't you try and reform?"

"I have tried hard to do better; but what can a fellow do when no one will help him and everybody is dead set against him?" was the dogged answer. "When you are once down in the mire, it's hard work to climb, especially when there's no one but stands ready to kick you back again instead of lending a helping hand."

"But I am ready to help you."

"Yours, miss, are the first encouraging words I have heard in many a day, and they sound pleasant to the ear; yet what could you do?"

"I would do all I could for any one who wanted to do better."

"There's a town in the East where I could get work and help, but it's 1,700 miles away, and I have no money with which to pay my fare," and he paused and looked wistfully at the railroad which ran through the neighboring field.

"How much would you need to reach this place you speak of?"

"Twenty dollars would do it, but that, to a man who can't muster ten cents, is a fortune."

He ceased speaking, but Alice had disappeared, and through the half-open door of the door he heard the rustling of garments and the click of tiny boot heels as she ran up the stairs. A moment later she returned again and sat upon the doorstep, holding in her hand a small pocketbook. At the sight of this the young man broke out earnestly:

"Really, miss, I did not think that you would pay heed to what I said. It was idle talk."

"Oh, no, it wasn't. Besides, I like your appearance, and want to help you to do better. Here are three $10 gold pieces; they will take you where you want to go, and you can pay them back if you want to when you are able. Now, please take them, for I don't need them. And promise me, too, that you will try and do better."

The tramp blushed deeply, recoiled for a moment before the outstretched hand of the girl, while a look of pain came over his face; but at last he said:

"I will take what you offer me on certain conditions. You must give me your address. I know you don't live here, and accept my word of honor, it may be worth something, even if it is a tramp's, that the loan shall be paid with the first money I earn."

The girl drew out a blank card, and hastily scribbling a few words, thrust it with the gold pieces into the reluctant hand of the stranger. "There, take them and do the best you can."

"I will promise you," was the reply.

The girl had now arisen and was waiting for her guest, who arose and stood beside her, to take his leave. Drawing a band of gold from his little finger, he said:

"Miss—Miss Leneant, I have a favor to ask of you; will you wear this ring till I come for it?"

She made no answer, but silently held out her hand to receive the ring. The tramp had caught sight of a rosebud at her throat, and now asked:

"Will you please give me that as a parting gift?"

She took the flower from its place and gave it to him.

"Now, go," she said, "or you will be too late."

He caught up her hand, kissed it, and murmuring: "You will hear from me if I live," turned away. At the gate he paused, and, with a wave of his hand, was gone. Alice Leneant watched him, as with long, swinging strides, so unlike his weary gait of half an hour before, he walked along the road which led to Emporia.

When her father and the farm people returned from their evening ride, she hastened to tell them all that had passed. The careful housewife hurried away to see if there was not some of her silverware missing, while John Leneant, a prosperous lawyer, who an hour before had been put in the best of spirits by hearing that an important suit had been decided in favor of his client, patted his daughter's cheek, and said, good humoredly:

"I wager that you have made a losing investment, and I am certain if you were to run loose down here very long I would have to take the benefit of the bankruptcy law."

"But, papa," very earnestly, "he was such a fine-looking fellow, and so young, and seemed so friendless."

"Ah, my sly puss," responded the father laughingly, "youth and good looks are dangerous things sometimes, and I am so sure that young scalawag will never be heard from that you can have my promise for a check for five times the amount should he ever pay you."

"I shall hold you to your offer," she said, as she bent to kiss the old man good-night. But, notwithstanding her father's jest and the gloomy forebodings of the housewife, Alice slept soundly, feeling conscious that she had done a good deed. During the months that followed she often thought of her strange acquaintance, and wondered if he would ever come to claim the ring. Whenever her father questioned her about her "sinking investment" she would reply, good-naturedly, that he would yet be called upon to draw the check. One December morning, among the letters brought her by the postman, she found one directed in a strange hand. She broke the seal, when out dropped three crisp $10 bills, and with them a slip of paper, on which was written:

"God loveth the cheerful giver. Some time I shall call for my ring."

No name was signed, and the postmark was almost obliterated, yet she knew it was from her friend, the tramp, and felt that he was keeping his pledge. In the first moments of her surprise, a strange feeling of happiness stole over her, and then her eyes sparkled brightly as she thought of how she would demand of her father the promised check. But the time never came, for an hour later John Leneant was brought home dead; he had fallen a victim to apoplexy.

* * * * * *

Four years had passed since Alice Leneant had generously given the money which took another out of vagabondage, and into a life of usefulness. Her father's death had left her worse than penniless, and rather than be dependent on others, she had preferred to win her living as a saleswoman in one of the large art stores of an Eastern city. During all these years she had never again heard from her stranger friend. Many of those whom she had once called friends had long since grown cold, and she had often found the road of poverty a hard and weary one, but she always, with the nobility of a true woman, put the bravest side out and did not complain.

It was Saturday night, the close of a busy week, and Alice was putting on her wraps preparatory to going home, when summoned to the counting room. With a heart beating fast from some vague fear, she entered the little room.

"Miss Leneant, there's a gentleman who wishes to speak to you. Mr. Wilmshurst, allow me to introduce Miss Leneant; Miss Leneant, Mr. Wilmshurst," and so speaking, the clerk turned and again bent over his huge ledger. From behind her veil the young lady noticed that the stranger was a tall, good-looking man, of perhaps eight and twenty, with flowing side whiskers and a well-formed mouth, which, when he smiled, displayed teeth of dazzling whiteness.

"I don't know as you remember me, Miss Leneant," said the young man, fixing a pair of piercing black eyes upon her, "but I once met you under circumstances that made me your lasting debtor. I have much to say to you of a private nature. Will you allow me to see you home? We can talk on our way."

At the door of her lodging place she paused as if to bid him farewell, but he seemed waiting to follow, and so without speaking she led the way into a plainly furnished room. When they were seated, Mr. Wilmshurst said:

"My errand with you, Miss Leneant, is quickly told. Four years ago a young man, a drunken tramp, miserable and ragged, halted at a farmhouse near Emporia, Kan., at which you were stopping. Do you remember the circumstance?"

"I do."

"He asked for food; you gave him more, that which enabled him to become an honest and temperate man. In parting he promised that he would never again touch liquor, and that with the help of God he would reform; and he gave you a ring until he should come for it. Do you remember this, too?"

"I think I do," said Alice, growing slightly nervous.

"That tramp left the farmhouse a changed man. He always remembered the promise he had made to you, and though often strongly tempted, never broke his pledge. The struggle was a hard one, but he persevered and at last conquered. Some weeks ago he started for the West, once more to meet the young woman who had been more than a friend to him. He found that misfortune had overtaken her, and that her parents were dead, and that she had removed to a distant city."

The speaker paused a moment, and then continued:

"Miss Leneant, I was that tramp, and in obedience to the promise made you four years ago have come back to claim my ring; but I will take it back only on certain conditions."

"What are they?"

"That she who now wears the ring will be mine also."

"Really, Mr.—Mr. Wilmshurst, this is so sudden, so unexpected."

"Perhaps it is, but I will give you plenty of time to decide."

And he did. During the months that followed handsome Alice Leneant found so much to love in the ex-tramp that one evening in a voice low and tremulous, just loud enough for him who listened to hear, she said: "Carl—Mr. Wilmshurst, I mean—I guess you can take your ring."

The Cleveland saleswoman has now been Mrs. Wilmshurst for several years. When she looks at her pleasant home, her manly husband and her prattling little one, she does not regret that she once placed confidence in a tramp.—By Godfrey Quarles.

LOCOMOTIVE MEN'S SWEETHEARTS

It's noon when thirty-five is due,
An' she comes on time like a flash of light,
An' you hear her whistle—"Too tee-oo!"
Long fore the pilot swings in sight.
Bill Maddon's drivin' her in to-day,
And he's callin' his sweetheart far away:
Gertrude Hurd lives down by the mill,
You might see her blushes; she knows it's Bill—
"Tu-die! Toot-ee! Tu-die! Tu!"

Six-five A. M. there's a local comes—
Makes up at Bristol, runnin' east—
An' the way her whistle sings and hums
Is a livin' caution to man and beast!
Every one knows who Jack White calls—
Little Lou Woodbury, down by the Falls;
Summer or winter, always the same,
She hears her lover callin' her name—
"Lou-ie! Lou-ie! Lou-ie! Lou!"

Along at midnight a freight comes in—
Leaves Berlin some time, I don't know when—
But it rumbles along with a fearful din
Till it reaches the Y switch there, and then
The clearest notes of the softest bell
Ever out of a brazen goblet fell,
Wake Nellie Minton out of her dreams.
To her like a wedding bell it seems—
"Nell! Nell! Nell! Nell! Nell! Nell!"

So it goes on all day an' all night,
Till the old folks have voted the thing a bore:
Old maids and old bachelors say it ain't right
For folks to do courtin' with such a roar.
But the engineers their kisses will blow
From a whistle valve to the girls they know,
An' the stokers the names of their sweethearts tell,
With the "Belle!" "Nell!" "Dell!" of the swaying bell. Bob Burdette.

His Church Affiliations.

This story is told by a minister of the Episcopal Church, travelling South, who met a citizen who claimed that he also was an Episcopalian.

"To what parish do you belong?" I asked.

"Don't know nothin' 'bout any parish," was his answer.

"Well, to what diocese do you belong," I inquired.

"There ain't nothin' of that sort in this part of the country that I ever heard of," he replied.

"But who confirmed you?" said I.

"Nobody," he said.

"But didn't you tell me you were an Episcopalian?" I asked in astonishment.

"Oh, yes," said the old man; "I'll tell ye how it is. Last spring I went down to New Orleans visitin', and while I was there I went ter church, and it happened to be an Episcopalian one, and among other things I heard 'em say that they'd left undone them things they'd oughter done and done them things they hadn't oughter done; and I said to myself, 'That's just my fix, too,' and since then I've always considered myself an Episcopalian."

"Well," said I, as I shook the old man's hand, "if your ideas of an Episcopalian are correct, we are the largest denomination in the world."

The Parrot Did the Ordering.

A collection of parrot stories that have gone the rounds would, if gathered into book form, make a most respectable volume. One of the best of these is about a certain parrot that was in his cage, which hung on the balcony of its owner's house in a southern city.

One day a vender of kindling wood came along, and nearing the house he shouted in the unvarying way assumed by his craft, "W-o-o-d, w-o-o-d to sell!!" When he arrived opposite the house where the parrot was, that bird aroused himself and lustily replied, "Put it down cellar." The dealer, to whom the house was familiar and without stopping to inquire, supposing the voice came through the open window, at once passed around to the side of the house and dumped the load down through the cellar door. A few days later he came around and presented his bill to the owner.

"Why, I didn't order any wood," exclaimed that individual.

"Yes, you did, sah," persisted the man. "As I was pawsing by I heerd a voice sayin', 'Put it in de cellar,' and dat's wa'at I most certainly dun, sah."

"Oh, you heard a voice, did you?" said the man of the house, and looking up he caught sight of the parrot, who was unconcernedly blinking one eye. "Well, I know who it was. It was that blanked parrot!" and reaching up into the cage he grabbed the unfortunate bird by the tail and swung it around his head and banged it up against the side of the house.

Then he took it in the back yard and gave it a toss over on the ash heap. The parrot, to all intents and purposes dead, lay there all night. The next morning consciousness returned, and slowly gathering himself up he stood upon his feet. Then straightening out one leg and then the other he looked around, and his eyes fell on the carcass of a dead cat lying the other side of the heap. Then he exclaimed as he ruefully gazed on the remains: "Umph! What did you order?"

ROMANCE AND REALISM.

I watched her features quiveringly contract;
Her eyes went wandering o'er the distant ocean.
I knew that such display could be no act;
T'was I inspired this palpable emotion.

And then the lady oned her lips and spake.
But not of poetry, or the glorious weather.
She only said: "I do not think I'll take Clams and ice-cream another night to-gether."

The Century

IN 1895.

Taking advantage of the general revival of interest in the Great Emperor, The Century will print during 1895

A NEW LIFE OF

NAPOLEON,

Magnificently Illustrated.

The Century is famous for its great historical serials, and never in its history has a greater one been projected than this new "Life of Napoleon," written by Prof. William M Sloane, of Princeton, who has spent many years in preparation for his work. Thus far no biography of "the man of destiny" has appeared in either English or French that is free from rancor and attentive to the laws of historical criticism. The Century has secured it—the great all-around, complete and interesting history of the life of one of the most marvelous of men. No matter how much you already know of Napoleon, you will want to read this;—here is the concentration of all the lives and memoirs. The illustrations will be magnificent—the wealth of The Century's art department will be lavished upon them. Two members of the staff have just returned from Paris, where they have been securing all that is best of Napoleonic material. New portraits will be printed, great historical paintings reproduced, and Castaigne and other modern artists have drawn anew some of the great scenes of Napoleon's life for this history.

In addition to this there will be

A New Novel by

Marion Crawford.

The title is "Casa Braccio," and it is a romance of Italy, full of human passion and exciting episode.

A New Novel by

Mrs. Burton Harrison

will be published during the year. It is called "An Errant Wooing," and is a tale of wandering (and love) among new scenes of travel in Northern Africa and Southern Spain.

OTHER FEATURES

will be several familiar papers on "Washington in Lincoln's Time," by Noah Brooks, who was on terms of unusual intimacy with the War President; "The Cathedrals of France," by Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer, with illustrations by Joseph Pennell. Many more serials will be announced later.

Rudyard Kipling

contributes his First American Story to the December number of The Century.

The Price of The Century is $4.00 a year. "No home is complete without it." Begin subscriptions with November number. Whatever other magazines you may take, you must have The Century. All agents and dealers take subscriptions, or remittances may be made directly to

Harper's Bazar

In 1895.

Elegant and exclusive designs for Out-door and In-door Toilettes, drawn from Worth models by Sandoz and Chapuis, are an important feature. These appear every week, accompanied by minute descriptions and details. Our Paris letter by Katharine de Forest, is a weekly transcript of the latest style and caprices in the mode. Under the head of New York Fashions, plain directions and full particulars are given as to shapes, fabrics, trimmings, and accessories of the costume of well-dressed women. Children's Clothing receives practical attention. A fortnightly Pattern-sheet Supplement enables readers to cut and make their own gowns. The woman who takes Harper's Bazar is prepared for every occasion in life, ceremonious, or informal, where beautiful dress is requisite.

An American Serial, Doctor Warrick's Daughter, by Rebecca Harding Davis, a strong novel of American life, partly laid in Pennsylvania and partly in the far South, will occupy the last half of the year.

My Lady Nobody, an intensely exciting novel, by Maarten Maartens, author of "God's Fool," "The Greater Glory," etc., will begin the year.

Essays and Social Chats. To this department Spectator will contribute her charming papers on "What We are Doing" in New York society.

Answers to Correspondents. Questions receive the personal attention of the editor and are answered at the earliest possible date after their receipt.

Harper's Weekly

In 1895

Harper's Weekly is a pictorial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively in illustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Railway Strikes and the Chino-Japanese war, and the amount of light it was able to throw on Korea the instant attention was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources Julian Ralph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there joined by C. D. Weldon, the well-known American artist, now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr. Ralph in sending to Harper's Weekly exclusive information and illustration.

During 1895 every vital question will be discussed with vigor and without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department. Portraits of the men and women who are making history, and powerful and caustic political cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly comment on the lesser doings of the day, will remain a regular department.

Fiction. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely illustrated—The Red Cockade, a stirring romance of olden days by Stanley J. Weyman, and a novel of New York, entitled The Son of His Father, by Brander Matthews—several novelettes, and many short stories by popular writers.

MRS. PEARY'S STORY.

GREENLAND NOT SO BAD, ALTHOUGH IT IS COLD IN WINTER.

Poppies, Rhododendrons and Blue Bells About the Igloos. Deerskin Stockings, Fur Inside, for Winter. Housekeeping and the Baby.

Mrs. Peary, who was interviewed by the New York Times concerning her winter in Greenland, her housekeeping, her costumes, and her baby, said: It is not always winter in Greenland. We have a summer there of nearly four months, during which the temperature is sometimes as high as 60° and the vegetation is very luxuriant. The grass grows often a foot high over the old "igloos," or huts, and is plentifully sprinkled with bright yellow poppies, potentillas, blue bells and rhododendrons, but there are no trees worthy the name. During the mild season the skies and waters are beautifully blue, and the air is wonderfully soft and clear. There were a number of days last summer when I went out in a tweed gown and no wrap, and even the slight exertion of gathering flowers made me uncomfortably warm.

I dressed there outwardly exactly as I do here. Of course, I had to wear very heavy underclothing, and in winter deerskin stockings, with the fur turned in, reaching above the knee, and sealskin boots. The latter were rather clumsy, but very warm and comfortable. When I went sledging I wore a long fur coat, which enveloped me from head to foot.

Yes, last winter was unusually severe. The storms were numerous and terrific, but it is a consolation to know that there is not likely to be a recurrence of such weather for a year or two. We suffered a little with the cold after the tidal wave, which washed away most of our oil barrels and crushed others, compelling us to put up with short rations of fuel. Fortunately, aside from the personal discomfort, no injurious effect to any of the party followed.

The only sickness we experienced was the peculiar disease that broke out among the dogs, which prevented my husband from prosecuting his work as rapidly as he wished.

No, indeed, we didn't live in ice huts, as the natives do, but in a good-sized double house, which my husband designed and took with us all ready to set up. It had double doors and windows and was lined throughout with felt, but otherwise was like an ordinary frame cottage, and I took much pride in it. The interior did not differ materially from those of the houses you see every day. I had a Brussels carpet on my parlor floor, several comfortable rocking chairs, portieres, a few pictures, and the like.

Well, yes, housekeeping in Greenland differs necessarily from housekeeping here. For one thing, every drop of water we used had to be melted from ice, and cans of tomatoes, corn, meat, and the rest had to be brought from the storehouse the day before, and put on a high shelf to thaw ready for use. But that was really not as much trouble as to wash and pare vegetables before cooking, as we are obliged to do here. We were spared, too, the constant worry of trying to think up something new every day. Circumstances did not permit much variety in our diet. The hunters kept us supplied with deer meat, which is very palatable, and we had plenty of canned vegetables, but oh, how I did long for a taste of home cooking once in a while! Throughout the whole journey back; I could hardly eat a mouthful of ship fare, in anticipation of all the good things awaiting me.

Our house there was heated throughout with oil. The first time I was in Greenland we used coal, except in my room, where it was found that the oil provided such an even temperature that Lieut. Peary decided to heat the entire house with it.

The very worst feature, in my estimation, of living so far from civilization is the inability to obtain news from the outside world. I had never been separated from my mother until I went to Greenland, and the absence of letters from her and my sister made it doubly hard.

And now about the baby. She was born Sept. 12, 1893, at Bowdoin Bay, Inglefield Gulf. That is on the west coast of Greenland, 77 degrees 40 minutes north latitude. The day was delightful. We had no fire in the house, and the windows were wide open to let in the sunshine and the delicious perfume of the flowers. At that time of the year it was light up there from 5 A. M. to 9 P. M. The days rapidly grew shorter, however, until we were plunged into the long arctic night, and that was the time I dreaded on the baby's account. Just think of 112 consecutive days during which the sun never shines for a moment, while the temperature is from 20 to 40 degrees below zero. To be sure, there was a full, bright moon most of the time, but nothing can replace daylight, and the gloom seemed interminable. Baby never appeared to mind it, however, and took her outing as often as the weather permitted. Her father bought two dogs, a little Esquimaux sledge, and a fur suit, especially for her, and when the temperature was only 20 degrees below I put on her little otter boots, or "kammiks," wrapped her in a deer skin, and sent her for a ride of three or four hours down the bay on the ice. The coldest weather she ever went out in was 29 degrees below zero, but she only staid an hour, as I was afraid she would get chilled.

She was never sick there a moment, not even with colic, which Dr. Vincent thought very remarkable. He fully expected her to die before the winter was over, as he considered it a physical impossibility for a white child to live and grow without light. But a baby never had better care than mine had, for I attended to her myself, and gave her much more time than I should have been able to here.

Do Babies Look Alike.

Suppose that 100 babies are left in the nursery of that Presbyterian church which has set up a nursery for the care of babies while their mothers are in church, is it certain that every mother can pick out her own baby when the service is ended? According to the bachelors in the church, all babies under two years old look so much alike that nobody could tell one from another except by the dress. According to the mothers in the church, any mother could pick out her own baby from a thousand babies if the whole of them wore dresses of the very same kind. The mothers laugh at the bachelors and the bachelors put questions to the mothers. We can tell these bachelors that they are ignoramuses.

The fond mother of an unparalelled baby could pick that baby out from among all the other babies in the wide world. Babies don't look alike any more than grown people. Let the bachelors ask their own mammas.—N. Y. Sun.

THE HISTORY OF GLOVES.

They Were Not Generally Worn Until the Eleventh Century.

One of the earliest records of the use of gloves in England is found in the reign of Ethelred II., to whom some German merchants paid a toll of five pairs of gloves. It was not, however, until the eleventh century that they were generally worn by both sexes. A pair of gloves is said to be at the bottom of the quarrel between Queen Anne and the Duchess of Marlborough, which drove the Queen to throw herself into the arms of the Tories. According to Abigail Hill's account, she was sent one day by her mistress to get a pair of gloves, which had been left on a table in an adjoining room. Abigail found that the Duchess, who was reading a letter at the table, had inadvertently put on the gloves instead of her own. On being informed of her mistake she flung them on the ground, exclaiming: "Have I really worn anything which has touched the odious hands of that disagreeable woman?" Unfortunately for her Grace the door between the rooms had been left ajar—the Queen heard all and never forgave it.

Queen Anne's were not the only gloves to bring about an important political crisis. The Huguenots firmly believed that the death of Jean d'Albert was due to poison administered through a pair of gloves. The Queen of Navarre had come to Paris to arrange the marriage of her son (afterward Henri IV.) with Marguerite of Valois, daughter of Henri II. and Catherine de Medici. Like many another lady, she seized the opportunity for doing a little shopping, and her ill fate led her to the Italian perfumer Maitre Rene, from whom she bought a pair of scented gloves. Immediately afterward she was struck down by a fatal illness, and the Huguenots whispered that it was not for nothing that Maitre Rene's goods were so highly esteemed by Queen Catherine, for whom Queen Jeanne's death proved most opportune.

Even before the days of Maitre Rene Paris gloves were celebrated. Margaret Tudor, Countess of Richmond, wrote in 1495 to the Queen's chamberlain lamenting that the French gloves that he had sent her were "too much" for her hand, and slyly adding that the French ladies must be "great altogether, not only in their estates, but in their persons." A few years later the Queen of France was sending a ring and a glove to the King of Scotland, not for the benefit of his wife, but to tempt him into quarreling with his brother-in-law, Henri VIII. Those fatal tokens lured James IV. to Flodden Field.

COMPETITION IN DIVORCES.

The More Northern of the Two Dakotas Now Has the Lead.

"I will procure you a divorce for fifty dollars."

That is the advertisement run by a local attorney in a Fargo, N. D., paper. His clients form no small proportion of the Fargo divorce colony—a colony which has now gained precedence as the most extensive in number and superior in social standing of any in the United States. Previous to the last session of the Legislatures of the two Dakotas, although the north State had secured considerable reputation as a refuge for divorce seekers, her fame was eclipsed by the sister State to the south, and Sioux Falls easily held the title of Divorce Mecca. But the last Legislature of the Pickerel State altered the case by extending the time of residence to six months. Abundantly able to realize the profits derived from this infant—or anti-infant—industry, the Flickertail Solons refused to lengthen the time, and North Dakota has been rewarded by all the trade since then.

The only requirements ordinarily necessary to secure legal separation in the Fargo courts are ninety days residence in the State, depositions to satisfactorily prove the charges preferred, and a small attorney's fee, which competition has reduced to the minimum.

Some astonishing figures can be shown in reference to the divorce industry. An estimate, made after a visit to many prominent lawyers of this city, places the total number of cases to be tried here during the next six months at upward of four score and ten. But few of these seekers after single blessedness reside west of the Mississippi. The majority of them have journeyed hundreds of miles to this wrongfully yclept land of coyotes and blizzards to secure with little difficulty that which would necessitate much time and expense in the courts of their native States. Not that the courts of North Dakota do not balance the scales of justice as evenly as do those of other States; but the people of the effete East prefer to journey to the "frontier" to wash their dirty linen, rather than obtain notoriety at home.

New York city sends the largest contingent to the divorce colony; classic Boston is not far behind; the Windy City is well represented, and even St. Paul has a goodly representation. The colony is composed of all classes of humanity. The percentage of males and females is about equal; if there is much difference, the women are in the majority. Some of the pilgrims come from the highest society circles of Eastern municipalities. Especially is this true of the New York and Boston contingent, nearly all of whom are people of wealth and prominence.

Books to Read.

At a meeting of the Schoolmasters' Association of New York the following course of reading was recommended for college candidates, and it may with profit be adopted by the studious of every class: "Twelfth Night," "The Roger de Coverley Papers," Macaulay's "Essay on Milton," "Silas Marner," "Tales of a Traveller," "Vicar of Wakefield," Pope's "Iliad," "Life of Nelson," "Vision of Sir Launfal," "The House of Seven Gables," "The Merchant of Venice," "Milton's "L'Allegro," "Il Penseroso," Webster's first Bunker Hill oration, Macaulay's "Life of Johnson" and Tennyson's "Princess."

It's O. K. Anyway.

Prof. W. S. Wyman, of the University of Alabama, thinks the "O. K." is derived from the Choctaw word "Okeh," meaning all right. The usually accepted belief is that these letters were old "General" Jackson's abbreviation for "Oll Korrect."

Indiana Bloomers.

A bicycle girl at Laporte got a present from her beau. He wrote: "By bearer, I send you a pair of bloomers. If you wear them to-night at church I'll consider it as proof of your affection for me." She fainted. The bloomers were roses.—Indianapolis Sun.

The WREN in Business

It is characteristic of the Wren that it will sneak in and occupy the nest made by another bird, in preference to building one of its own. This same trait is often seen in business. It is shown by the imitators of

COTTOLENE

No sooner has the wonderful merit of this new vegetable shortening, so much better than lard, created for it a remarkable sale and popularity, than the business wrens are ready to move upon the market with many worthless counterfeits. Any housekeeper can be easily and cheaply convinced of the value of Cottolene by simply giving it a trial. They will then be unwilling to go back to lard, or go down to fraudulent imitations.

THE BRAVE RESCUE.

A New York Tale, Which Tells of a Clever Rascal's Deception.

It was 9 o'clock in the morning at one of the East Side docks, which was crowded with people waiting for a Sound boat. Suddenly there was a cry from those nearest the water, and, as all rushed in that direction, the first object they saw was a child's head rising and falling with the waves, the hair streaming out like a mass of seaweed. She did not sink, yet every now and then the yelling spectators could plainly see her struggle as the cruel waves broke over her. A rowboat was heading toward the Brooklyn shore, and it seemed as if it must have passed over the spot; but the oarsman's attention was evidently elsewhere, for he neither heard the cries nor turned toward the perishing child.

Suddenly one of the hangers-on of the boat-landing plunged in and parted the waves with sturdy strokes as he quickly approached the child. He reached her, and, resting her head on his strong back, began the return. Cheers greeted him as it became evident that his brave deed was not done in vain. At this point one of the loafers took off his hat, and, passing in and out among the crowd, requested a contribution "for Bill's sake." Everybody felt that "Bill" should be rewarded; and soon the hat had a good lining of coin. As he finished his collection and stood hat in hand, attention was divided between himself and the approaching swimmer. Suddenly he mounted a pile of rope, and, gazing into the hat, began to speak.

"Friends, az I look at wot's in dis hat, dere's nothin' bigger dan a quarter. Now, most of youse is rich, an' how many would a dun wot Bill did fer a quarter. He's got a wife an' five children ter home, an' risked hiz life for de kid. I'se a poor man, but kin go more'n dat."

"So saying, he thrust an exceedingly grimy hand into an apparently empty pocket and brought forth a dollar bill, which he laid in the hat. His words had a salutary effect upon the crowd, men pressing forward on all sides, and soon copper was replaced by silver, and silver by bills. So that when the head of the hero appeared above the pier, bearing in his arms the dripping child, quite a comfortable sum awaited him. He received it with a modesty which made all hearts warm toward him.

The event probably would never have been remembered, except for an incident a few weeks later. One of the spectators was on the West Side awaiting a friend, when he saw the same tragedy enacted—the drowning child, the heroic rescue, the magnanimous speech, and the second collection. And not only was the play the same, but the actors were also.—New York Tribune.

In Early Youth.

"I was not aware that you knew him," said Tom Snack to an Irish friend the other day. "Knew him!" he exclaimed. "I knew him when his father was a boy!"—Burlington Gazette.

—Regan is coming.

THE CONTRARY BOY.

I am the queerest sort of boy the world has ever seen—
In fact, I don't suppose before my like has ever been;
Because, from early dawning to the setting of the sun,
I always want to do the things that really can't be done.

For instance, when the summer comes, I sit down by the gate
And almost tear my hair with rage because I cannot skate.
And through the heated August nights I often lie in bed
And moan and groan because I can't go coasting on my sled.

Then when the frigid winter's here, and things begin to freeze,
I feel as though I'd like to climb up in the apple trees
And pluck the blossoms from the twigs; but blossoms none are there
When winter winds are blowing and the appleboughs are bare.

At breakfast time I sit me down, and often deeply sigh
Because there's toast and buckwheat cakes instead of pumpkin pie;
Yet, when at dinner time we've pie, my tears come down like lakes
Because by that time I've a taste for toast and buckwheat cakes.

And I should say to other boys who think it's fun to be
Contrariwise, that they would best take warning now from me,
Because I find the habit leaves me always dull and sad,
And makes of me a very drear, ill-natured sort of lad.

—Gaston V. Drake in Harper's Young People.

THE CID'S HORSE.

Babieca, One of the Famous Animals of History.

What Bucephalus was to Alexander Babieca was to the Cid—a faithful servant, a devoted friend and a sharer of all his dangers on many a battlefield. Babieca is said to have been more like a rational being than like an animal.

The name Babieca means booby, a funny name for so intelligent a horse. He got it in this way:

The Cid when a youth asked his godfather, Don Peyre Pringos, to give him a colt, and they went into the paddock to choose one. Rodrigo (that was the Cid's name) let all the horses and colts pass by and took none of them until the last of all, a very ugly colt, and he chose that one. His godfather was angry and said, "Booby!" ("Babieca") "you have made a bad choice."

The horse kept the name, but did not deserve it, for it served his master faithfully for 42 years.

His first battle was with the Moors, when his master was only 20 years old; and after that his adventures were many and varied. Once the Queen led him up for the Cid to mount, because she wanted to do him honor. Babieca no doubt enjoyed himself. In all the wars with the Moors and in all the Cid's private adventures, which were numberless, this wonderful horse went with his master, and though he must have been wounded in battle more than once, he always recovered and seemed not to lose his strength or show any signs of age. He understood his master's lightest touch on the rein and was as obedient as he was brave.

After a while the Cid became very ill and knew that he was going to die. He left directions which were to be followed after his death. He told them to saddle Babieca and tie his dead body on the horse's back, that they might go out once more to battle. He said also that Babieca when he died was to be carefully buried, "that no dogs should eat the flesh of him who had trodden down so much dogs' flesh of Moors."

On the twelfth day after the Cid's death they led forth Babieca. They set the Cid's body on his back, strapping it firmly to the saddle and tying his feet to the stirrups. The Bishop of Valencia led Babieca by one rein and Gil Diaz, his master's servant, by the other. So Babieca carried his master into battle for the last time. The Moors were beaten and the trio went on their way to Castile. Wherever they halted on the road they took the Cid's body from Babieca's back and set it on a wooden horse that was made for the purpose.

Babieca lived two years after this, carefully attended by Gil Diaz, who never allowed any one to mount the horse that had carried his master so faithfully. When the animal died at last he was buried before the gate of the monastery, inside of which his master's body lay.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache, Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence; we urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Large bottles only 50 cents at L. W. REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G. EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

WOMEN CONVINCED CLARKSON.

The Iowa Politician Studied Equal Suffrage in Colorado and is for it.

J. S. Clarkson was in Colorado in September, and studied the activity of women in the campaign there. He was in Denver election day and studied them at the polls. Now he says:

"The highest minded man, however jealous or sheltering he may be of his wife, mother or daughter, as against any rude touch of the world could not have found any objection to what occurred at the polls in Colorado.

"The women cast a large majority of the votes in Denver, and the presence of a single good woman at a polling place made the men there as quiet and respectable as at a theatre or church, and, regardless of her rank or station, the American woman is as much of a queen at the polls as in the drawing-room, and as much deference is paid her.

"The women went early to the polls and many families went together. The women gave enthusiasm to the work and 90 per cent. of the women voted. They were not led away and deceived as many feared they would be, by the sophistries of communism rampant there.

"It must be remembered by the skeptics of the East, who may attempt to dismiss all this as the action of women on the frontier, that most of the people of Colorado and the women there are as refined and well educated as in any Eastern city or State.

"The good women have voted in much larger proportion than the bad. The women were not only well informed on all the questions of the day, but they furnished some of the ablest speakers.

"Indeed this election in Colorado has left very little of good argument for the sincere opponents of woman suffrage. I believe that woman suffrage is inevitable in every American State, and that as it comes it will bring good to every State and every city, especially, and to the nation.

"The problem of municipal government will not be solved successfully until woman and her moral conscience and quick intelligence are brought to bear on it. She who bears soldiers need not bear arms."

THE WESTERN GIRL.

She is Jolly, Untrammeled, and Has a Good Time.

There may be things which the Western girl lacks; but one thing she surely has—that is a good time! There still is, and, much more, there was a picturesque social liberty in the average Western town whereby the girls and boys have profited. The laws of conduct were few. "Nice" girls could do things which would make a woman reared in a more conventional atmosphere shudder to hear.

The conventional woman did not consider that the liberty accorded to the Western girl was matched by the respect exacted of the Western man. It certainly appears an audacious breach not only of conventions, but of common propriety for a girl of 19 to drive away with a boy of 22, take supper in a public restaurant and come home by moonlight. Yet the boy would no more dream of thinking lightly of the girl than the girl dreams that she is exposing herself to criticism.

We disapprove, most of us who have lived much in the world, of such actions; but, nevertheless, there is a kind of innocence about it that is touching. These daring girls become the best of wives, the most devoted of mothers, and outside of their homes carry their energy and gay-hearted courage into all manner of charity and good works. Perhaps the bold young man who marries one should be punished for not having married a more demure and modest creature; as a matter of fact, he isn't. He goes about blissfully ignorant that his wife has brushed off the evanescent first bloom of modesty, that, like the down of a peach—you will all remember the rest. He thinks that she is as sweet and innocent as a girl can be. And so, very often, she is, although she has not had a chaperon in her life, and has read any novel that she cared to read, and calls her masculine acquaintances by their Christian names.

But in her heart she may not have half the cynical wisdom of an Eastern society girl who has been most carefully trained.

She has a simple belief in the decency of men. She knows, it is true, that young Eddy, who has such beautiful eyes and sings so delightfully, sometimes drinks more than is good for him; but she knows no more. Why her father should look so black when Ralph calls she cannot imagine. To her Ralph seems a wit and a lovely fellow. Nobody else sends her such flowers, or can pay little attentions with such a bewitching, half tender, all worshipful air. And Ralph is a good business man, too, so what has got into papa to make him so horrid? One day, perhaps (for the child is not the least bit in love with Ralph, it is only her fancy and her vanity that are engaged), she will frankly ask her father, who is the biggest and in many ways the nicest of her chums, why he doesn't like Ralph. And if her father is wise, he will tell her as frankly as she has asked. But he will blush, the honest, faithful husband that he is, while he stammers through his story.—Octave Thanet.

Co-operative Housekeeping.

The co-operative housekeeping, at Wellesley College, Mass., is very interesting. Eliot Hall contains 35 women, who, by giving one hour a day, with the help of one domestic (not a servant), run the house and have better service than most hotels. Here is one example of the dispatch with which things are done: Eight women wash the dishes, set all the tables, sweep and dust the dining-room in from 20 to 30 minutes. One woman makes the bread, one the cake, one desserts, one takes care of the vegetables, &c. It is remarkable how expert each becomes in her duty, and the hour hardly seems a loss to her regular work. It is quite the thing for a woman to do her own washing and study Greek.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

THE GRAND OPERA SEASON IS OPEN. THE FIRST NIGHT.

Comic Opera is Having an Unusual Run in New York. Palmer Cox's Brownies on the Stage. The Evolution of the Dressing-Room.

The season of grand opera is now fairly open, and the greatest group of musical artists ever gathered together are charming the music-loving New Yorkers (who can afford the entertainment) in the Metropolitan Opera House. The opening night saw one of the largest audiences of society people that ever graced an entertainment, and the money represented in dresses and jewels would be an astonishing amount in at least eight figures. Beautiful women, beautifully gowned, radiant young debutantes, blase beaus and people of all conditions—the poor excepted—applauded and chattered and fluttered, as the tuneful measures were sung by the most accomplished artists that the two hemispheres hold. It was a great night, and the succeeding ones are only less brilliant and bejewelled, showing the great hold that French and Italian opera has upon the people here.

Comic opera is having unusual vogue in the metropolis this year. There has been this form of entertainment for many weeks at the Broadway Theatre, where the Bostonians, with "Prince Ananias," succeeded De Wolf Hopper and "Dr. Syntax"; at the Herald Square, where "Rob Roy" is having a long run, and at Abbey's, where Lillian Russell made her debut under her new managers. Opera of any kind seems very popular in New York, and the comic variety has fully captured the popular fancy. And it is given with a wealth of stage accessories and beautiful pictures that compels the admiration of even those unfortunates whose ears are not cultivated, and who must depend on what they see, and the spoken dialogue for their pleasure.

Something new in the theatrical line is Palmer Cox's Brownies, an entertainment especially designed for children, although older people will doubtless make most of the evening audiences. At the opening night at the Fourteenth Street Theatre there were more children than have been seen at any evening performance for a long time. The boxes were crowded with them. The balcony resembled a flower garden of bright faces and sparkling eyes. Down in the orchestra were a lot more of them, all handsomely dressed, and all were having just as good a time as if there were no reason for their ever going to bed. They were amused by the funny dances of the brownies, they laughed over the infections playing of "dot feedle Cherman band," and were thrilled with horror by the fire-breathing dragon, and the big birds of ill omen that swooped down on the storm tossed gnomes and carried them off. The spectacles and transformations were remarkably well done. One was an earthquake scene, accompanied by the eruption of a volcano, which the brownies tried to extinguish by playing water from a hose on the streaming lava. Another pleasing bit of stage realism was the arrival of the king of the brownies, who made his entrance inside of a marvellously natural looking watermelon, drawn by a liliputian pony.

The evolution of the stage dressing room from an ugly spot where no actress remained except through necessity, to a bower of beauty has been often remarked. What is undoubtedly the handsomest dressing room in the city is Miss Russell's at Abbey's Theater. The walls of her apartment are covered with folds of rich Japanese silk, with a white ground and blue stripe. The floor is covered with soft carpet of a corresponding hue, giving a rich tone to the room. The electric lights are numerous, in fact there is a light in every conceivable place where it can shed radiance over Miss Russell when she is preparing for the stage. She is one of the most particular actresses on the stage about her appearance. There is never a fold of her dress awry. She is not satisfied with the judgment of her maid, but invariably gives a parting look when ready for the stage to assure herself that her appearance is correct. She has two very large mirrors in her room, by which she can view herself from her blond hair to her well fitting footgear. When she seats herself in her dressing room it is upon a richly upholstered chair in gold finish.

This summer at the seaside Henry Clay Barnabee, of the Bostonians, was asked to take part in an entertainment at one of the hotels. He recited several poems, and then brought his performance to a conclusion with "The Cork Leg." The audience applauded him most heartily—all but one woman, who was sitting next to Mrs. Barnabee in the front row. As Mr. Barnabee concluded this woman turned to her and said:

"Now, I don't think he is a bit funny, do you?"

"Not a bit," replied Mrs. Barnabee, promptly. "And what is more, if Mr. Barnabee were any relation of mine I should feel awfully ashamed of his going on like that."

The death of Col. John A. McCaull removes one of the most active figures in the American comic opera world of the last decade. He was the first manager of the Casino, and among the artists who made their early success under his management, either at that theatre, at the Bijou or at Wallack's, were Lillian Russell, Francis Wilson, Digby Bell, De Wolf Hopper, Selina Dolaro, Pauline Hall, Lillie Post, Will Carleton, Signor Perugini and Mathilde Cottrelly.

LINWARD.

An Interesting Discovery.

Antonio Cerevas, a noted scientist, has just reached Oaxaca, Mexico, from the State of Tobasco, where he has discovered some of the most wonderful and interesting ruins yet found in Mexico, while exploring a wild and wooded district in the valley of the San Pedro river. In that State he came upon an ancient deserted village, which is surrounded by 13 pyramids. These pyramids are 13 meters high, and are constructed of brick and stone. Mr. Cerevas has returned to civilization for the purpose of organizing a company to make further explorations of the ruins.

A True Saying.

The husband was complaining and the wife was busying about, hunting for the sunshiny places.

"Life is a burden," he sighed.

"Yes, dear," she answered, "but you know we couldn't exist very well without it."

Then he smiled and took a new hold.—Detroit Free Press.

"Fair" Verses and a Joke.

It is related of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes that at a country charitable fair he was entreated to furnish a letter for the post office. He seized a sheet of paper and between its folds placed a one dollar bank note. Turning to the first page he wrote the following:

Dear lady, whoso'er thou art
Turn this poor page with trembling care,
But hush, oh hush, thy beating heart,
The one thou lovest will be there!

The page turned enclosed the attractive greenback. On the third page, opposite the banknote, he wrote:

Fair lady, lift thine eyes and tell
If this is not a truthful letter;
This is the one thou lovest well,
And naught (0) would make thee love it better.

The Stones of the Months.

The emerald is supposed to be particularly lucky to those born in the month of May. She is also to be wealthy, and to possess an eloquent tongue. The cat's-eye belongs to June, the ruby to July, the moonstone to August, the sapphire to September, and the opal to October. The name may be regarded as a synonym for hope, in the beliefs of the ancients. The topaz is November's stone, and the turquoise is January's, and the pearl belongs to February, the jacinth to March, and diamonds to April.

The Emperor's Daughter.

Princess Victoria Louise, the chubby little daughter of the German Emperor and Empress, is not a very pretty child, but is a rosy, healthy and happy one. She is now two years old and is uncommonly bright and intelligent. As the only girl among so many little sons, she is a great pet, the Emperor being particularly devoted to her. As for the baby's young brothers, they are her slaves and adorers, one of the chief desires of their hearts having been fulfilled when they acquired "a little sister." The princess resembles both father and mother.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

THE MAINSPRING OF HER LIFE.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Few people realize this.

What can she do, where can she go, so long as that dreadful backache sags both strength and ambition?

She cannot walk or stand, her duties are heavy burdens, and she is utterly miserable.

The cause is some derangement of the uterus or womb. Backache is the sure symptom.

For years Sarah Holstein, who lives at 7 Perry Street, in Lowell, Mass., suffered with falling of the womb. The best doctors failed to relieve her, and as a last resort she purchased six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Now she is a well woman.

The dreadful pain in her back stopped after taking the second bottle. She wishes she had taken it sooner, and saved both money and years of suffering.

This Vegetable Compound is the one unfailing remedy for such troubles. A woman discovered it and gave it to woman.

FIFTY-TWO DIVIDENDS.

As a general thing investors are pleased to received only two dividens a year, and if they are paid with regularity are fully satisfied. When one however, can receive fifty-two dividends in a year upon an investment of only three dollars the matter deserves very serious attention.

The Independent of New York for forty-six years has held the first position among the great religious, literary and family weeklies of the land. It presents features for the coming year far in advance of any heretofore offered. It has the leading contributors of the world, it prints the best poetry, it has twenty-one departments, edited by specialists, devoted to Fine Arts, Science, Insurance, Finance, Biblical Research, Sunday-School, Missions, Health, etc. The Independent is particularly fitted for intelligent people, whether professional men, business men or farmers, and for their families. It costs but six cents a week and gives a great deal. A subscriber receives fifty-two dividends a year.

The subcription price of The Independent is only three dollars a year, and a sample copy will be sent to any person free by addressing The Independent, New York City.

NEW DYES FOR COTTON.

BEAUTIFUL AND BRILLIANT COLORS THAT DO NOT FADE.

Scientific Discoveries that Lighten Labor—A Weaver's Experience in Dyeing—Carpets where the Color Stays as Bright as When New.

Within the last few years science has been at work in the matter of dyeing, and the results are the fast diamond dyes for cotton,—turkey-red, pink, purple, orange, olive-green, brown, etc. These dyes make colors so fast that even washing in strong soap-suds will not start them. If a woman is sure to get the fast diamond dyes for cotton when she wants to dye cotton, she will be able to dye absolutely fast, non-fading colors that will stay until the goods are worn out.

A practical dyer, writing in the Weavers' Herald, says, "I used to dye with roots and barks, but after all my work, (and it was a tedious job,) I was not satisfied, for the colors were homely and often faded. At last I commenced to use diamond dyes, and the process is so simple and easy that the work is a pleasure. I have used carpets made of rags dyed with diamond dyes three years, and the colors are still as bright as when new."

Many of the diamond dye fast cotton colors are so superior to other dyestuffs that they are used by dyers everywhere, even in the big mills and the large dye houses. Imitators of these reliable dyes may claim that their cotton dyes are "just as good," but practical tests prove the diamond is the only kind that makes colors which soap will not wash out or sunlight fade.

The diamond dyes come in nearly fifty different colors, for silk, wool and cotton, and will dye anything, from a pair of stockings to a dress or cloak.

MILLIONS ARE WANTED

St. Louis Parties Bring Suit Against Gould's Estate.

The Soldiers' Orphans' Home of That City Demands the Return of Money Foolishly Entrusted to Russell Sage and the Wizzard of Wall Street—Eleven Million in Bonds.

New York, Nov. 22.—Surrogate Fitzgerald has granted an order requiring the executors of the will of Jay Gould to show cause to-morrow why they should not be compelled to file an inventory of the estate of the millionaire, or that an attachment be issued against them for failing to do so.

This step is taken at the instance of the Soldiers' Orphans' home of St. Louis, the owners of $10,000 of Consolidated bonds of the Kansas Pacific Railroad company, which has for some time past been in litigation with the estate of Jay Gould and Russell Sage, in the hope of compelling restitution of $11,000,000 of trust funds, which, it is claimed, that Gould and Sage, as trustees, had possession of and appropriated to their own use.

The object of the proceedings is to compel an inventory of the estate so that some definite information may be had as to the exact value of the property which Jay Gould left, with a view to having a sufficient amount deposited with the court to satisfy the claim of the Consolidated bond holders to this $11,000,000.

The order was obtained by Lawyer Louis J. Morrison, the attorney for the Soldiers' Orphans' home of St. Louis, and was based upon all the proceedings which have been taken against Sage and Gould for some years past, including the proceedings before the United States railway commissioners, the action in the United States courts, and the latest suit, but recently brought in the supreme court of this country by the Soldiers' orphans' home, the object of which is to compel the estate of Jay Gould and Russell Sage to refund $11,000,000. An affidavit of John Rooney, the secretary of the committee of the Kansas Pacific Consolidated bondholder, at whose instigation this new proceeding is taken, accompanies the papers, and recites some of the facts upon which the court was asken to grant the order.

Rooney refers to the fact that the home is a creditor of Jay Gould's estate, and that he object of the proceedings is to recover misappropriated trust funds to the amount of $11,000,000 taken from the Kansas Pacific Concolidated trust by Jay Gould, consisting of securities placed there for the benefit of the bondholders under a deed of trust, and the conversion of the same to his own use. He says that the proof of this consists of a memorandum signed by himself, of a letter with his signature, and of his answer under oath to the United States Pacific Railway commissioners, and other documents.

The Consolidated bondholders want to have their claim against the estate secured in some way, if possible, and therefore they want the surrogate to compel the executors to file their accounts, and have them settled, and to direct them to deposit a sum in court sufficient to satisfy their claim.

The affidavit shows that the estate consists largely of railroad stocks, including Wabash Railway company, the Missouri Pacific and Manhattan Railway companies, the two former which have depreciated in price, and the latter recently reported greatly diminished earnings. Notwithstanding these facts it is supposed that the estate could satisfy the claim of the Kansas Pacific bondholders for this $11,000,000 with property within the jurisdiction of the court if the executors of Jay Gould had not engaged in a contest with the tax commissioners, upon the ground that the estate was illegally assessed at $10,000,000 and that in fact none of the property of the estate was in this county, but removed to Tarrytown.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 22.—The McKennon county grand jury has created a sensation by returning indictments against all the officials of the Standard Oil Co., from John D. Rockefeller down The charge is violation of the anti-trust law of Texas.

Dynamite as Testimony.

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—Forty sticks of dynamite were introduced in the trial of Col. Coit for the Washington Court House militia shooting. They were found near the building showing that the strikers intended to blow up the troops.

Discovered a New Comet.

Boston, Nov. 22.—A telegram to Harvard college observatory from Lowe observatory, California, announces the discovery of a comet by Edward Swift It is faint with a short tail and has a slow easterly motion.

New London Will Have a Contest.

New London, Conn., Nov. 22.—Ex-Mayor Andrew Bentley has served notice of contest upon his successor James Johnson, alleging frauds at the election.

FROM PULPIT TO PRISON.

Rev. Dr. Buck Sentenced to Three Years for Swindling.

Baltimore, Nov. 22.—Solomon T. Buck, for twenty years an Evangelical preacher, has been convicted of receiving money under false pretenses and sentenced to three years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Buck engaged a number of agents last spring to sell a water filter, requiring each to deposit $50 to secure him against loss. He disappeared without settling up with his employes and was captured in Blossburg, Tioga county, Pa., by local detectives.

The prisoner is 56 years old. Until 1876 he was a well known member of the ministry in Pennsylvania, belonging to the Evangelical association. He was a contributor to the religious press and also holds the copyright on a number of illustrated editions of the Lord's prayer and ten commandments, which bring him in a good income. He has a wife and a large family of children.

The minister has considerable literary talent and is now at work on a book which is to be issued under the title of "From the Pulpit to the Penitentiary" as soon as he has served his term.

CRUISE OF THE PORTSMOUTH

The Training Ship at Newport From a Three Month's Voyage.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 22.—The United States training ship Portsmouth has arrived here. Captain McGowan reported a fair voyage. All hands are reported well. Not a man or boy deserted during the cruise. The voyage across was uneventful except that an exhausted falcon came aboard in mid-ocean and died after several days of lingering.

The ship's supply of provisions had become greatly reduced by the long trip, some eighteen days overtime, and there was little left to eat except the more ordinary ship fare, so there were hurried orders sent ashore that a respectable supper might be served.

The ship will probably lie here a week or two and then go on her winter cruise to the West Indies with a new class of apprentices.

The White Czar's Wedding.

London, Nov. 22.—A St. Petersburg correspondent says: There is some talk of a state procession at he czar's wedding. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the wedding day it is believed that the pair will receive the diplomatists, who will present them their new credentials. The Princess Alix's wedding dress is silver brocade, looped with ribbon and marabout feathers, with a train of the same material, cut in empress fashion. The imperial mantle is purple and is lined with ermine. The veil is Brussels lace with orange blossoms and ornaments of pearls and diamonds.

Rioters Tore Up the Railroads.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Nov. 22.—It is reported here that over 300 Italian laborers on the Roaring Creek railroad in Randolph county have torn up the tracks and switches near Wormeldorf. The Italians say they have not been paid for four months. The railroad which is in the hands of a receiver, recently appointed, connects with the West Virginia Central and runs into the coal region.

Anthracite Coal Prices Cut.

New York, Nov. 22.—Anthracite coal prices are being cut at all points on the Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley, and also, it is said, on the Jersey Central. Every shipper to points on railroads touching Philadelphia, is entitled to as good a rate at the mine as that given to Philadelphia, which is $2 on stove coal, $1.90 on chestnut, $1.75 on egg and $1.65 on broken.

Scored Against Princeton.

Orange, N. J. Nov. 22.—The Orange Athletic Club's football team scored against the Princeton University eleven on Orange Oval, the score being Princeton 16, Orange 4. Princeton was evidently overtrained and weak behind the line. She exhausted herself in the first half, and in the second half failed to score. Orange played a hard, steady game.

Five Years at Hamden Park.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 22.—Acting Manager White of the Harvard football team has signed a contract with the Hampden Park owners which gives him an option on the use of the park on any or every Saturday in November for the next five years. This means that the Yale-Harvard games will be played here another five years.

Burned the Jail and Themselves.

Talepuah, I. T., Nov. 22.—The city prison at his place was destroyed by fire last night. Two of the prisoners set the prison fire. They perished in the flames. They were Dr. O. Halloran, a veterinary surgeon from Coffeyville, Kansas, and Bill Downing, a Cherokee.

FLASHES FROM THE WIRES.

Mrs. Chas. C. Wetherill, while handling a revolver at Riverton, N. J., shot and instantly killed herself.

The trial of Jesse C. Hansee, the Hoboken pension agent, accused of accepting illegal fees was postponed at Trenton until January.

John F. Mollard and Christian Schwartz at Paterson, N. J., were sentenced to two years imprisonment each for operating an illicit distillery.

THEY MUST HAVE MONEY

Treasury Officials Need It To Get Income Taxes.

Secretary Carlisle Will Ask Congress To Appropriate $500,000 To Hire Collectors and Clerks and start Bureau Machinery—Millions Will Be Raised—The Bond Sale.

Washington, Nov. 22.—Commissioner Miller, of the internal revenue bureau, is quietly perfecting his arrangements for the execution of the income tax provisions of the tariff law.

It is understood that Secretary Carlisle will ask congress for an immediate appropriation of $500,000 for the employment of additional deputy collectors, etc., for the purpose of putting the machinery for the collection of the income tax into practical operation. The law takes effect Jan. 1 next, but all the machinery for its enforcement must be prepared far in advance of that date.

Mr. Pugh, who is in charge of the income tax division, has prepared the necessary regulations, but will not make them known for several weeks yet, as they are subject to revision The blank returns for individual and corporation incomes have been prepared and will be ready for issue in good season.

Internal revenue collectors who have been figuring on the subject are inclined to the belief that he congressional estimate of the annual tax on incomes at $30,000,000 will be exceeded in the actual returns. They estimate that the amount to be realized from the earnings of corporations will alone reach $40,000,000, and possibly $50,000,000.

Washington, Nov. 22.—As far as the treasury department is informed no gold was withdrawn from the New York sub-treasury yesterday. The gold reserve stands at $57,854,000. Less than $900 in gold has so far been paid this month at New York for custom duties, which duties for twenty days have amounted to $4,701,000—$500,000 in excess of the corresponding period last year.

A mistake was made by Treasurer Jordan Tuesday in transmitting by telegraph the gold withdrawn from the New York sub-treasury. An item of $400,000 was repeated. The gold withdrawn Tuesday was $1,200,00, not $1,600,000 as stated.

New York, Nov. 22.—A good deal was heard in Wall street about a premium on gold, and coming at a time when the government is in the market for the purpose of placing new bonds, the efforts to make a sensation of the matter were severely criticized. The facts in the case are that an intending purchaser of the new bonds as a matter of personal convenience on Tuesday paid one-eighth of one per cent. commission for a small lot of the metal. There is no such thing as a general premium on gold and the transaction noted was an isolated one. The reports of heavy dealings are denied by all the heavy bullion dealers.

NEARLY KILLED A JUSTICE.

Mrs. Keefe and Her Son on the War Path at Hyde Park.

Hyde Park, Mass., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Rhoda V. Keefe entered Justice H. B. Terry's office here with her son James F. Keefe, who asked the judge to give him a warrant for the arrest of some imaginary person.

When the judge refused to comply, Mrs. Keefe raised a monkey wrench, which she had with her and brought it down on the judge's head. Judge Terry jumped out of his chair and ran. Young Keefe then fired two shots from a revolver which passed through Judge Terry's coat tails before he escaped. They next went to police headquarters, and meeting officer Andrew Rooney, who was in charge, fired a shot at him, which just grazed his skull.

Mother and son then started for their home on Davidson street and when the officers reached there they were prepared for a siege. They invited the officers to come into the yard if they dared. James F. Keefe is said to be mentally unbalanced.

CHARGES AGAINST FELLOWS.

Must show Cause Why He Should not Be Removed.

Albany, Nov. 22.—Upon complaint of a committee from New York, Gov. Flower has notified John R. Fellows to show cause why he should not be removed from the office of district attorney of New York county, for neglect of duty. The complaint was made by Preble Tucker, Fulton McMahon, Charles Taber, R. W. G. Welling and Clarence Goadby, representing the good government clubs of New York city, who held a consultation with the governor. The district attorney is given eight days in which to reply to the charges.

Prisons Crowded with Armenians.

London, Nov. 22.—M. Nazarbeck, the Armenian leader and editor of the Hemtchak, has received letters confirming the information laid before Lord Kimberly last week by Mr. G. Hagopian. M. Nazarbeck also says the Turkish prisons at St. Jean de Acre, Angora, Constantinople and elsewhere are now filled with Armenians of the best classes and there is nothing left for the Armenians, he says, but revolt, and that is likely to occur any day.

Murderer Whirley Convicted.

Wilkesbarre, Nov. 22.—Stewart Whirley, twenty years old, the colored boy who shot and killed William Taylor in this city in June last, was convicted of murder in the second degree. His sentence will be for life.

Walton for Speaker.

Williamsport, Pa., Nov. 22.—Republican members of assembly from this county have declared in favor of Hon. H. F. Walton of Philadelphia for speaker of the next house of representatives.

Kimberly Will Not Act.

London, Nov. 22.—Lord Kimberly has refused to receive a deputation of Armenians and to act in the Sassoun massacre.

PAIN BANISHED SLEEP.

A RHEUMATIC TELLS A WONDERFUL STORY.

Less Than Half a Bottle of Munyon's New Remedy Restored Him to Health.

James Buckley, 215 Washington street, Newark, N. J., says: "I have been suffering from rheumatism for a number of years. The pains were exceedingly severe and I could not sleep nights. The remedies I obtained did me little or no good, nor did the doctors whom I consulted. This had gone on, each recurring attack being more painful and prolonged than the previous one. I could not get relief until I commenced taking Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. Less than one-half a bottle drove all the rheumatism out of my system and I am as well and strong as I ever was in my life. I consider the remedy a wonderful one and take pleasure in recommending it."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back are speedily cured.

Munyon's Homoeopathic Home Remedy Co. of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25c. a bottle.

CHARGE FIVE MURDERS

Officials Suspect Holmes of Another Big Crime.

Miss Kate Durkee Disappeared Most Strangely After Dealing With the Arch-Criminal—The Pitezel Children's Suspicious Whereabouts. Many Other Disclosures.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Still another strange disappearance which may end in the disclosure of one more murder is charged to swindler H. H. Holmes. The story is told by telegraph from Chicago. The victim is Kate Durkee, who possessed considerable property.

A year ago creditors of Holmes made a desperate effort to find out who and where Miss Durkee was. It was supposed at that time that she was an accomplice of Holmes and that property illegally obtained was being transferred in her name. Suddenly Kate Durkee dropped from sight and like the Williams sisters, has left no trace behind. George B. Chamberlain, who represents a number of Holmes' creditors, believes Miss Durkee was murdered.

"Kate Durkee," was the name signed to a mortgage on some real estate of considerable value. The mortgage was turned over to Chamberlin for the benefit of creditors. Shortly after the mortgage was given to Holmes at his request to have a clerical error corrected, but the document was never returned. At that time the Misses Williams disappeared and a search for the giver of the mortgage showed that she too, had gone.

Holmes made a confession to the police, detailing the whole plot to rob the insurance company. Lawyer Howe of St. Louis was the schemer. He received the $10,000. Pitezel got $2,000, Howe $2,500, Mrs. Pitezel $500 and Holmes the remainder.

Holmes denies that Pitezel was seen in Chicago. Dispatches from that city also deny the story. Like Poisoner Meyers, he claims that his victim is in South America. He was greatly shocked when informed that he was suspected of the murder of the three Pitezel children. He vehemently denied having harmed them and says that he left them in Detroit, at the house of a Mrs. Burns. He claims not to know the name of the street on which Mrs. Burns lives.

The identity of the "Doctor" from whom Holmes claims to have secured the body that was palmed off for Pitezel is still unsolved. Holmes persists in refusing to disclose who he is. He says that only as a last extremity to save his own neck will he bring him into the meshes of the law.

Holmes gives as one of his reasons for refusing to give the "Doctor's" name that he is supposed to be dead. This doctor, according to Holmes, was recently engaged in a swindling insurance scheme similar to the Pitezel affair and has suppositiously died.

Since Holmes and Mrs. Pitezel have been brought here they have been most jealously guarded. Holmes takes his arrest coolly.

President Fouse had an interview with Mrs. Pitezel. The latter's daughter Meda was present in the cell. The girl declared she believed her father to be alive, and told of a conversation she had with her father in Chicago. He is alleged to have said:

"My daughter, if at any time you should hear that I am dead or that anything very serious has happened to me, do not believe it. I will be safe, no matter what you hear."

The girl had barely finished making this statement when her mother sprang to her feet, and throwing her arms around wildly, exclaimed:

"Such ideas! Such falsehoods. I have never met with as in this affair; and even you, my own child, have deceived me heartlessly and mercilessly!"

As the mother finished she cast a look of scorn on her daughter's cringing figure.

McDonald, the law partner of Howe, reached here from St. Louis last evening. He said Howe had gone to Washington to see Senator Cockrell of Missouri, who is an old friend of his family, to enlist his aid in his difficulty. McDonald admitted that Howe was involved in the case, but claimed he had been entrapped by the crafty Holmes.

PLAN A GREAT TRUST.

Cotton Growers' Scheme to Control All Markets of the World.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 22.—There was a great meeting of cotton growers from all sections of the southern states here to organize an enormous cotton trust to control the markets of the world.

The scheme was formulated by a New York cotton broker, J. T. Rodney, who was here and explained the details. Each producer is, under the arrangement, to contribute one out of every five bales grown, and these are expected to make 1,600,000 bales, annually, valued at $50,000,000. This stock will appreciate prices 25 per cent. by manipulation.

Princeton Harriers' Run.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 22.—The Princeton university harriers had a prize run yesterday which covered a distance of six miles. At one point the course lay across a deep stream. As several students were crossing it on a log, this frail bridge gave way and anumber of students were immersed in the cold water beneath. Hanlon, '96, who ran as one of the "hares," gained eight minutes on his pursuers, and was awarded the prize.

Cannot Build Their Railroad.

Albany, Nov. 22.—The state board of railroad commissioners gave a decision denying the application of the Amsterdam, Johnstown & Gloversville road asking for authority to build its proposed line.

Electric-Cars in Collision.

Pittsburg, Nov. 22.—In a collision between an electric and a cable car on the Wylie Avenue line five persons were injured, one of whom, Mrs. C. H. Jones, may die.

Swept by Typhoid Fever.

Kingston, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Hickory Bush, four miles from here, is suffering from a typhoid fever epidemic. Sixty cases and fifteen deaths are reported.

DETAILS OF THE EARTHQUAKE.

The Homes of Twenty-Eight Thousand Were Destroyed.

Rome, Nov. 22.—News from the districts shaken by the recent earthquakes comes in slowly. Thirty-eight villages suffered severely. San Procopio, Oppido Mamertnio, Scilla and Palma, all in Reggio di Calabria and with a total population of some 28,000, are little more than heaps of ruins.

Many destitute families from the ruined towns are pillaging the damaged shops and houses. Troops have been posted throughout the unfortunate districts to protect property.

The total damage is estimated now as nearly 7,000,000 lire. The collection of taxes has been suspended in most districts of Reggio di Calabria.

The volcano on Stromboli island is in full eruption and Etna and Vesuvius are active. In Linguaglossa, near Etna, a schoolhouse was shaken to the ground. The sixty occupants were rescued alive, although many of them were injured severely.

COLLIDED HEAD ON.

Disastrous Railroad Accident at Oxford Station, Mass.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 22.—Two passenger trains on the N. Y. & N. E. railroad collided on the main track about a quarter of a mile from Oxford station last night. The train going south had orders to pass the northbound train on the siding at Oxford, but through a misunderstanding was on the main track when the train from Norwich came along at twenty-five miles an hour.

Baggageman Charles Wilcox of the waiting train tried to turn the switch and throw the on-coming train on the siding but failed. The engines were locked and badly smashed and both mail cars were telescoped.

The injured are: Thomas F. Curran, fireman; Albert A. Walker, Norwich, engineer; Charles G. Davis, Worcester, engineer, and Samuel Jonakowski of Chicopee.

The train came near striking a freight train near Webster, running on the main track instead of a siding as ordered, in exactly the same way as occasioned the accident at Oxford.

READY TO DEBATE.

Princeton Fixes the Date for the Contest With Harvard.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 22.—It has been decided to hold a public debate between Princeton and Harvard, at Princeton, on March 1, 1895. Princeton was in favor of second speeches for the purpose of rebuttal, but Harvard preferred that each speaker be allowed but one speach. A compromise was affected, and after a twelve minute speach by each speaker twelve minutes will be allowed each side to use as they see fit. Similar arrangements are expected to be made with Yale.

Orders for Russian Ships.

New York, Nov. 22.—The most sensational report of the week in iron circles is that relating to the placing of an order for three armored cruisers by the Russian government. The reports have it that the Cramps have captured the work and that the Bethlehem Iron company have secured the orders for the armor. Stories are also afloat about the 10,000ton cast pipe order for the Tokio water works. The mattter is still in abeyance. The first order for 10,000tons of heavy pipe for these works was taken b Scotch founders. American shops can certainly beat them in spite of somewhat higher rates of freight.

Naugatuck Railroad Officials.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 22.—The annual meeting of stockholders of the Naugatuck railroad elected these directors: W. D. Bishop, S. S. Denis, A. Heaton Robertson, R. M. Bassett, F J. Kingsbury, Joel Sperry, J. M. Hall, C. F. Brooker, W. D. Bishop, jr. The directors elected W. D. Bishop president and secretary, and W. L. Squires of New Haven treasurer.

Both Committed Suicide.

Pittsburg, Nov. 22.—Probably from remorse Conrad Springer, a butcher, committed suicide in Homewood cemetery at he grave of his wife by shooting himself through the head. His wife committed suicide several weeks ago by taking paris green on account of the ill-treatment of her husband. This probably drove Springer to his deed.

Shot Himself on the L.

New York, Nov. 22.—Eugene Shilseng, a Frenchman, 50 years old, of Rutherford, N. J., shot himself three times on the downtown Twenty-eighth street station of the Sixth Avenue Elevated railway. The wounds will probably prove fatal. He was taken to the New York hospital.

Killed in a Gymnasium.

Boston, Nov. 22.—Frank Godfrey, assistant instructor at the Young Men's Christian association gymnasium while attempting a double somersault, fell and broke his neck, dying almost instantly.

No Hope for Miss Stevenson.

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 22.—Miss Mary L. Stevenson, daughter of the vice-president, is no better to-day. Hope of her ultimate recovery has been about given up.

Indian Territory Commissioners Make a Report.

Congress Advised To Open Millions of Acres for White Settlers—Indians Refuse To Improve Property or Treat for Disposal of It—Abuses and Wholesale Crime.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The Indian Territory commission has made a report upon the conditions of things in that unique community which may cause the government to abrogate existing treaties. If that is done millions of the finest lands in the world will be taken from the Indians and turned over to white settlers.

The commission consists of ex-Senator Henry L. Dawes of Massachusetts, Meredith P. Kidd of Indiana and Archibald S. McKennon of Arkansas.

They went to the Indian Territory early in the present year and in February addressed a convention of all the civilized tribes except the Seminoles, explaining fully the policy of the government and the reasons for desiring a change.

At first a strong inclination was manifested toward taking steps looking to negotiations, but dispatches from Washington, representing that the government would hold to the treaty provisions and make no change unless they desired it, resulted in the adoption of resolutions to resist any change and to decline to negotiate.

Propositions were made during the summer by the commission to divide all lands among the Indians, except town sites and coal and mineral deposits, which were to be sold and the proceeds divided among the people. Each citizen was to receive sufficient land for a good home and all intruders were to be removed.

Congress was to form a territorial government. An answer to these propositions was requested by the 1st of October but no answers were received then or since then. The Cherokee council alone asked further time.

Shrewd whites, through intermarriage with the Indians have obtained valuable lands for pasturage and cultivation in violation of the agreements with the United States and some of these have secured from thirty to sixty thousand acres. In one tribe with a total territory of 3,040,000 acres, sixty-one citizens have enclosed and hold 1,237,000 acres, more than a third of the property belonging to 14,632 citizens.

The influx of white citizens and the failure of the tribal governments to enforce and observe the treaty stipulations for the protection of citizens, and the lamentable corruption of these governments in all their branches have brought the commission to the conclusion that it is impossible to enforce the executory provisions of the treaties.

All the functions of the tribal governments, the members of the commission say, have become powerless to protect the life and property of the citizen. The courts of justice have become helpless and paralyzed. Violence, robbery and murder are almost of daily occurrence, and no effective measures of restraint or punishment are put forth to suppress crime. Railroad trains are stopped and their passengers robbed within a few miles of populous towns. "A reign of terror exists," the commission adds, "and barbarous outrages almost impossible of belief are enacted and their perpetrators hardly find it necessary to shun daily intercourse with their victims."

The commission heard that fifty-three murders occurred in one of the tribes in September and October, and no one was brought to justice. The tribal governments, they contend, have fallen into the hands of cunning politicians, while the real Indians have little to do in their management.

The report closes with a recomendation that action be taken at once. The matter will come up at the next session of congress.

THEIR CONFERENCE ENDED.

The Christian Temperance Union Meeting Over.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 22.—The W. C. T. U. convention was brought to a close with a meeting in Music hall, under the auspices of the federated unions of this city. Speeches were made by Madam Barakak of Syria, Helen M. Barker, Chicago; Miss Ackermann, Australia; Madam Chika Sakarai, Japan; Mrs. Lida Merriweather, Pennsylvania, and Susan B. Anthony. The convention has been the most successful in the history of the union.

Next year's convention will be probably be held in Baltimore, although Kansas City is a formidable applicant. The decision rests with the executive committee.

Resolutions were adopted protesting against dancing, football, theatregoing and many other amusements. Kentucky women were congratulated for defeating Breckinridge and declared in favor of woman suffrage.

Yale's Last Practice Game.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 22.—Captain Hinkey's band of football braves went in yesterday for secret practice with a vengeance and the general public was rigorously excluded from the field. The coachers ran the eleven through the signals for the last time against the second team and perfected the traps into which Harvard is expected to drop, easy game, on Saturday.

Will Nominate a Senator.

Lockport, N. Y., Nov. 22.—A people's party convention will be held Saturday at Geneva to nominate a senator for the twenty-sixth district.

Johnson Breaks the Record.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 22.—John S. Johnson, the bicycle rider, broke the world's flying start record here, going a mile in 1:47 3-5.

John L. Sullivan Alive.

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—The report that John L. Sullivan died in Pennsylvania is false. He is at Trinway, O., in good health.

Mrs. Miller Acquitted.

Fonda, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, on trial for murdering an infant of her unmarried daughter, has been acquitted

"DANGEROUS HEALTH."

One of Oliver Wendell Holmes' Happy Phrases.

THE GREAT POET APPLIED IT TO WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

The Boston Herald Says It Fits the Case of a Great Many People.

In a recent editorial, the Boston Herald, in speaking of our great poet, Oliver Wendell Holmes' happy phrase applied to William Cullen Bryant at the recent commemoration of the latter's birthday, says: "Dangerously good health, fits the case of a great many people, young and old, who trust to their strong constitutions, and wear themselves out before they know it. This accounts for the fact that so many people in robust health are cut down, while those who are less vigorous live on by recognizing their own weakness."

No words are truer.

The sick, as a rule, take care of themselves and know enough to use medicine when necessary. It is the person in robust health, who, by overwork, strain upon the nerves, or dissipation, gets just a little out of order, has headaches, becomes nervous and irritable, is unable to sleep well, and wakes tired mornings, with dull-feeling head, constipation, no appetite for breakfast, and a general feeling of lassitude, weakness, and lack of ambition to take hold of work, who is in a dangerous way. Such a person has presumed upon a good conssitution, and undermined the health. The right medicine must be had and taken at once or the apparently trivial symptoms will quickly result in utter breaking down.

A well-known lady, Mrs. F. E. Morgan, who resides at 177 Austin street, Worcester, Mass., give a wonderful experience and some most valuable advice.

MRS. F. E. MORGAN.

"My nerves were so weak, and I was so very nervous, that I could not sleep nights. I would get up in the morning feeling so weak and tired, with loss of appetite and constipation of the bowels.

"I gradually grew worse until life almost seemed a burden, and at last I had nervous prostration. My nerves were in a terrible condition. I felt too bad for anything, had no strength and no ambition.

"My sister advised me to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I did so. After taking four bottles, I am happy to say that all my troubles disappeared, and I cannot say enough of this wonderful medicine.

"I have lots of friends who can also testify to its great merits. It therefore behooves all who are not feeling well, or who are run down in health, in fact, all who are out of order in any way, to use this grand medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy at once. It will make you well and strong."

It is not a patent medicine, but the discovery and prescription of the well-known Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th St., New York City, the most sucessful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted by all without charge, personally, or by letter.

CHAPTER VII.—CONCLUDED.

Three hours and a half later they reappeared. The lawn was as silent as when they had left it, though the sleep of things had weakened down to a certain precarious slightness; and round the corner of the house a low line of light showed the dawn.

"Now, good-by, dear," said her husband, lightly. "You'll let him know at once?"

"Of course."

"And send to me directly after?"

"Yes."

"And now for my walk across the fields to the hotel. These boots are thin, but I know the old way well enough. By Jove, I wonder what Melanie—"

"Who?"

"Oh—what Melanie will think, I was going to say. It slipped out. I didn't mean to hurt your feelings at all."

"Melanie—who is she?"

"Well—she's a French lady. You know, of course, Rosalys, that I thought you were perhaps dead—and—so this lady passes as Mrs. Durrant."

Rosalys started.

"In fact, I found her in the east, and took pity upon her—that's all. Though if it had happened that you had not been living now I have got back, I should have married her at once, of course."

"Is—she, then, here with you at the hotel?"

"O no—I wouldn't bring her on here till I knew how things were."

"Then where is she?"

"I left her at my rooms in London. O, it will be all right—I shall see her safely back to Paris, and make a little provision for her. Nobody in England knows anything of her existence."

"When—did you part from her?"

"Well, of course, at breakfast time."

Rosalys bowed herself against the doorway. "O—O—what have I done? What a fool, what a weak fool!" she moaned. "Go away from me—go away!"

Jim was almost distressed when he saw the distortion of her agonized face.

"Now, why should you take on like this! There's nothing in it. People do these things. Living in a prim society here you don't know how the world goes on!"

"O, but to think it didn't occur to me that the sort of man—"

Jim, though anxious, seemed to awaken to something humorous in the situation, and vented a momentary chuckle. "Well, it is rather funny that I should have let it out. But still—"

"Don't make a deep wrong deeper by cruel levity. Go away!"

"You'll be in a better mood to-morrow, mark me; and then I'll tell you all my history. There—I'm gone! Au revoir."

He disappeared under the trees. Rosalys, rousing herself, closed the gate and fastened the door, and sat down in one of the hall chairs, her teeth shut tight and her little hands clenched. When she had passed this mood, and returned upstairs, she regarded the state of her room sadly, and bent again over her writing-table, murmuring: "O how weak, how weak was I!"

But in a few minutes she found herself nerved to an unexpected and passionate vigor of action, and began writing her letter to Lord Parkhurst with great rapidity. Sheet after sheet she filled, and, having read them over, she sealed up the letter and placed it on the mantelpiece to be given to a groom and dispatched by hand as soon as the morning was a little further advanced.

With cold feet and a burning head she flung herself upon the bed just as she was, and waited for the day without the power to sleep. When she had lain nearly two hours, and the morning had crept in, and she could hear from the direction of the stables that the men were astir, she rang for her maid, and taking the letter in her hand stood with it in an attitude of suspense as the woman entered. The latter looked full of intelligence.

"Are any of the men about?" asked Rosalys.

"Yes, ma'am. There have been such an accident in the Meads this past night—about half a mile down the river—and Jones ran up from the lodge to call for help quite early; and Benton and Peters went as soon as they were dressed. A gentleman drowned—yes—it's Mr. James Durrant—the son of the Mr. Durrant who died some years ago. He came home only yesterday, after having been heard nothing of for years and years. He left Mrs. Durrant, who they say is a French lady, somewhere in London, but they have telegraphed and found her, and she's coming. They say she's quite distracted. The poor gentleman left the Three Lions last night and went out to dinner, saying he would walk home, as it was a fine night and not very far; and it is supposed he took the old short cut across the moor where there used to be a path when he was a lad at home, crossing the big river by a plank. There is only a rail now, and he must have tried to get across upon it, for it was broken in two, and his body found in the water-weeds just below."

"Is he—dead?"

"O yes. They had a great trouble to get him out. The men have just come from carrying him to the hotel. It will be sad for his poor wife when she gets there."

"His poor wife—yes."

"Traveling all the way from London on such a call!"

Rosalys had allowed the hand in which she held the letter to Lord Parkhurst to drop to her side; she now put it in the pocket of her dressing-gown.

"I was wishing to send somewhere," she said. "But I think I will wait till later."

The house was bestir betimes on account of the wedding, and Rosalys' companion in particular, who was not sad because she was going to live on with the bride. When Miss Jennings saw her cousin's agitation she said she looked ill, and insisted upon sending for the doctor. He, who was the local practitioner, arrived at breakfast time: very proud to attend such an important lady who mostly got doctored in London. He said Rosalys certainly was not quite in her usual state of health; prescribed a tonic, and declared that she would be all right in an hour or two. He then informed her that he had been suddenly called upon that morning in the case of which they had possibly heard—the drowning of Mr. Durrant.

"And you could do nothing?" asked Rosalys.

"O no. He'd been under water too long for any human aid. Dead and stiff. * * * * It was not so very far down from here. * * * * Yes, I remember him quite as a boy. But he has had no relations hereabout for years past—old Durrant's property was sold, if you recollect; and nobody expected to see the son again. I think he has lived in the East Indies a good deal. Much better for him if he had not come—poor fellow."

When the doctor had left, Rosalys went to the window, and remained for some time thinking. There was the lake from which the water had flowed down the river that had drowned Jim after visiting her last night—as a mere interlude in his continuous life of caresses with the Frenchwoman Melanie. She turned, took from her dressing-gown pocket the renunciatory letter to her intended husband, Lord Parkhurst, thrust it through the bars of the grate, and watched it till it was entirely consumed.

The wedding had been fixed for an early hour in the afternoon, and as the morning wore on Rosalys felt increasing strength, mental and physical. The doctor's dose had been a powerful one; the image of "Melanie," too, had much to do with her recuperative mood; more still Rosalys' innate qualities; the nerve of the woman who nine years earlier had gone to the city to be married as if it were a mere shopping expedition; most of all she loved Lord Parkhurst; he was the man among all men she desired. Rosalys allowed things to take their course.

Soon the dressing began; and she sat through it quite calmly. When Lord Parkhurst rode across for a short visit that day he only noticed that she seemed strung-up, nervous, and that the flush of love which mantled her cheek died away to pale rather quickly.

On the way to church the road skirted the low-lying ground where the river was, and about a dozen men were seen in the bright-green meadow, standing beside the deep central stream, and looking intently at a broken rail.

"Who are those men?" said the bride.

"Oh—they are the coroner's jury, I think," said Miss Jennings, "come to view the place where the unfortunate Mr. Durrant lost his life last night. It was curious that, by the merest accident, he should have been at Mrs. Lacy's dinner—since they hardly knew him at all."

"It was—I saw him there," said Rosalys.

Ten minutes later she was kneeling against the altar railings, with Lord Parkhurst on her right hand.

The wedding was by no means a gay one, and there were few people invited, Rosalys, for one thing, having hardly any relations. The newly united pair got away from the house very soon after the ceremony. When they drove off there was a group of people round the door, and some among the bystanders asked how far they were going that day.

"To Dover. They cross the channel to-morrow, I believe."

To-morrow came, and those who had gathered together at the wedding went about their usual duties and amusements, Col. Lacy among the rest. As he and his wife were returning home by the late afternoon train after a short journey up the line, he bought a copy of an evening paper and glanced at the latest telegrams.

"My good God!" he cried.

"What?" said she, starting towards him.

He tried to read—then handed her the paper; and she read for herself:

"DOVER—DEATH OF LORD PARKHURST, R. N.

"We regret to announce that this distinguished nobleman and heroic naval officer, who arrived with Lady Parkhurst last evening at the Lord Chamberlain hotel in this town, preparatory to starting on their wedding-tour, entered his dressing room very early this morning and shot himself through the head with a revolver. The report was heard shortly after dawn, none of the inmates of the hotel being astir at the time. No reason can be assigned for the rash act."

[THE END.]

Anyone who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup I give it to them and that is the last of it." 25 and 50 cents bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy. T. S. St. Nicholas,
For Young Folks.
In 1895.
EDITED BY MARY MAPES DODGE.
The greatest year in the history of this magazine, now without a rival in its field, is the one just closing. Plans for the coming year assure even greater success than in the past.
Rudyard Kipling
wrote his famous "JUNGLE STORIES" for St Nicholas, and it is a welcome announcement that these will be continued in 1895.
NAPOLEON
FOR YOUNG READERS.
While The Century will have for its leading feature the new life of the French Emperor by Prof. Sloane, one of the most popular of St. Nicholas writers takes the same character for his inspiration.
A Boy of the First Empire,
BY ELBRIDGE S. BROOKS,
is the story of a little lad from the streets of Paris (but of good family), who renders a service to Napoleon, and becomes one of his pages and finally an aide. He is with him at the most critical times of his life,—at the departure for Elba, in the glories of the life at Fontainebleau, and finally at Waterloo. The story glows with pageantry, and is a truthful and accurate account based upon the best authorities and verified by the latest information, of the life of "the man of destiny." It is really a delightful story-history of Napoleon.
WEST POINT
And Man-of-War Life
will receive attention, Lieutenant Putnam writing of cadet life at the military academy, while Ensign Ellicott, of the flag-ship "Chicago," will describe the experiences of our hardy seamen on the modern ships of war.
Inspiring Tales
FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.
Theodore Roosevelt will write a series to be called "Hero-Tales from American History," recounting famous deeds of heroism about which young people ought to know. Prof. Brander Matthews will include in his entertaining papers on "The Great American Authors" accounts of the lives of Bryant, Emerson, Longfellow, Hawthorne, Whittier, Poe and Lowell. Stories of famous horses in history and mythology—Bucephalus, Napoleon's and Sheridan's etc. will be told by James Baldwin, author of "Stories from the Northern Myths." City Fire Departments will be treated, and there will be two or three papers on The Boys' Brigade. The serial stories are many. One called "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," recounts the marvelous adventures of a modern boy who became the accidental purchaser of Aladdin's lamp and summoned the jinn while cleaning it. A delightful story of college girls, "The Three Freshmen" will appeal to every girl; and "Teddy and Carrots," James Otis's serial of newsboy life, will be read by every boy. A serial story by Frances Courtenay Baylor is one of the features.
Price of St. Nicholas is 25 cents a number or $3.00 a year. New subscriptions should begin with November, the first issue of the year. Subscribe through dealers, or remit by check, draft, or money-order to

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1894. TWO CENTS A COPY. $5 A YEAR.

BRILLIANT ARRAY.

HOLY CROSS BROTHERHOOD AGAIN DELIGHTS THE TOWN.

Local Talent Distinguishes Itself in a Splendid Programme of Mirth and Melody.

It is seldom that the efforts of the Holy Cross Brotherhood in the show line are not rewarded by an appreciative and good-sized audience, and last night's entertainment was no exception to the general rule. Those who had come to the parish house to be amused were not disappointed, as the programme provided by North Plainfield's united talent was good enough for anybody and kept the audience busily engaged in laughing and applauding.

The programme, which was printed in last night's Press, will not be repeated here, owing to lack of space. Most of the music of the evening was furnished by the talented Western family who were heard in various pleasing selections; George Hoskings sung Molloy's charming song "Tomorrow will be Friday" and the Brotherhood Quartette was heard in two selections. Miss Euretta M. Hall and Harry M. Western played a piano duet, the "Favorite" Galop.

The musical feature of the evening was Arthur Barney Horton's playing. He played Carl Bohm's Impromptu Mazourka with taste and finish and for an encore played Nevins' "Narcissus".

The silhouette play, "The Love of Mary Jane", was very well done and proved as amusing as ever. Benjamin was particularly good and so was Lord Mortimer. The accessories in the shape of the lark, the cow and the sun evoked rounds of applause.

But why did they leave out the fate of Lord Mortimer?

Alas for poor Lord Mortimer
Of love the luckless dupe,
He sold out all his title deeds
And joined a circus troupe.

The play seems incomplete without this tag.

The "Charge of The Light Brigade, done into a series of beautiful living pictures by a sextet of accomplished artists", was quite the most amusing piece of buffoonery that has been seen in Plainfield in many a day. The sight of six white robed and white capped individuals, each representing 100 cavalrymen, one supposes, prancing about on brooms and brandishing tin swords in pantomime, while the stirring verses were read in sonorous tones by William L. Saunders, sent the audience off into wild bursts of laughter. They were obliged to repeat the programme.

The "Telegraph Blank", one of George Taggart's adaptations, was well received, and Miss Jennette Bryan, Miss Blanche Miller and Howard Spencer acquitted themselves well. George Taggart was as usual inimitable and carried the burden of the farce on his shoulders. His reading of Mr. Cooke's verses "The Young Man Sat and Waited" provoked much laughter, and the burlesque society drama and cable car pantomine which were reproduced by permission of DeWolf Hopper were most excellently done.

It is only in rare cases that wit and energy go hand in hand as in these entertainments and North Plainfield is fortunate in having such a supply of talent to draw upon.

NATIONAL FESTIVITIES.

The Sale of Tickets Will Be Limited to the Actual Seating Capacity.

The National Festivities of the Y. M. C. A. Fair, to be held next week, are composed and arranged by Miss Margaret Mac L. Eager of New York, and their copyright is secured. In the festivities of Venice will be processions of peasant girls and gondoliers, drills and a gondola song. The festivities of Sweden will represent a Delecarlian wedding procession, peasant festivities led by the bride and groom, tableau and a folk song. The festivities of Hungary will consist of tambourine drills by gypsies, tableau and bolero song. Seats for these entertainments, at 50 cents each, are on sale at Reynolds's drug store. The seating capacity of the hall is limited to 325, and only this number of chairs will be sold for any evening. There will be standing-room for a small number at 25 cents each.

School Trustees Renominated on Conditions.

BOUND TO STAND BY SENATE 51.

Republican Delegates Recognize the Need of Restraining the Board, and Endorse Exactly What The Daily Press Has Claimed—Mayor Gilbert and Treasurer Titsworth Renominated, But Assessor Hubbard Turned Down for J. F. MacDonald—Strong Talk of a Citizens Ticket with Hubbard on It.

The Republican City Convention was called to order in Republican Headquarters last night by ex-Judge W. R. Codington, Chairman of the City Executive Committee. E. R. Pope was made chairman and C. A. Baynon secretary. E. E. Anthony officiated as judge of election, and J. A. Karet and W. R. Codington as inspectors. The delegates as appointed at the primaries submitted their credentials, with L. M. Dunavan substituted for R. F. R. Hunteman, R. F. Murray for H. M. Stockton, Andrew McArdle for John Adelman, and Wm. Newcorn for Henry Gracely.

Nominations being immediately proceeded with, the Third Ward through J. W. Murray, Jr., named Alexander Gilbert for Mayor, Mr. Murray expressing great pleasure at the honor. The secretary cast the ballot amid applause.

For Assessor E. E. Anthony nominated J. Fred MacDonald, stating him to be one of the oldest residents though young in years, a man familiar with real estate values, and upright and honorable.

J. W. Murray, Jr., for the Third Ward nominated J. A. Hubbard.

Elias Pope said that the First Ward already had three of the best paying city officers, City Clerk, Street Commissioner and City Collector, and if they were given another they would have practically all.

The ballot showed 15 votes for MacDonald, 11 for Hubbard. MacDonald's nomination was then made unanimous.

Stephen Cahoone nominated Alexander Titsworth for City Treasurer. Wm. Westphal for the Fourth Ward said he had intended nominating Wm. Newcorn but that he declined to run. The nomination of Mr. Titsworth was therefore made by the secretary casting the ballot.

For Commissioners of Appeal Wm. C. Ayers and Joseph B. Coward were nominated.

Coming to the nomination for School Trustees, Mr. Pope said he had been asked to present the following resolutions:

Resolved, That this convention hereby endorses Senate Bill No. 51, restraining the power of the School Board to create public indebtedness without the consent of the Common Council.

Resolved, That it is our opinion that the said bill was passed in the interest of good government, is in accord with the general sentiment of the community, and in no wise reflects on the character or administrative capacity of the School Board.

Resolved, That in our judgment the School Board and the Common Council should cordially co-operate to promote the growth and development of our public school system and to maintain its present high state of excellence.

Augustus Frazee asked what ward the resolutions came from.

"No ward"—said Mr. Pope.—"They are general."

L. M. Dunavan moved they be received and filed.

Wm. Newcorn protested against such frivolous disposition of the resolutions, and as an amendment moved that the resolutions be adopted.

The amendment prevailed, by the vote of 15 to 5. On the motion to adopt the motion as amended there was only one vote against.

E. E. Anthony nominated J. B. Probasco for school trustee for 5 years. The secretary cast the ballot.

Leander N. Lovell was similarly nominated for school trustee for 3 years.

W. T. Kirk, Seaman Williams and Wm. Newcorn were appointed a committee to fill vacancies, and the convention adjourned.

Elias Pope and ex-Judge Codington were asked if they considered the resolutions binding on the nominees for school trustees. They said emphatically yes, and added that no one could honorably run on the Republican ticket for school trustee without abiding by the platform thus stated.

The resolutions expressed exactly what The Daily Press has all along voiced as the sentiments of the people.

Much indignation is expressed among many Republicans over the defeat of Mr. Hubbard, and an effort is being made to run him for assessor on a citizens ticket, with opponents to Dr. Probasco and Mr. Lovell for school trustees.

In that event Mr. MacDonald's friends threaten to run a citizens candidate for Mayor on a third ticket.

THE BOYS COOKED IT.

And All Ate and Said 'Twas a Mighty Good Supper.

The young men of Warren Chapel acquitted themselves in a highly creditable manner last evening, when they presented an excellent entertainment which was followed by an old-fashioned supper.

The novel part of the affair, and that which attracted the very large number of people, was the fact that it was given entirely by the young men, even to the baking of the pumpkin pies, the buckwheat cakes, and the making of the coffee.

In opening Rev. Mr. McKelvey, pastor, said that he had been asked to assist by announcing the numbers on the programme, and he was very happy to do so. He read the different numbers saying, however, that he wanted to enjoy the entertainment by sitting with the audience.

Horace J. Martin was introduced, and delighted everyone with a pleasing vocal solo.

This was followed by a dialogue of much interest entitled "Wanted, a Confidential Clerk". The parts were all well taken. George Watts as the lawyer, in want of the clerk, made an excellent exponent of Blackstone; and his office assistant, Frank Splane, as the Irishmen, caused lots of fun with his comical sayings. The various applicants for the advertised position increased the laughter and applause. A. R. Johnson, Charles Hummer, Victor Christoffersen and James Bolmer, were the applicants. Bolmer secured the position, being the choice of the lawyer. Another excellent solo by Mr. Martin concluded the enterainment. Rev. Mr. McKelvey announced that the young men were ready to serve all with supper. Those present accepted the invitation, and for the small sum of ten cents each received three cakes, a piece of pumpkin pie, and a cup of coffee. Everything was first-class, and all testified to its excellence.

The young men deserve great praise for their efforts, and a good sum will be realized therefrom.

Those who had charge were Henry Seader, Frank Splane, A. R. Johnson, George Watts, James Bolmer, and George Wilson.

JACK WAS THERE.

And His New German Costume and Story Were Very Fetching.

The Home Missionary Society of Grace M. E. Church gave a tea at the home of Mrs. John H. Carney, 40 Craig place, last evening. The attendance was not as large as usual at these events, but a most delightful evening was spent. The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss May Conroy, which indeed showed careful training and was heartily received. A soprano solo by Miss Maggie Schuck was nicely rendered, and John H. Carney made his first appearance in his Lutzingburg costume, bought expressly for him a few weeks ago by a friend from Germany; and as usual John was in his element and fully equal to the occasion. His original story of being waylaid opposite the Harrison Lane Schoolhouse "last night before last", kept all in roars of laughter. The balance of the evening was spent in playing games, in which all took part. Miss Nellie Valliant, Miss Tena Voehl and Miss Addie Carney were the fair waitresses, and did their part to perfection. It was pronounced by one and all a decided success.

Resolutions of Condolence on the Death of Patrick Kenney.

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call our friend and brother Patrick Kenney, be it

Resolved, That while we, the members of St. Mary's T. A. B. Association, bow in humble submission to His Divine Will, we, with tender hearts, extend to the bereaved family of our departed friend and brother our deepest sympathy for their great loss, that of a loving father.

Resolved, That these resolutions be placed upon the minute book of our association, a copy engrossed and sent to the bereaved family, and published in The Daily Press.

A Deserving Appointment.

Charles I. Young of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., received the appointment of District Deputy for the term of one year, yesterday. Mr. Young is one of the hardest workers in the council and when the members through the district meet him they will feel assured that he is just the man for the place.

At the meeting of Franklin last evening the fair committee made their official report which showed that $153.16 had been realized from the same. Initiation was deferred for two weeks, on account of a holiday next week.

Where to Send Them.

The Venetian Booth at the Y. M. C. A. Festival of Nations will have the charge and sale of embroideries and fancy work. Contributors of such articles are requested to send them to Mrs. John Gray Foster, 91 Mercer avenue or Miss Ida Yerkes, 455 West Seventh street.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR MUSICALE.

Seventh-Day Baptist Young People Provide a Treat for Their Friends.

That enterprising company of young people, the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, entertained their friends last night in the church parlors with an evening of music and song. A large and appreciative audience was present and heartily applauded each selection. The entertainment was for the benefit of the piano fund, and small envelopes were handed out with the programmes to be returned at the end of the evening with the contribution of the holder.

The opening selection was the famous overture to William Tell and was finely rendered by the Misses Mabel Potter and Elizabeth Titsworth at the piano and A. L. Titsworth at the organ.

The next number on the programme was a vocal solo, "Lock Lomond", by Walter L. McIlroy of New York, whose fine tenor voice so delighted his hearers that he was forced to give an encore One of DeKoven's famous lullabies, the "Winter Lullaby", was his choice and he sang it with equal effect.

A piano solo by Miss Mabel Maxson, one of Plainfield's most accomplished pianists, followed, after which Miss Mabel Potter, accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Titsworth on the piano and Miss Violet Truell on the violin, sang "Protestations". Miss Potter's voice harmonized very well with the two instruments, and the selection formed one of the most delightful of the evening.

A selection "Sleep Well" by a male quartette, composed of George S. Stevens, W. L. McIlroy, A. L. Titsworth and D. E. Titsworth completed the first part.

The second part commenced with a piano duet, very effectively rendered by Miss Mabel Maxson and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth. Another vocal solo by Mr. McIlroy was the next selection, and was followed by a violin solo "Cavatina" by that skilled violinist, Miss Violet Truell, who completely captivated her audience with her skilful touch and graceful manipulation of the bow.

Ater "The New Kingdom" sung by Miss Nan Randolph, the male quartette concluded the evening's entertainment with "I Love My Love in the Morning" but in response to continued applause, they rendered a humorous selection entitled "I'm Off" as an encore.

After the conclusion of the musicale the audience passed out leaving their envelopes in the baskets ready to receive them and commenting on the great success of the entertainment.

The committee in charge Miss Elizabeth Titsworth, Mrs. J. G. Miller, Miss Ida Randolph and Robert Randolph deserve great credit for this splendid programme they provided and the complete manner in which every detail was arranged.

SWINDLED BY A CHECK.

Mr. Dunham Loses Hard Cash Through His Goodness of Heart.

A man having the appearance, by his dress, of a farmer, visited several merchants in town during the early part of last evening attempting to get a check cashed.

He was modest in his manner and bore the appearance of an honest man, although several men were seen before he succeeded in his object.

The check was on the First National Bank, No. 371, dated Nov. 22, payable to R. W. Davis for $8.75, and signed by J. W. VanSickle.

He said to the various persons he met that he lived just out of town, and that he was in habit of selling the meat to Mr. VanSickle, and the latter not having the change yesterday, gave him the check. He was anxious to get home and was in need of the money. One place he called at was "Ted" Dunn's on North avenue. Ted told him he never cashed checks for anyone, and therefore refused.

He went next door and saw Randolph Dunham, and told him such a plausible story that Mr. Dunham departed from his old custom and gave the man $8.75.

The man put his name on the back of the check, and Mr. Dunham wrote his.

The latter went to the bank this morning and presented his check, whereupon he was told that it was a forged one. Mr. Dunham will therefore lose the money.

Mr. Van Sickle has his name stamped on his checks and they number very high, making it of course a forged note.

The fellow got away and has not been seen since.

DANGER SCENTED.

The Sewerage Situation Caustically Discused.

REMINDER OF FORMER CONTRACTS.

Singular Policy of Delay in the Covering-Up of Pipe and Restoring of Streets—Possibility of a Scheme Suggested and Promptly Scouted — What Will the New Council Do?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—The claim has been made by the contractors of the sewerage system that they are unable to secure pipe in quantities sufficient to enable them to proceed with the work in hand with reasonable expedition.

Such a claim for a time seemed plausible enough to allay the suspicions of the general public, but as time passes we find that they have not even covered up the pipe they have laid, or repaired the streets so as to make them even passable where they have covered up pipe.

This morning the writer discovered one man at work upon a stretch of something over two blocks of unfinished work, and in other places at various times he has found a limited number of men at work, where four or five times that number could be used to advantage. Can it be possible that the action of these contractors is but a part of a scheme to carry the work over into the hands of the new Council, who seeming to become disgusted with the plan of having the city construct and own its sewers, etc., will fall an easy prey to the blandishments of parties offering to take the matter off their hands either upon a contract (or its equivelant) which will practically give them the control of the sewers as well as the water for a term of years?

The writer would not be thought guilty of even suspecting that the Water Company or its friends could possibly have in mind any such scheme, but realizes that parties equal to such an undertaking could be found in Union county, and trusts that no one will rush into print for the purpose of denying such a possibility. Of course the sewers cannot be finished this season, and now that the Street Committee has been renominated, would it be asking too much of them to see to it that what little time the contractors give to the subject of sewers be confined to the streets they have already torn up, instead of leaving them for other streets as yet unmolested. If their present methods are evidences of great strategic ability, it is suggested that the display of such ability would bring more pronounced results if they would attack Seventh and Eighth streets, between Park and Plainfield avenues, instead of the more humble localities to which they are now giving their attention, notwithstanding the fact that there one-half voters to the square foot. As experienced contractors they ought to know by this time that is "pull" (not votes) that counts after election. Oh, how simple we sinners are! Oh, for a bag to put these chestnuts in!

Will the new Council deal as leniently with the sewer contractors and their bondsmen as the new Council of 1890 dealt with the Electric Light Company for previous shortcomings and failures in furnishing the city the amount of light contracted for? If the writer's memory serves him aright, an expert investigation showed that they had failed to live up to their contract by amounts aggregating many hundreds of dollars, however, a deduction of something like eighty dollars was made from the excessive bill rendered the city.

Kind reader, did you ever think how happy a sheep must feel after his fleece has been put in the wool "bag" as the warm Summer days come and go?

Taxpayers and wagon makers know, if you don't. The writer's definition of gratitude is, A lively appreciation of what we hope to receive. INQUIRER.

Missionary Reports.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational Church held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the church parlors, to listen to the reports of the delegates to the conference of Women's Missionary Societies in Montclair on November 7-8. After the opening services the reports of the secretary, treasurer and committee on programme had been read, the delegates, Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich and Mrs. E. L. Suffern made their report and spoke of the ideas that most impressed them.

All Unite in One Thanksgiving.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held Thanksgiving Day in All Saints Church, Fanwood, by the invitation of the rector of the parish. It is expected that the church will be decorated in harvest home style. Patriotic hymns familiar to all will be sung, and the pastors of the three congregations of the village will make addresses. An offering will be made for the poor and needy. It is hoped that the church will be filled to the doors.

—Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., will give an entertainment, supper and dance in Red Men's Hall Thursday evening, Dec. 13. Frazee will play.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

Instead of the regular Friday morning talk by Superintendent Maxson, Principal Travell read an article on the value of a single vote.

Principal Travell announced that the usual Thanksgiving custom of everyone bringing something to be distributed to the needy of Plainfield, would be continued this year. Provisions or money were especially requested.

The quarterly examinations were continued today. The classes in which they occurred were the Cicero, Cæsar, Virgil, Zoology, Civil Government and Bookkeeping classes. The rest of the students were dismissed immediately after recess.

The football game between the High School and the North Plainfield Public School teams has been postponed indefinitely.

The High School boys continued their basketball practice yesterday afternoon in the new Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. After a very exciting game the regular team defeated the scrubs 18 to 11.

A game between the second team and a number of Grammar School boys was next contested in which the second won by the closest margin 8 to 5. There were a number of fouls on both sides.

NINETY-FIVE.

EARNEST YOUNG MEN.

They Give a Glad Time in Hope Chapel.

About 150 people gathered in Hope Chapel last evening to celebrate in a social and spiritual manner the first anniversary of the Young Men's League, an organization which has been a great auxiliary to the chapel.

The gathering was called to order in a few well-chosen remarks by the president, F. Wharton, after which Rev. G. K. Newell led in prayer.

The reading of the report by the secretary, A. Muir, came next. It showed that during the past year the League had been in good financial order, and how it had grown in membership; told of the several entertainments they had given, and the amusement they had afforded the young men of the West End.

Short addresses were made by several of those present, the main topic being in praise of the League.

Although no regular programme had been prepared, those who were called upon to say a few words, sing, or give a recitation, did all willingly. As was stated last evening, it is hoped that as another year rolls by the League will develop even greater benefit when they give their second anniversary.

Refreshments were served, and all departed well pleased with the Young Men's League of Hope Chapel, and wishing that long may it exist.

Lillian Blauvelt the Soloist.

The first of the Philharmonic concerts, an enterprise for which Plainfield has to thank H. O. Newman, will be given in the Casino tomorrow night, and not as some have supposed on Monday. That the concert will be a delight is evident from the following programme:

Plainfield Women Were There.

The parlor meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps at the home of President, Mrs. Angleman, in Bayonne, last evening, was a most enjoyable occasion, and those who attended were well pleased. The members of the Woman's Relief Corps present were Mrs. McVoy, Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. Dowd, Miss Angleman, Mrs. Morse, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Radin and Mrs. Woodruff. They were accompanied by Walter Walker. The party arrived home on the 12:43 train.

WALT WHITMAN'S THANKS.

Thanks in old age—thanks, ere I go,
For health, the midday sun, the impalpable air—for life, mere life:
For precious ever lingering memories (of you, my mother dear—you, father—you, brothers, sisters, friends);
For all my days—not those of peace alone—the days of war the same;
For gentle words, caresses, gifts from foreign lands;
For shelter, wine and meat: for sweet appreciation,
(Yon distant, dim, unknown—or young or old—countless, unspecified, readers belov'd,
We never met, and never shall meet, and yet our souls embrace, long, close and long);
For beings, groups, love, deeds, words, books; for colors, forms;
For all the brave, strong men—devoted, hardy men—who've forward sprung in freedom's help, all years, all lands;
For braver, stronger, more devoted men—(a special laurel, ere I go, to life's war's chosen ones,
The cannoneers of song and thought—the great artillerists—the foremost leaders, captains of the soul);
As soldiers from an ended war return'd—as traveler out of myriads, to the long procession retrospective,
Thanks—joyful thanks! A soldier's traveler's thanks.

A THANKSGIVING COMPROMISE.

BY LAURA OLIVIA BOOTHE.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

Comparatively speaking, Mr. and Mrs. Bright were a happy couple. They didn't have any too much money, but otherwise there was no reason why they shouldn't be happy. He was an expert accountant, but there were times when he had very little to do. That was why Mrs. Bright moved into a larger house where she could take boarders. At first he objected, but her argument was that Mildred must be educated. She never reproached him for not being able to give them the comforts they needed, but seemed happy that he needed her to help him along.

This state of things had been going on for several years when the serpent in the shape of a theatrical manager entered the

HER HUSBAND TUCKED HER ARM IN HIS.

Brights' paradise. Mr. Bright frequently straightened out the accounts of theatrical companies. He was upon the books of the Gaiety Opera company when the manager suggested that he go with them for a short trip to Chicago. In a week he returned. The manager of the Gaiety company had offered him $200 a month and his expenses to act as its treasurer.

"Do you mean travel around the country with a theatrical company just like any actor?" demanded Mrs. Bright.

"I suppose so," trying to avoid the surprised blue eyes.

"And leave me here alone?"

"But, Gertrude, think of all the money I can send you. Mildred can go away to school, and you needn't work yourself to death keeping boarders."

"You know I am perfectly contented to work. I would rather go down on my knees and scrub all day and keep boarders all my life than have you go away with a theatrical company."

"But, Gertrude, a man doesn't like to have a woman support him. I've never had half a chance before, and I think you unreasonable to expect me to miss this one."

Mrs. Bright didn't believe her husband would go and said little more about it just then. He didn't tell her that he had signed with the company and was to join them when he was sent for. It was on Thanksgiving eve when the telegram came. Then she tried to persuade him that going away meant striking the death-blow to their domestic happiness. What was the fact that she took boarders to losing his companionship, she argued. Finally she broke down and cried. Although he turned a deaf ear to his wife's pleadings, he pitied her. Indeed he was far from cheerful himself.

"Let's send Mildred away to school, and you rent this house furnished. Just as soon as you do you can travel with me," Mr. Bright suggested.

This proposition only slightly appeased her. In the night he wakened to find her sobbing. Taking her in his arms he consoled her by saying: "Don't cry, Gertrude, my darling. I won't go if you feel so cut up about it." But alas for the promises made by men to women in distress—he had quite forgotten it in the morning, and amid the tolling of Thanksgiving bells he went.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Bright had been gone six weeks. Mildred had been sent away to school. The boarders, with little sympathy for Mrs. Bright's apathy, were grumbling and threatening to leave.

At first her husband's letters came regularly and were full of his loneliness, his love and impatience to see her. Then she may have imagined it, but they seemed less solicitous. They certainly were less regular and shorter.

What if her husband were being weaned away from her and their domestic life? She had told him that would be the case, never believing it could be. The thought was agony. It was 8 o'clock. He was at the theater. She had a vague idea that as treasurer he went behind the scenes. Then she remembered having heard that managers and she supposed treasurers invaded the actresses' dressing rooms. There was a tightening at her heart while she wrote him that it was time she saw him. He replied that she should meet him in Chicago in two weeks and remain with him a month.

What a relief she felt! He did want to see her. All regrets were forgotten. Inclosed in his letter was a check for $100 which he told her to spend on herself.

At last the day arrived for her to start. They came from different directions, both arriving in Chicago on the same day. As was prearranged, she went to the station to meet him.

Finally she saw the train, and before she realized it the passengers were pouring out. She strained her eyes for that beloved face. Suppose he wasn't there? Just as she felt a sickening sense of disappointment she saw him.

Even in her gladness she noticed something strange about him, and the people with him were stranger still. Men and women alike wore checked ulsters, with collars turned up to their ears, and satchels thrown over their shoulders. The men were beardless, the women blonded, painted and penciled. She had come prepared for much, but she felt ashamed to be seen with them. After kissing her, her husband tucked her arm in his, and they walked out of the station.

Once alone in their room in the hotel he held out his arms, and, like a tired bird, she flew into them. He kissed her eyes, her hair and her mouth. She laughed and cried alternately. If any thoughts of the company occurred to her, she banished them. Finally she pushed him away from her, explaining, "I want to see if you have changed, George."

"How can a man change in two months?"

"You have—on the outside," speculatively.

He looked conscious. "Oh, you mean my clothes! I suppose they look rather theatrical to you, don't they?"

"Rather." She sighed, but said nothing more, although it was a shock to see him garbed in the flashy attire of the successful comedian.

"After all, what are these things—mere outward trifles," Mrs. Bright said to herself, but there were misgivings.

At 5:30 Mr. Bright suggested they go down to dinner.

"So early?" inquired his wife.

"I must be at the theater by 7," he explained.

She walked to the mirror and began brushing her hair.

"I'll go down to the dining room ahead of you, Gertie, and order," remarked Mr. Bright.

"But, George, I can't go into a strange dining room alone."

"Oh, pshaw, that's nothing, lots of women do it! I have something to attend to at the office. Just ask the elevator boy to show you to the dining room," and before she could protest he was gone.

It was only a small matter, but three months before he had been one of the most conventional of men. In fact, he had taught her to expect those attentions which women love but rarely get from their husbands, and now it all seemed changed.

He was almost through his dinner and conversing with a man across the room when she entered the dining room.

The waiter had but served her when her husband, hastily excusing himself, left her alone. She felt slighted. He seemed to have forgotten how to be courteous. At one corner at the same table were the long legged comedian and the yellow haired soprano. She recognized the soprano as the original of a picture she had found among her husband's things. On it was written, "To George Bright, with thanks for his courtesy, from Adele Rathborne." She wondered what the courtesy could be.

She tried to be interested in her dinner, but somehow she wasn't hungry. As she walked out of the dining room she felt conscious of several pairs of curious eyes, and with a breath of relief she stepped into the elevator. She met her husband coming out of their room. He had gone up stairs to change his clothes, he said.

"Won't you come over to the theater?" he asked.

"I am too tired. I will unpack my trunk, take a bath and read until you come back. Will it be long?" wistfully.

"Not very. Still I don't know; hardly before 11. Order a hot bird and a cold bottle for 11 sharp."

"A cold bottle and a hot bird! What for?"

SHE THREW HERSELF, HAT, JACKET AND ALL, ON THE BED.

"Why, to eat, you goose!"

Her husband would not be back for three hours at least, and she would be thoroughly comfortable, she thought. After slipping on a fluffy white bath gown she began taking down her hair. It was beautiful hair, as black as a raven's wing and as soft and fine as satin. As she laid the pins on the dressing table her face was a study. How strange her husband should go away and leave her! She tried to reason out what was different about him besides his clothes. All she could decide then was that she was disappointed.

Exactly at 11 she rang for a bellboy. "Bring up a hot bottle and a cold bird," she ordered.

"Mam?" exclaimed the boy.

"Oh, I mean a cold bottle and a hot bird," she corrected wearily.

When he returned with the supper, she sat down to wait. "He will be here any minute; he never kept me waiting before," she thought. A half hour passed. Twelve o'clock struck, and he hadn't come. The bird was cold and the bottle warm. Stepping out into the hall, she looked over the balustrade. A man was putting out the lights. "What could it mean?" she demanded of herself. A boy went toward her door with a note. Hastily tearing it open, she read:

MY DEAR GIRL—Am detained at the theater on important business. Go to bed. I will not be in before 2. GEORGE.

"There is no answer"—to the boy. "How dare he?"—aloud as the door closed. "It is brutal, insulting, cruel! The first time he has seen me in two months! Oh, it is too much!" And with a gesture of supreme misery she flung herself on the bed. Two hours later, when her husband came in, she had not changed her position.

"Poor little girl! Still waiting!" he said, with concern. "Why didn't you eat the supper? You haven't touched a thing!"

She made no answer, and he began to explain. With a gesture of contempt she interrupted him, "I do not wish to hear any of your excuses."

He was genuinely sorry, but he felt offended that his attempts at explanation should be treated as excuses. Thinking silence the best way to bring her to good humor, he ignored her and went to bed.

There were great, wide window seats in the room. After putting out the lights she crawled up in one of these. The fire went out, and she was conscious of being cold. The lights twinkled in the street below. A snore from the bed told her that her husband was asleep. She began to cry, at first silently, but as she thought of her husband's indifference she sobbed louder. She was really deriving a miserable sort of pleasure out of her discomfort when an especially loud sob wakened the sleeper. Jumping from the bed, he called out, "Gertrude, my poor darling, where are you?"

Another sob from the window, and she was in his arms. It was 4 o'clock, and she was utterly miserable and tired of being uncomfortable. She let him lead her to bed and in a few moments was asleep, and all her troubles forgotten.

The next morning Mrs. Bright wakened with a start. The sun was shining in the room. Slipping her hand under her pillow, she drew out her watch. It was 10 o'clock. Springing from the bed, she began to dress, when her husband asked lazily, "What on earth are you getting up for already, Gertrude?"

She ignored the previous night and replied calmly: "Already! It is 10 o'clock!"

"Oh, people connected with the profession never get up before 11 at least," turning over for another nap.

Finally, when he did not get up, she remarked, "George, I want my breakfast."

This appeal to his consideration brought out the man in him. "Of course you do, dear," he answered. "Ring the bell for the boy."

"Bring up breakfast for two and all the morning papers," Mr. Bright ordered when the boy arrived.

"What do you want with all the morning papers?" demanded his wife. "Isn't one enough?"

"Ordinarily it is, my dear, but I read them all so I won't miss any notices about the company."

"Oh!" observed Mrs. Bright tersely.

The tolling of church bells reminded her it was Sunday. "I don't suppose you ever go to church now?" she observed.

"Not very often."

After breakfast she gathered up the papers.

"Gertrude, would you like to do something for me while I am out?" Mr. Bright asked. Mrs. Bright expected to be told of missing buttons or torn buttonholes. "Hunt through those papers," he continued, "and cut out everything you find about the Gaiety company. You will find a scrapbook in my trunk to paste them in."

"Very well," she replied quietly.

When he had gone, she sat down on the floor. She scanned column after column. Then she cut and pasted.

"Nice, elevating way to spend Sunday morning," she thought.

In the afternoon they went to drive. They returned early because of the theater. During dinner he asked her if she would come to the performance.

"It is Sunday," she merely observed. "What time do you want that bottle and bird tonight?" Her face was suspiciously amiable.

He kissed her contritely as he answered. "Eleven on the minute, and it shan't wait!"

After he had gone she put on her things and went to church.

The next day and every day was much like the first. In the morning Mrs. Bright cut and pasted, in the afternoon she idled, and at night she went to the performance. The trivial things she did to kill time would be difficult to tell. She never wrote so many letters before. Then she would telegraph to Mildred and her sister, who had charge of the boarding house. She developed a fondness for Turkish baths, manicured her nails every day and curled her hair for the first time. She had tried to mend her husband's clothes, but it was not the atmosphere for practical employment. She tried to read, but gave it up. When she had nothing else to do, she bought things she didn't want.

Finally the month drew to a close. Mr. Bright was to leave Chicago the next Sunday morning, and Mrs. Bright was to start east the same afternoon. When Mrs. Bright saw the last of the train that bore away her husband and his ulstered companions, she was sick at heart. She stared after the train five minutes after it was out of sight. Then she walked back to the hotel. There was a sense of great loneliness as, with a sob, she threw herself, hat, jacket and all, on the bed.

The Century

IN 1895.

Taking advantage of the general revival of interest in the Great Emperor, The Century will print during 1895

A NEW LIFE OF

NAPOLEON,

Magnificently Illustrated.

The Century is famous for its great historical serials, and never in its history has a greater one been projected than this new "Life of Napoleon," written by Prof. William M Sloane, of Princeton, who has spent many years in preparation for his work. Thus far no biography of "the man of destiny" has appeared in either English or French that is free from rancor and attentive to the laws of historical criticism. The Century has secured it—the great all-around, complete and interesting history of the life of one of the most marvelous of men. No matter how much you already know of Napoleon, you will want to read this;—here is the concentration of all the lives and memoirs. The illustrations will be magnificent—the wealth of The Century's art department will be lavished upon them. Two members of the staff have just returned from Paris, where they have been securing all that is best of Napoleonic material. New portraits will be printed, great historical paintings reproduced, and Castaigne and other modern artists have drawn anew some of the great scenes of Napoleon's life for this history.

In addition to this there will be

A New Novel by

Marion Crawford.

The title is "Casa Braccio," and it is a romance of Italy, full of human passion and exciting episode.

A New Novel by

Mrs. Burton Harrison

will be published during the year. It is called "An Errant Wooing," and is a tale of wandering (and love) among new scenes of travel in Northern Africa and Southern Spain.

OTHER FEATURES

will be several familiar papers on "Washington in Lincoln's Time," by Noah Brooks, who was on terms of unusual intimacy with the War President; "The Cathedrals of France," by Mrs. Schuyler Van Bensselaer, with illustrations by Joseph Pennell. Many more serials will be announced later.

Rudyard Kipling

contributes his First American Story to the December number of The Century.

The Price of The Century is $4.00 a year. "No home is complete without it." Begin subscriptions with November number. Whatever other magazines you may take, you must have The Century. All agents and dealers take subscriptions, or remittances may be made directly to

Harper's Bazar

In 1895.

Elegant and exclusive designs for Out-door and In-door Toilettes, drawn from Worth models by Sandoz and Chapuis, are an important feature. These appear every week, accompanied by minute descriptions and details. Our Paris letter by Katharine de Forest, is a weekly transcript of the latest style and caprices in the mode. Under the head of New York Fashions, plain directions and full particulars are given as to shapes, fabrics, trimmings, and accessories of the costume of well-dressed women. Children's Clothing receives practical attention. A fortnightly Pattern-sheet Supplement enables readers to cut and make their own gowns. The woman who takes Harper's Bazar is prepared for every occasion in life, ceremonious, or informal, where beautiful dress is requisite.

An American Serial, Doctor Warrick's Daughter, by Rebecca Harding Davis, a strong novel of American life, partly laid in Pensylvania and partly in the far South, will occupy the last half of the year.

My Lady Nobody, an intensely exciting novel, by Maarten Maartens, author of "God's Fool," "The Greater Glory," etc., will begin the year.

Essays and Social Chats. To this department Spectator will contribute her charming papers on "What We are Doing" in New York society.

Answers to Correspondents. Questions receive the personal attention of the editor and are answered at the earliest possible date after their receipt.

Harper's Weekly

In 1895

Harper's Weekly is a pictorial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively in illustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Railway Strikes and the Chino-Japanese war, and the amount of light it was able to throw on Korea the instant attention was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources Julian Ralph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there joined by C. D. Weldon, the well-known Amer can artist, now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr. Ralph in sending to Harper's Weekly exclusive information and illustration.

During 1895 every vital question will be discussed with vigor and without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department. Portraits of the men and women who are making history, and powerful and caustic political cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly comment on the lesser doings of the day, will remain a regular department.

Fiction. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely illustrated—The Red Cockade, a stirring romance of olden days by Stanley J. Weyman, and a novel of New York, entitled The Son of His Father, by Brander Matthews—several novelettes, and many short stories by popular witers.

AN OLD ROMANCE.

"No youthful romance wormed over for middle age, I thank you," said Mrs. Nellie Hunt with decision, to her niece, Edith Daly.

They were gathering chrysanthemums at Mapleton, Mrs Hunt's pleasant homestead, where her niece from the West was visiting her.

"Why, auntie, I thought youthful romances were the best kind," said the young girl shyly. (She had one on hand herself).

"Yes, dearie, so they are at your age," laying a bright blossom againt the girl's flushed face. "You remember I said 'warmed over?'"

"Well, auntie, I don't see any objection to having it warmed over if it were all it should have been at first," Edith urged. "I'm sure mamma thinks as I do—that Major Townley is a fine man and would make you a splendid husband."

"Yes, dear, that is undoubted—she told me so herself. I think it is a conspiracy among my friends," said the elder lady, playfully.

"I don't want to be inquisitive, auntie, but oh, I would so like to know what separated you so long ago," said she suddenly.

Mrs. Hunt started a little, and then smiled.

"I'm afraid it would only spoil the romance for you," she replied, "the circumstances were so prosaic. Yet it is the little things of life that go to make up the whole. But I will tell you what you wish to know."

"Major Townley and I were schoolmates when we were young, and I cannot remember the time when we were not attached to each other. We graduated at the same time at the town academy where we got a little tincture of Latin.

"It is said that a little learning is a dangerous thing. Certainly it was in our case. After we left school we kept up our studies together. One evening we got into a discussion about a certain line of Virgil. We could not agree about the translation, and were unwise enough to argue the matter too long and too warmly. Neither would admit being in the wrong.

"The result was that unkind words were spoken, and our engagement was broken off. You must remember that we were both young—I only eighteen and he not yet twenty-one."

"Which was in the right?" asked Edith.

"I don't know, dear. I never even looked the matter up. I think we were sorry, but we would not acknowledge it.

Mrs. Hunt had been a widow for some years, and the gentleman in question had lost his wife a couple of years before, so that mutual friends, knowing of their former romance, had been, perhaps, a little too officious in their efforts to effect a reconciliation.

Three months later, one dreary December day, there was a storm very nearly akin to a blizzard raging. The air was laden with sleet that seemed armed with needles, and carried by the gale with a force and rapidity that threatened to impede locomotion. Travel was suspended and the telegraph wires were down.

On a snow-bound train in Indiana we find our friend Mrs. Hunt, who had been summoned by telegram to the bedside of her sick sister, and had run right into the teeth of the approaching storm.

Six hours ago the huge iron horse had snowbanks might have been walls of adamant separating the belated travellers from their homes. Apprehension was followed by anxiety as night settled down in the wierd, white scene.

A squad of laborers, brought into strong relief against the white background by the headlight of the engine, worked vigorously in the biting blast. The blockade had occurred near a village and through the storm the glimmering of friendly lights told of rural peace and plenty, cheering if unattainable.

But as the hours wore away even those disappeared and left the night a prey to snow and cold and sleet and howling winds. Within the car there was a growing sense of cold physically and forboding thought mentally.

The night wore away, as night will, however uncomfortable, and as old So condescended to favor the travellers with his smile, answering smiles seemed less difficult. Soon there loomed into view an ox team with a snow plough, in various directions spades were plied with vigor, and anon there arrived on the train an aroma of hot coffee, very tempting to benighted beings many miles from the home dining room.

A man of about fifty years of age, with dark hair and mustache and a singularly winning smile, was followed by a stout mulatto boy, with huge pall and loaded basket, dispensing coffee and sandwiches.

As the gentleman approached the little woman in widow's weeds he gave a little start, which, however, was unobserved by her.

As he offered the profferred refreshment she said, impulsively:

"This restores my faith in Western hospitality."

"Had you lost it, madame?" he asked, and without pausing for a reply, passed on. It was Mrs. Hunt's turn to start. That voice! Where had she heard it before? Directly memory took her back a score of years.

A New England village came to view. A cold, white moonlit evening, and she looking from a window of a rambling old farmhouse, watching a tall, slender young man as he hurried down the country road.

She watched him out of sight, thinking he might look back; he did not, and she had never spoken to him again—for he had left the village and gone West—until now; he had come back to her again out of the white drifts which had blocked her way and brought him to her.

She was called back from her reverie by the low spoken word, "Nellie!"

A quick flush suffused her face as she said: "You knew me then?"

"When I first saw you," he replied.

They talked and laughed over the dear old days; with saddened voices they spoke of griefs which had come to each of them in the long years of separation; a softened light came into their faces and the misunderstanding of the past faded out naturally, without need of explanation.

Toward night, just before the train, reinforced with another engine, pulled out, he held out his hand at parting, saying, with a smile:

"But that line in Virgil—who was right, Nellie?"

She laughed, and then sighed a little, saying:

"We were both wrong."

"But we are both right now, are we not?" he asked.

For answer she put her hand in his.—Pittsburg Telegram.

SAVED BY A GALE.

A THANKSGIVING STORY BY M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

On the night of Nov. 22, 1878, the bank of Davids & Davids at Cartersville was robbed of bonds, cash and notes of the face value of $200,000. It was a private bank in a town of 4,000 people, but the town was the center of a rich agricultural community. Nearly every farmer had money in bank or invested in bonds, and the bankers were trustees or administrators for several estates. They were brothers and both well off, and so it came about that their vaults held rich pickings for robbers.

On the morning of Nov. 23 a horse which had been rendered helpless by hard riding was found in the streets of Charlotte, a village 28 miles west of Cartersville. About midafternoon an officer who had been tracing the bank robber appeared in Charlotte and identified the horse. It was plain that the man had come that way, but it was not so plain which direction he had taken from Charlotte. A score of people turned out and scoured the country, but no trace of him could be found. At midnight, with most of the searchers camped on the highways and in the fields, still believing that the robber was hidden in the woods, snow began to fall and the wind to rise, and at daylight a gale was sweeping over the country.

UNCLE JIM SHOUTED FOR HELP.

Uncle Jim, as everybody called the old man whose real name was James White, had lived for many years in the outskirts of the village of Charlotte. He was what people call a "fated man." He married in 1860 and had just got settled in a home when the house took fire and burned down, and he lost everything. The next year his wife was killed by accident. Six months later he was badly hurt while at work. When he recovered, he enlisted as a soldier, but had only reached the front when the accidental discharge of a cannon deprived him of his right arm and most of his left hand. He had not been home two months when he was run over by a vehicle and so injured that his left leg had to come off at the knee. With his pension money he bought an acre of ground, with a poor old house and a tumble down barn on it, hoping to make his living by growing fruits and vegetables, and for a time he got along reasonably well.

Then his health gave out, his pension was stopped on the grounds that he had given a wrong date in his application, and on Thanksgiving morning, which dawned bleak and drear enough for the happiest in the village, Uncle Jim had two callers.

One was from a villager who held a mortgage on his real estate and had called to tell him that it must be foreclosed, and the other was a county official who tried to tell him in a kindly way that the matter had been talked over and it had been decided to send him to the poorhouse for the winter.

When the callers had gone their ways, Uncle Jim sat down and ate his meager breakfast and looked out of a back window upon the dreary landscape and reflected and wept. Fate had followed him for years and downed him at last. The climax had now come, and as the old man sat down to face it alone he could find but one way out of it. He would never go to the poorhouse, and he would never hobble around the country as a professional mendicant. The alternative was suicide and he would accept it. While other villagers prepared their Thanksgiving dinner or sat in the churches and listened to the sermons prepared for the day his dead body would be swinging at the end of a rope in the old barn on the back end of his lot. Yes, he would hang himself. He had not entered the barn for a month, but he knew there was a stout rope coiled on a peg out there, and the beams and braces offered better chances to secure the free end than a hook in his humble cabin. After an hour's thought Uncle Jim got up, put on his hat, looked around to bid his home farewell and started for the barn. He knew that a gale was sweeping over the country, but he did not realize its strength until clear of the house. Half way between the kitchen door and the barn a sudden gust caught him up and flung him down, and at the same instant the old barn tumbled in with a crash.

The old man got up dazed and bewildered. The fall of the barn frightened him and temporarily drove away all thoughts of suicide. He had turned to re-enter the house, when he heard faint cries for help from the debris of the barn, and in a state of great amazement he hobbled out of the wreckage to investigate. He soon discovered a man held down by beams and planks, and as he worked to release him he came across a satchel. The man had a broken leg and soon after being found became unconscious. Uncle Jim, almost helpless and very badly frightened, shouted for help, and it was an hour after the victim of the accident had been released that his identity was known, and people told the old ex-soldier that fortune had smiled on him at last.

The bank robber had not hidden in the woods. Instead of going beyond Charlotte he had secreted himself in Uncle Jim's old barn to wait for pursuit to cool and a favorable moment to steal another horse. Davids & Davids had offered a reward of $5,000 for the man and his plunder, and at noon of Thanksgiving day both were in the kitchen of the old cripple's shanty home and being well guarded by officers of the law. The burglar, who turned out to be a professional of no mean reputation, was very badly injured, and it was months before he could be tried and given his just deserts, but Thanksgiving's sun had not yet gone down when Uncle Jim had been provided with all the comforts of life and had thanked his God a score of times that out of the bitterness of poverty and the climax of misfortune had arisen a gale to prevent self murder and bring happiness and plenty in the same breath.

COTTOLENE IS MADE TO EAT

Made from clarified oil, expressed from Cotton Seed—as pure and golden as the Southern Sunshine which produces it.

For convenience in handling, there is added to this oil enough beef suet to make it a semi-solid.

The combination of these two pure natural products makes Cottolene, a shortening and cooking fat, with which in healthfulness, cleanliness, flavor and economy, nothing in the world can compare.

IMITATIONS are MADE TO SELL

To sell on the merits of the genuine. To sell by substitution; or by deception. To sell to the injury of the genuine, to the dissatisfaction of the consumer, to the detriment of the dealer, to the loss of all concerned—except the scheming counterfeiter himself.

If you wish the best food and the best health, you should insist that your cooking be done with genuine Cottolene. Refuse all counterfeits.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

is a virtuous vice. The world is better for it. It makes men ambitious—and it makes women careful of their personal appearance. It doesn't take much money to keep well-dressed now-a-days. CITY EDITION, 4 O'CLOCK.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. H. W. Marshall, is ill at her home on East Fifth street.

Judge Bartine was a distinguished visitor in Plainfield today.

Mrs. C. Frank French is visiting in Brooklyn. She will return early next week.

Max Hanson, brother-in-law of William Claasen of 319 Liberty street, is dangerously ill

Robert Clark and family of Washingtonville moved this morning to their Winter home on Manning avenue.

A salmagundi party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Messersmith last night. Peter Emmons won seven of eight games, and took first prize.

Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy and Miss May Tracy of Eighth street have gone to Bryn Mawr College to see the Freshman play, given annually to the Sophomores in return for a similar attention paid by the Sophomores, earlier in the season. Miss Mary Bushnell of Central avenue, accompanied Mr. and Miss Tracy.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff gave their second "at home" last evening at the home of Mrs. Woodruff's aunt, Mrs A. M. Gillem, 113 Duer street. The happy young couple were assisted in receiving the large number of callers by Miss Ida Mills of Elizabeth, Miss Gillem, Miss Woodruff and Miss Force of Plainfield.

The announcement of a birthday party given to Miss Mabel Maxson was a mistake. Instead, Mrs. D. B. Rogers, late of Daytona, Fla., at her home corner of Fourth street and Madison avenue, gave a luncheon in honor of her 71st birthday to about 20 of her friends. Mrs. Rachel Randolph had the distinction of being the oldest person present, being 89 years of age. Added together the ages of all who sat at the table amounted to 1,449 years.

This morning, about 4, occurred the death of Mrs. Sarah M., wife of James M. Gaskill, Prospect avenue, Dunellen, aged 77 years and 5 months. Mrs. Gaskill was an exemplary Christian wife and mother, and a member of the New Market Baptist Church, and in the faith of Christ her Saviour. She leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter to mourn her loss. The funeral services will be held from her late residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

AT REST

Rev. Dr. Joseph Stockbridge.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Rev. Dr. Joseph Stockbride, who died in Philadelphia last Friday in the 84th year of his age, took place at the residence of Mrs. D. C. Green on Park avenue, yesterday afternoon at 5, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives of decedent.

Rev. Dr. Berkley of New York read the Scripture, and Rev. Drs. Lowry and Yerkes spoke in feeling terms of the exemplary character of the departed. A quartette composed of Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. W. A. Freeman, Fred Pope and E E. Runyon sang beautiful and appropriate selections, after which the body was taken to Hillside Cemetery and placed in the family vault. Services also were held at 320 South 42d street, Philadelphia, Wednesday.

Dr. Stockbridge was senior chaplain in the United States Navy, and formerly lived on Central avenue.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. I was taken with la grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail, and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using 3 bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." For sale by L. W. Randolph, druggist.

—The stage setting at the W. C. T. U. entertainment in Music Hall last night was beautiful, and the performance very good, but the audience was small and not enthusiastic.

FIFTY-TWO DIVIDENDS.

As a general thing investors are pleased to received only two dividends a year, and if they are paid with regularity are fully satisfied. When one, however, can receive fifty-two dividends in a year upon an investment of only three dollars the matter deserves very serious attention.

The Independent of New York for forty-six years has held the first position among the great religious, literary and family weeklies of the land. It presents features for the coming year far in advance of any heretofore offered. It has the leading contributors of the world, it prints the best poetry, it has twenty-one departments, edited by specialists, devoted to Fine Arts, Science, Insurance, Finance, Biblical Research, Sunday-School, Missions, Health, etc. The Independent is particularly fitted for intelligent people, whether professional men, business men or farmers, and for their families. It costs but six cents a week and gives a great deal. A subscriber receives fifty-two dividends a year.

The subscription price of The Independent is only three dollars a year, and a sample copy will be sent to any person free by addressing The Independent, New York City.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Boehm's big bargains for tomorrow are trade-winners.

—Rogers has a great special sale of seafood tomorrow afternoon and evening.

—The great Bell Ringers entertainment takes place in Bethel Chapel tonight.

—Everyone is invited to the Christian Endeavor meeting in the First Baptist Church this evening.

—The leader at Neuman Bros. grocery for tomorrow will be three jars of strawberry jam for 50 cents, and the quality is the best, too.

—The only acceptances filed with City Clerk MacMurray up to the hour of going to press were from councilmanic candidates Ginna and Moore.

—Municipal Socialism will be discussed by Charles H. Matchitt of Brooklyn and Alderman Matthew McGuire of Paterson, in Reform Hall this evening at 8. Representatives of the political parties will be allowed to speak.

—About 56 people attended the dance of the Sixth Street Social Club in the Olympia on Sycamore street last evening, and had a thoroughly enjoyable time. Rogers furnished the music. The merry party left for home about 3 this morning.

Concerning Admission to the Festival of Nations.

Admission tickets to the Y. M. C. A. Fair appeared yesterday in the hands of the ladies who are appointed to sell them. Some misunderstanding having arisen about the season tickets the executive committee last evening made the following, viz: A season ticket selling for one dollar gives eight admissions to the Fair, whenever and by whomsoever presented. Two or more persons may be admitted at the same time on the same ticket, until the eight admissions are exhausted.

This ruling has been adopted in order to accommodate family parties who will want to see the many attractions of the Fair more than once. It is suggested also that two or more families may arrange to meet in the Supper Room for a jolly and informal supper party, and these season tickets will be a convenience for such purposes.

Foolishly Stepped from the Train.

As the 11:19 Philadelphia train was pulling in at the North Avenue Station this morning a well-dressed man arose from his seat, walked out on the platform of a rear car, and without any known reason stepped off near the Park avenue bridge.

The train was moving rather briskly, and threw him with much force to the ground. He received a few scratches, and his overcoat was considerably torn. The conductor and one of the brakemen immediately assisted him to his feet and helped him on the train. He gave his name and address as John Collins, 196 Guernsey street, Brooklyn, and claimed that he was not hurt. He came from Philadelphia.

Sweetening in His Toil.

As her eyes rested upon the patient figure of her husband her heart smote her.

"Dearest."

He started timidly, seemingly disconcerted by her unwonted manner.

"Dearest," she repeated tenderly, "those biscuits were better than mother used to make."

He was silent, but, as he finished washing the dishes and proceeded to sew a button on her bloomers, a glad smile irradiated his countenance.

IT WAS LIKE OLD TIMES.

Their Memory Came Back to "Joe" and "Daisy" After Many Years.

They boarded a Broadway car just as the theatres were out. The little woman carried her programme carefully and tenderly. She was gotten up in a style of fifteen years ago, with here and there a dash of the prevailing mode showing in her costume. Her jewelry was old fashioned, but it was most becoming to the animated face. The little tired, careworn eyes gazed at the big man beside her anxiously.

There was one other person in the party—a woman of 35 surely—but she soon lost herself in reading the glaring advertisements.

The car was not full; the few passengers were a large male majority and they were all sleepy. The little old fashioned woman looked nervously at each, and then, turning to the man, said: "Mr. Denver, do you remember the good times we used to have going to the theatres together long ago?" And into the eyes of the woman there passed a look of wistfulness intense.

"Miss Daisy, I never think of past pleasures, the present has been enough for me for the last fourteen years, ever since I went West a poor man."

There was a glimmer of loveliness in the woman's eyes as she heard this name. There was a look of intense weariness on the face of her woman companion as she continued to read over and over the injunctions to buy "Wide Open's" hooks and eyes; "Fossil's" bloom of youth and "Hirsute's" gray hair restorer, but never once did she downcast her eyes.

She was a model chaperon.

Then the Western fever got the best of Mr. Denver and he began to talk of his money, how he made it and what he should do with it.

"I am sorry you are so rich, Joe," came in meek accents from her whom he had called Miss Daisy. "You will not care to come and see us now. You will forget us."

Then Joe tugged at his mustache—he made a great pull at the stubble and began to chew the ends. "Joe" was forgetting his philosophy and was plainly disturbed. He thought with wrinkled brows for a moment, then blurted out as a bashful schoolboy might, "You don't want me to come so often, Daisy, do you?"

There was no answer, just a look into into each other's eyes, and the conducter bawled "Fifty-ninth street; all out!" On the pavement, with three transfers in his hand, Joe spied an open car bearing the legend "Amsterdam avenue."

"Let's get in this," said he.

"We ought to go up Columbus avenue," said Daisy.

"The back seat of that car!" was Joe's emphatic order, and the three piled in, and what if Joe's arm did go more than half way round the back of Miss Daisy.

She leaned back and said, "Joe, this is, indeed, like old times."

"It will be better than old times," said Joe, and he looked straight at the little old fashioned woman, and then leaned back and laughed.

The companion, she of the tireless reading of advertising signs, turned round her head from the first seat in the car and, motioning the conductor, had the car stopped. As they got out Daisy took hold of Joe's arm in a manner that spoke volumes, and Joe—well, his head was held more erect, and he had presence of mind to turn around to the demure chaperon and say:

"It's a pleasant night, isn't it?"—N. Y. Herald.

REMARKABLE CURES

Of Recent Date.

A Statement from Ex-Mayor John Corson, Esq., of Clinton, N. J.

TO THE PUBLIC:

I acknowledge with the utmost pleasure the wonderful cure which Dr. Lighthill effected in my case.

I had been a sufferer from piles, which gave me constant pain and distress, during twenty long years, attended with frequent loss of blood and with great and painful protrusion of the pile tumors and rectum whenever my bowels moved.

I tried constantly to get relief from my sufferings, but to no purpose until Mr. Bryan, a friend of mine, who had been cured by Dr. Lighthill of the same trouble, recommended him to me, and he effected a complete and radical cure in my case also, and earned my lifelong gratitude.

JOHN CORSON.

THE CASE OF MR. PETER G EYCK, OF BISSELL, HUNTERDON CO., N. J.

Dr. Lighthill Effects a Complete Cure Where Ten Physicians Had Failed.

TO THE SICK, SUFFERING AND AFFLICTED:

For many years past I have been afflicted with bleeding piles. Every movement of the bowels was attended with loss of blood and with intense pain which lasted for hours and sometimes all day. My condition was aggravated by a prolapse of the rectum, which greatly increased my suffering and sometimes gave me most agonizing pains.

So great was my distress and so bad my condition that I sold my farm, not being able to work it any longer. At one time the protruding pile tumors became so highly inflamed and swollen that they could not be replaced, and I had to go to bed, applying hot poultices for three months before I could get relief.

I had been under the treatment of ten different physicians, some of New York City, Easton, Washington and elsewhere, without any benefit whatever, and had given up my case as hopeless when, luckily for me, I heard of Dr. Lighthill's skill and success in such cases, and went to him for treatment, with the happy result that he effected a radical and permanent cure in less than four weeks's time; and I am glad to say that the entire treatment gave me neither pain nor distress.

I consider my cure perfectly wonderful, and so do all my friends and neighbors. I am confident that there is no case of piles which Dr. Lighthill cannot cure.

DOANE & EDSALL.

SHE IS A QUEEN.

A YOUNG WHITE GIRL'S STRANGE POSITION IN MUNA.

Forced to Take the Throne in a South Sea Island; She is Anxious to Escape From Her Responsibilities and Join a Lover.

In a recent issue of the Sunday World there was a remarkable story of a white girl queen who rules against her will in a South Sea Island. The story says:

The pen of that prince of modern romancers, Louis Stevenson, never wrote a more strangely interesting tale than the one brought to the World from the South Sea Island by Capt. Luttrell, of the trading bark, Helen W. Almy, which arrived the other day in San Francisco.

The Captain tells of meeting a white Queen of a race of savage black men, daughter of a white father, who was the son of an American named Young, who early in the century was cast ashore on the island of Muna.

This beautiful young woman, through her grandfather's marriage with a native has by a remarkable and probably unprecedented chain of circumstances been placed on the barbaric throne against her will, forced to fulfill the functions of a sovereign, according to native custom with Queens, kept almost constantly in confinement in the palace.

This charming white South Sea Queen is furthermore in love—in love with a handsome young Samoan chief whom she met while perfecting her English education at Apia, and whom she hopes to rejoin when she can succeed in making her escape.

The Queen in her story of her life, told to Captain and Mrs. Luttrell of the Helen W. Almy, said that about 75 years ago her grandfather was cast on the island, and the natives, who had never seen a white man, took him for a god. He married a native woman, and a son was born who married the sister of the ruling monarch.

"I am the eldest child of the son, and I was named Margaret," she said. "My grandfather in his declining years took an interest in me greater than in his own son, and he taught me the language of his youth. I showed an aptitude for study, and one day, when I was quite a big girl my grandfather took me to Apia in one of the little trading vessels that had then commenced to call at Muna at long intervals.

"They were all manned by Samoans, and my grandfather was the only white man that I ever seen, and I did not believe him when he told me that there were more white men of his kind where he came from than I could count. Apia, I thought, was a wonderful place, and, after showing me the few things of civilization there, which affected him as much as they did me, he left me in a convent, and, with a sigh, he turned from the few recollections of his youth and returned to his adopted home.

"I was a favorite with the sisters. They took a great interest in me, and I became an apt pupil. Two years ago I returned, and when I left Samoa this tortoise-shell ring was given me by a young chief, to whom, as he put it on my finger, I pledged myself to return. That was two years ago, and here I am, kept a prisoner, yet a queen. The chief came to Muna a little while ago, but they would not let him see me.

"Shortly after I came back the King died in a plague that swept over the islands, and I was chosen the ruler. My father and my grandfather tried to have some one else chosen, but the chiefs would not deviate from the custom that has for years been honored by the natives.

"It is the custom of the people of Muna not to choose the succeeding monarch from the direct lineal descent of the ruler but to take the eldest child of his or her brothers or sisters. In that way, through marriage, I became Queen of the islands. A queen has not the right to marry, and if the eldest daughter should be married the next in line is chosen.

"My people claim that a woman by marrying becomes subservient to her husband, and the appointed ruler in that case is not the ruler at all, but simply the slave of her husband, who is really the King, but has no right to hold that office. The Queen is not allowed to entertain company nor allowed herself to be seen, except by two virgins, who are appointed to keep her company.

"She is not allowed to walk outside the palace walls, and if it should be her desire to visit any part of the island two chiefs appointed by the council place a large box on the veranda before the door. The maids carry it into the palace and into it the Queen gets. The maids then carry it outside and the two chiefs sling it on a pole and carry it wherever she desires to go. Peep holes are provided in the sides of the box, through which she can look without being seen.

Ever since she has been forced upon the throne she has been looking for a chance to escape to Apia. Her father, with the assistance of the young chief from Samoa, was preparing a plan by which she could be spirited away, and some of the lumber taken down by the Almy was to be used in building a vessel that would aid them in their attempt.

Thoughts for Reflection.

Others are affected by what I am and say and do. And these others have also their sphere of influence. So that a single act of mine may spread in widening circles through a nation of humanity.—William E. Channing.

The devil never knows just what to do with the man who keeps his religion when he loses his money.—Ram's Horn.

Look full into thy spirit's self;
The world of mystery scan!
What if thy way to faith in God
Should be through faith in man?
—Bright.

It is not worth seeking the kingdom of God unless we seek it first.—Philips Brooks.

It takes a considerably more piety to make a man thankful to God for what he has done than prayerfully dependent upon God for what he would like to have him do.—C. H. Parkhurst.

'Now, this is what I'd have you learn,
The darksome world for light doth yearn.
So try to make your whole life seem
Unto the earth a bright sunbeam.
God is the Author of all light;
But you can make your life so bright
That it will help you every day,
To be, indeed, God's truant ray.
—Ferrer Martyn.

THE RHINE AND SWITZERLAND.

Mr. Ragan's Second Lecture to Be Given in Music Hall Thanksgiving Eve.

A pleasant memory to Plainfield people is H. H. Ragan's "Footprints of Washington" given in Music Hall, Nov. 5. In spite of the discomforts of wretched weather that night, the audience was large. For the second lecture", The Rhine and Switzerland", there should be a crowded house. The date is Nov 28. Thanksgiving Eve. The place is Music Hall. Of this lecture the Minneapolis Tribune says:

"An audience distinguished not only for its size but for its character as representative of the most intelligent and cultivated classes of the city, attended last evening the second lecture delivered by H. H. Ragan. The subject was "The Rhine and Switzerland", and the lecture was illustrated by a series of excellent stereopticon views of localities suggested by the topic. From Cologne the lecturer took his audience up the beautiful Rhine, glancing at its famous towns and picturesque ruins, pausing at last at Strasborg with a view of the well-known Cathedral. Beautiful representations of Lucerne and vicinity, the Lake of the Four Canons, Interlaken, Geneva and vicinity, Mt. Blanc and the Mer de Glace, the Jungfrau, and hosts of others followed each other in almost bewildering succession and elicited frequent and hearty applause. Mr. Ragan's remarks were replete with anecdotes, romantic legends and historical incident."

Tickets for the remaining two lectures will be on sale at Leggett's Pharmacy Saturday morning, at 75 cents for the course. Scholars course tickets, 50 cents. The third lecture is "The Yosemite and the Yellowstone", Dec. 8

STATESMEN AT DINNER

Big Leaders Attend the Home Club Banquet.

The Mechanic's Building in Boston Filled With Prominent Republican Leaders from All Over the Country—Addresses by Thomas B. Reed, Senator Hoar and Others.

Boston, Nov. 22. — Distinguished speakers, an immense crowd and unlimited enthusiasm over the recent republican victory made the eighth annual dinner of the Home Market club in Mechanic's building, last evening, a grand success. By 4:30 o'clock the crowd began to gather in the reception hall, which was elaborately decorated with national emblems, flags and bunting. An hour later Hon. Thomas B. Reed, escorted by President William F. Bent, of the club, led the procession of guests from the management rooms to the centre of the hall which had been prepared for a reception.

They were greeted with cheers, and ranged themselves behind the rail draped in the national colors. On Mr. Reed's right in the following order stood Gov. Frederick T. Greenhalge, Lieut.-Gov. Roger Wolcott, William S. Hon. Thomas B. Reed, Senator Geo. George F. Hoar, of Worcester; Gen. Russell A. Alger, of Michigan; Gen. William E. Draper, of Hopedale; Congressman-elect L. D. Apsley, of Hudson; Gov.-elect Charles A. Busiel, of New Hampshire; Congressman Joseph H. Walker, of Worcester, and ex-Gov. J. Q. A. Brackett. For nearly an hour the members of the club filed steadily past them and before dinner they had shaken hands with about 1,000 people.

At 6:30 a bugle call gave the signal for the procession to dinner, which was served in the grand hall. The walls of the great auditorium were hung from floor to ceiling with patriotic decorations and inscriptions of all kinds. Prominent over the platform reserved for spectators and the orchestra were the banners displaying the club mottoes and a huge crayon portrait of ex-Speaker Reed, and between them was a canvass bearing the inscription: "Republican plurality in 26 states, 1,329,562; Republican majority in next House, 134; more Republican congressmen from the South than Democrats from the North."

Plates are laid for about 1,300. The guests tables were placed upon a raised platform on the east side of the room. President Bent occupied the centre of the head table, and on his right were Hon. Thomas B. Reed, Senator Geo. F. Hoar, Rev. Edward E. Hale, Gen. Russell A. Alger, Hon. Wm. E. Crapo. On his left were Gov. F. T. Greenhalge, Wm. S. Parkerson, Hon. Jos. H. Walker, Governor-elect Charles A. Busial of New Hampshire, Gen. Wm. F. Draper, and Hon. L. D. Apsley. Others at the guests tables were ex-Gov. Morgan G. Bulkley of Hartford, Conn.; John M. Hall of New Haven and Royal C. Taft of Providence and President G. Stanley Hall of Clark university. Rev. Edward E. Hale asked grace.
